
LADIES' DOUBLE-BREASTED COAT.

All Seams Allowed.

The ever popular short coat is again in vogue and we show one of the latest models. The straight fronts are double breasted and are scarcely fitted to the figure; the back is in two pieces and is only slightly fitted; an under-arm gore completes the coat, which is 30 inches long. The long rolling revers and notched collar make a stylish finish. The sleeves are plain coat style, finished by a cuff. This coat may be made of cheviot, serge, broadcloth or any similar material. The pattern (5153) is cut in sizes 32 to 42 inches bust. To make the coat in medium size will require 2⅝ yards of material 44 inches wide, or 2¼ yards 54 inches wide.

The above pattern can be obtained by sending 10 cents to the office of this paper.

AWAKENING OF SCIENCE

TO THE VALUE OF FRUIT

What is "FRUIT-A-TIVES"?

Medical men are just beginning to realize the possibilities of fruit in curing disease. Its action on the liver, kidneys and skin is wonderful. Yet fruit in its raw state is impracticable in treating disease because of the minute quantity of the active or curative principle contained in fruit juice.

A physician in Ottawa, after years of patient work, discovered a process, whereby the medicinal or bitter principle of fruit juice is increased in quantity and thus a more active and more valuable substance is obtained.

"Fruit-a-tives" is the only medicine in the world made of fruit.

Hundreds of prominent people in every section of the Dominion owe their good health to "Fruit-a-tives." Hundreds more are daily becoming stronger and better by taking them. "Fruit-a-tives" is daily proving its inestimable value as a natural cure in all cases of Constipation, Biliousness, Torpid Liver, Backache and Headache, Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Kidney and Skin Troubles.

50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, or trial box, 25c. Sold by all dealers, or sent, postpaid, on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

HE LECTURED ON THE NEEDS OF SOUTH AMERICA

Mr. Robert Long, of Brandon, University, was at Murray street church last evening and spoke at the meeting of the Young People's Society.

Mr. Long's subject was one with which he is well-acquainted. He vividly described the country of South America, told the story of its earliest history, down to the present day described the people, their spiritual needs and the efforts put forth to evangelize them. The lecture was illustrated by means of a blackboard.

He also touched on the mineral wealth of the country.

A large number of people attended the lecture and the chairman was Mr. Bruce Quinn.

LISTER GOT LIQUOR AT REQUEST OF EMPLOYER

Did Not Drink However—The Magistrate Quoted Scripture--Judgment Reserved.

The limit was reached in a black-list case at the police court this morning.

Instead of there being a procurer for the prohibited one, the boot was upon the other foot, and it was a case of the lister procuring whiskey for another, not served by Inspector Stewart. His offence came under the "possession" part of the clause in the Liquor Act.

It all happened like this. The regular charge was read to the lister, with the date fixed at Saturday, September 10. He pleaded guilty.

On being called to the witness box to explain where he got the liquor, he stated that, while doing some carpenter work for an employer on George street, the latter complained of not feeling well. He (witness) was then asked to go out and purchase some whiskey, but his reply was that he was on the list.

"Well, I'm not," replied the other.

Then witness said he would go out and see what he could do. Arriving at Kingan's corner, and waiting for about ten minutes he met a friend from down near Garden Hill, who did not know of his being posted. Fifty cents parted company and the friend purchased a flask of whiskey. On the return to his work witness said the flask was still sealed and remained in that condition up to the time his employer placed it in a drawer, with the remark that he would use it when in need.

In answer to His Worship witness said that he had not taken any of the liquor and that he had not had a drink since last Good Friday, and that was in Lindsay.

Isn't there something in the Bible which says, "Cursed is he that putteth the cup to his neighbor's lips?" queried the Magistrate. No answer came from the witness, but the Chief thought that there was.

"You couldn't drink it yourself, but you would get it for some other poor devil," was the magesterial comment.

Judgment was reserved.

A NIGHT OF KNIGHTS

Three Members Given a Fitting Farewell by the Knights of Phythias

The members of Marathon Lodge, No. 39, Knights of Pythias, assembled at the dining parlours of the Peterborough Lunch Co., last evening to bid farewell to Messrs. W. W. Armstrong, Thos. Savigny and Melleville Halladay, who leave this week for the west. The occasion was a pleasant one for all, songs music, speeches and a tasty repast, making a splendid programme. Smith's orchestra provided excellent music, and Mr. F. R Clarke gave several banjo selections, including his ever welcome "Watermelon" song.

Toasts were proposed and responded to in a happy manner, and the singing of "For they are jolly good fellows," "Auld Lang Syne" and the National anthem, brought the affair to a close.

Messrs. McDonald and Jacobi, are deserving of great credit for the manner in which they prepared the spread and which was up to their past reputation for excellence.

BY THE WAY

What makes us growl and kick and fume,
And at the cat hurl mother's broom?
That cold.

What sticks to us and will not leave,
And makes our friends each for us grieve?
That cold.

What makes us pull on winter clothes
And makes us think of frosts and snows?
That cold.

What makes us sneeze with all our might,
And brings the dope box out each night?
That cold.

HARDWARE CONVENTION AND EXHIBITION AT PETERBOROUGH

Arrangements Well Under Way for Sixth Annual Convention of Ontario Retail Hardware and Stove Dealers Association—About Two-thirds of the Space in Large Armouries Already Allotted to Exhibitors.

(From "Hardware and Metal.")

Plans for the big convention to be held by the Ontario Retail Hardware and Stove Dealers' Association at Peterborough, February 21 to 24, 1911, are nearing completion, and it is is expected that a meeting of the executive committee will be held next month to complete the arrangements and deal with other business before the Association.

The fact that this is to be the first convention held east of Toronto, is exciting a great deal of interest amongst hardware men in Eastern Ontario, and it is expected that there will be a greatly increased attendance from eastern and northern Ontario, while the members from western Ontario will be on hand in equally large numbers as in previous years as Peterborough is only a short distance east of Toronto.

As in previous years the convention will cover four days. The present plan is to devote every afternoon from 1.30 to 4.30 to convention business, the exhibition hall being closed during these hours. In the mornings the convention committees will meet.

The exhibition will probably be open each morning from 9 to 12 and from 4.30 to 6 each afternoon. Besides this the exhibition will likely be open Tuesday and Wednesday evenings, the first night to hardware men only with a special program of friendship creating fun, and the second night, a band concert being provided and the general public admitted, while the retailers are in an educational "Question Box" session.

Certain hours will also be named each morning when Peterborough hardware manufacturers will be "at home" to visiting retailers.

On Thursday night exhibitors and retailers will fraternize again in a social event, which it is expected will excel in real enjoyment all previous gatherings.

The accompanying plan shows that the exhibition is to be on a much larger scale than attempted at previous conventions. The securing of the big armouries, 80x176 feet in size, made it possible to allow larger spaces to exhibitors, and booths at Peterborough will all have a frontage of twelve feet and a depth of ten feet, making 120 square feet, compared with 68 square feet at London, the prices charged being practically the same, and that exhibitors at previous conventions appreciate the opportunity of bringing their new goods before the retailers at the convention is shown by the advance booking so far made in response to circular letters sent out in August:

THE EXHIBITION.

Metallic Roofing Co., Steel Trough and Machine Co., Boeckh Brothers, Limited, Cummer-Dowswell, Limited, International Varnish Company, Canada Paint Company, S. F. Bowser Mfg. Company, Dunlop Tire & Rubber Goods Co., D. Maxwell & Sons, Standard Paint Co., Moffat Stove Co., Gendron Mfg. Co., Supreme Heating Co., Pittsburg Perfect Fence Co., Lewis Bros., Limited, Clare Bros., Limited, Onward Mfg. Co., Gillette Safety Razor Co., Lufkin Rule Co., McClary Mfg. Co., D. Moore Co., Brantford Roofing Co., Tobin Arms Manufacturing Co., Carborundum Co., Goldie & McCullough, Imperial Varnish Co., Oneida Community, Under option—Northern Aluminum Co., Brandram-Henderson, Limited, James Robertson Co., Rapid Tool Co., F. W. Bird & Son.

The above shows over two-thirds of the booths already booked over five months in advance of the convention dates. The two large spaces at the end are being reserved for special exhibits to be made of "Made in Peterborough" hardware and "Philadelphia made Hardware," plans being nearly completed for a composite display to be made by five Philadelphia firms, North Bros., Disston Saw Co., Enterprise Mfg. Co., Fayette R. Plumb Co., and the Miller Lock Co., and for a similar display by Peterborough hardware manufacturers.

At St. Mary's, N. B., a Scott Act inspector seized 240 bottles and two kegs of liquor at a "temperance" hotel.

A Levis despatch states that Mr. C. M. Colmay, of New York, is considering the erection of a million dollar hotel there, probably in Shaw's Park.

BARN DESTROYED

Fire at Residence of Dr. Rogers in Monaghan Just Outside City Limits—Loss of Barn and Contents Placed at $1600—Electaic Wiiing Given as Cause.

At three o'clock this morning the fire brigade received a call to the home of Dr. Rogers, the veterinary surgeon, who lives on the gravel road, Charlotte street, a short distance over the boundary line between the city and North Monaghan township.

A barn belonging to the doctor took fire, the electric wiring being responsible, it is said, and was burned to the ground with all its contents.

Dr. Rogers had recently built a house on the property and is only occupying two rooms of it. The most of his household furniture was in the barn and this and two buggies, harness, veterinary instruments and other contents were destroyed.

The loss is estimated at $1,600 partially covered by insurance.

Epworth League Meeting

The Epworth League of Charlotte street Methodist church had their weekly meeting last night.

Mr. R. F. Doweny, the president, occupied the chair. Miss E. Higgins read a paper which was instructive and interesting. The league is growing and much more enthusiasm and interest seems to be manifested than formerly.

CANOE COMPANY GET THE STRIP OF KING ST. LAND

At the meeting of the Manufacturers' Committee last night the committee agreed to recommend to the City Council that the Peterborough Canoe Company get the strip of land 21 ft. by 98 ft. they asked for on King street in return for 165 feet by 50 feet from the company along the water front south of the company's property.

When the committee met last night and the matter was presented, there was a misunderstanding as to the extent of the city's concession and Ald. Bradburn thought the city was geting enough in return.

Those present were chairman, Ald. Gillespie; Ald. Turner, Bradburn, Duffus, and Morgan, and Industrial Commissioner Duggan and Mr. H. C. Rogers, of the Peterborough Canoe Company.

Attention

All members of Queen Alexandra Circle No. 136, A. O. F., are earnestly requested to be present to-morrow (Wednesday) evening at eight o'clock sharp. As matters of importance is to be discussed. E. J. Martin, Sec.

O'K

Extra Mild, Remember

Many people would drink ale, in preference to all other malt beverages, if ale did not make them bilious.

This O'K brew is brewed especially for those people. It is extra mild and extra light, and lets you enjoy the creamy deliciousness of real old English ale without the heaviness and excessive bitterness. In easily—opened seal stoppered bottles. No broken cork or tinfoil in the glass.

A HANDICAP TO OVERCOME

The Peterborough Fair was a big success. It made a good impression in spite of the ramshackle main building. Everybody seemed pleased with the fair.

But in pictures, stage settings and fall fairs, the environment is lent to quite an extent by the surroundings.

The proper atmosphere cannot be obtained from such delapidated buildings as at present grace or rather disgrace—the Peterborough Fair grounds? And besides that the present buildings are absolutely inadequate and unsuitable in every way.

It's pretty nearly up to the city to buy the present grounds or some grounds suitable and the fair society will put up buildings that will be a credit to the exhibition and in keeping with the importance of Peterborough's annual fall fair.

It's an issue that deserves immediate consideration. The fair directors are willing and ready.

What about the town?

BRIEF AND BREEZY

The hockey enthusiast is asking question these days. He wants to know what is what. The fact of these being several outside men roaming about the town gives color to the street corner talk regarding the prospects for a real live team. The time is not ripe for correct dope to be given out. Meanwhile let's hope for the beat.

Isn't it pretty near time to call a meeting on behalf of the proposed Junior O.R.F.U. team or is it the intention of the intention of stumbling along any old way as long as fourteen men can be placed on the team to represent Peterborough when the time arrives for a game.

Peterborough, according to Buck Irving, of Guelph, will be interested in a professional league this season and Belleville is mentioned as a side partner. It looks good, but you can bet that the kind of pro. hockey that has been played up west for the last couple of years, wouldn't take a little bit around these parts. Call it off.

The kids made a good showing at the Brock street rink last season, and what is necessary is a little encouragement. Two of them, Lane, unfortunately removed elsewhere, but there are others. The fact of a player being on the "outside" shouldn't debar him from getting a decent invitation to come out and show what he can do. And he shouldn't pass unnoticed until half the season is over.

WHEN CONNIE MACK TOOK HIS TURN WITH BIG MIT

They tell a lot of good stories about stuff Connie Mack pulled off when he used to catch behind the bat and talked opponents into going out.

Mack was with Pittsburg, and Gumbert was pitching. Chicago, with only one just needed to tie and two out, had the bases filled and Anson up. The old man was the terror of all pitchers in that day, and never landed harder on a ball than when a bit meant runs.

But Anson was the perfect judge of a ball, and never would aim at bad ones. The ball at which he swung had to cut the plate. On this occasion Gumbert was a trifle wild, and the first two balls were wide. The third cut the plate and Anse let it go. The next was another strike, but still the old man waited. He could hit just as well with two strikes as none, and anyway a base on balls would tie the score.

It was a critical situation, for if Gumbert put the next ball over it was a cinch that the old man would land on it hard, and perhaps break up the game. The catcher of to-day would have waited like a sheep and let the pitcher work out his own salvation, but the backstops of that day were resourceful.

Mack thought it was up to him, so he ran down to Gumbert and gave him the injunction to pitch the next ball just a little wide of the plate, and then stay in position to pitch, waiting for a signal from Mack.

Gumbert curved one about eight inches outside the plate, and Anson never moved to hit at it.

"Good strike, Ad!" yelled Connie, as he grabbed off his mask and started for the bench, as though the side were out.

"Strike!" shouted Anson, wheeling half around to the umpire to protest.

"I didn't say so," remarked the arbirtator. "Three balls."

Before Anson could turn back to position Mack gave the sign to Gumbert. Ad. sent the ball straight over the heart. Nothing in Mack's attitude told that he was expecting the pitch. He didn't have his mask on he wasn't in position to catch, for he had been standing three feet away from the plate to distact Anson's attention.

Anson never got his bat off his shoulder.

"Three strikes," yelled the umpire. Connie just managed to bat the ball down and touch the home plate, thus retiring the man who was on third.

Anson kicked and stormed for 20 minutes, but there was no reversing the decision, for he had never been out of the box, time wasn't called and Gumbert had been in a legal position to pitch when the ball was delivered.

TWO BIG STARS ON TOBOGGAN

The bell is almost ringing for the two greatest pitchers in the National League. Christy Mathewson and Mordecai Brown are nearly done, so far as the speed, the fooling curves and the general mechanical execution are concerned. Other pitchers, handicapped as they are now, would have been shunted to the soup before this time, but these two held on and win game after game because they have think tanks.

Both Brown and Matty are being slammed ever so often now. Even their wizard-like control is not what is used to be. When the records are made out of 1910 they will show that more hits per game were made off Brown and Matty than ever before in their previous career, and that they issued more bases on balls These two old foxes are worth a dozen youngsters even now, and the way they win is the grandest display of actual pitching art that the game can show.

MARSH WANTS TO RUN HORSE

Says the Calgary Herald:—John D. Marsh, the Canadian Marathon runner left the city yesterday. Before going he stated to the Herald that he was willing to bet $200 that he can beat any horse in Calgary in a 26 mile race, providing the rules which governed the Shrubb race with a horse are strictly kept. He is willing to enter a free-for-all race with five or six horses under the same conditions, but he will not put up money on the result of such a race.

Marsh has several races booked for the next two weeks, but if a race can be arranged with a horse he will return.

WE WANT MORE BOYS

The paper the people value is the paper delivered at the home. Of course large numbers of The DAILY REVIEW are sold on the street, but the home delivery is what counts.

We want more boys for more routes. We want more boys to handle their own routes, just as plenty of boys are now doing.

Let us have names of boys willing to carry routes, and to sell papers. One cent per copy to the boy—who sells for 2 cents, or for 10 cents per week.

ACTION FOR $3000 DAMAGES

Writ Against Bishop Construction Co. on Behalf of Michael Sullivan—Physician Appointed to Examine Plaintiff as to Extent of Injuries Received in Accident at Dam

Sullivan v. Bishop Construction Co.—T. N. Phelan for defendant, M. L. Gordon for plaintiff. Motion by defendant for a physical examination of plaintiff. Order made for examination by Dr. McNulty at a time and place to be appointed by him.—Toronto World.

Michael Sullivan fell off the new waterworks dam last April, and it is asserted he was knocked off by being hit with a form that was being lifted from the pier. He was carried down the river through the logs and ice, it is claimed, for about a mile.

On behalf of Sullivan Messrs. O'Connell and Gordon have issued a writ for $3,000 against the Bishop Construction Company. Robinette, Godfrey and Phelan, of Toronto, have been retained by the Bishop Construction Company, and at their request the physician was appointed to ascertain the extent of Sullivan's injuries.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

The Review does not hold itself responsible for opinions expressed by its correspondents

To the Editor of the Review.

Sir,—As an old citizen, I want to lay my tribute of praise at the feet of Rev. Mr. Trumpour for his courageous and, God knows, timely censure of lax parents and their young. The officers of the law say that immorality is the curse of Canada. In Peterborough it is awful, and in many cases parents are deceived, and let their children persuade them to let them out. The animal instincts of the young are too strong, unless there is a good bringing up behind them, to control them. One half of this community should be going on all fours.

Yours,
A CHILD-LOVER.

HIS DEATH IS DEEPLY REGRETTED

The following, which is taken from the Kingston Whig, relates to the death of Dr. J. M. McCarter, a brother of Mrs. Vincent Eastwood, city, and who passed away after an operation for appendicitis;—

Those who personally knew the late Dr. J. M. McCarter, of Verona, speak in glowing terms of the work he did as physician to the people of this district. He was a hard worker, and some of his sleep was often obtained in his carriage as his horse plodded homeward in the grey morning light after wearing, all-night work. The people he attended mourn his death deeply, for he was good to them all. His remains have been laid at rest in the cemetery at his old home at Almonte.

In the September number of the "London Teacher" an account of the trip is given, and it shows how thoroughly the party enjoyed their trip. The originator, Mr. Thos. Gautrey, has written to the European Traffic Manager of the Grand Trunk System, through whom the trip was arranged, expressing gratification at the admirable way in which all the arrangements were carried out and intimating that the party was most enthusiastic, and that the trip, which covered the most attractive portions of Quebec and and Ontario, will certainly be repeated next year.

ROD AND GUN FOR SEPTEMBER

With the opening of the bird shooting season the September number, of Rod and Gun in Canada, published by W. J. Taylor, Limited, Woodstock, Ont., gives a number of delightful stories dealing with days amongst the ducks, geese, woodcock and prairie chickens—experience which will cause many a thrill to sportsmen reading them. Numbers will be able to duplicate, in remembrance, many of these published experiences, and in this way live over again red letter times in their histories. Variety marks this production, every lover of the outdoors, whatever his particular taste, receiving attention. The story of two young moose, one of a pet raccoon, the efforts of an amateur to trap a bear, particulars of the American bison, the Alpine Club's last camp and some dog lore show the manner in which the magazine covers the wide variety of outdoor life. The verses in this number are excellent, and the Bohemian ring of "Fishin's Good" will find an echo with many even of the most staid. "My Little Irishman," with his wonderful story of the monster that got away, while the "Evening Chorus" is equally good. The issue should be found with every shooting party this season.

BRITISH PARTIES MAY SOON BE AT IT AGAIN

Expected Failure of Veto Negotiations May Bring About Another Contest at Beginning of the Year, According to Expert Opinion.

London, Sept. 19.—An eminent Unionist organizer has expressed the conviction that general election will be held in January, in consequence of the failure of the veto conference. His main ground for this opinion is the effect of the coronation pageantry in stimulating loyalty. The Republican movement in England has collapsed, since Queen Victoria's jubilee, and King Edward's coronation pageants have popularized monarchy and impaired the resources of democracy, and this tendency will be strengthened by the spectacles and revels of next year.

So well is this truth understood on the Liberal side that the best organizers agree that the veto question must be taken up early in the year or dropped altogether. If the Government attempts to continue the present armistice and to defer an appeal to the country until the autumn of next year it will find itself without an issue of paramount importance, and will be overwhelmed by the swelling tide of loyal enthusiasm for the crown and the Empire. This is the opinion of an expert politician, and it is confirmed by evidences of the anxiety of both Nationalist and Labor leaders to hasten the elections. The departure of John Redmond and three associates for American and Canadian bases of supplies indicates an urgent necessity for filling the war chest and being prepared for a crisis at the end of the year.

The labor leaders at the Trade Union Congress have been even more explicit in forecasting a general election in January and a close coalition with Radicalism for legalizing political levies. The pressure of the extremists is increasing for fighting out the constitutional issue instead of compromising it by secret bargaining, and the free traders have persuaded themselves that it will be easier to beat the tariff reformers before than after the coronation. The Unionists are expecting a failure of the conference, and have already begun to canvass in the small towns, where vans are covered with posters, heavily stocked with leaflets and equipped with gramophones and magic lanterns.

Lord Rosebery is expected to play an important part in the political crisis, since his resolutions dealing with the reform of the Lords will have precedence over the veto resolutions. If the conference breaks down, the veto resolutions cannot be blocked, and if the Prime Minister favors an early appeal to the country he may obtain in this way a release from an intolerable situation, in which Messrs O'Connor and Shackleton are constantly threatening the Ministry with desertion and defeat unless their demands are complied with.

THE CAUSE OF IRELAND'S FREEDOM

Queenstown, Sept. 19.—John E. Redmond, leader of the Irish Nationalist; Joseph Devlin, M.P., secretary of the United Irish League; T. P. O'Connor, and Daniel Boyle, M.P., for North Mayo, arrived here last evening on the steamer Lusitania.

Mr. Redmond in a brief speech said that he was going to tell the Americans that the cause of Irish freedom was tied up inseparably with the wellbeing and freedom of the democracy of Great Britain. The struggle to-day, he added, was between the whole mass of democratic forces in Ireland, Scotland, Wales and Ireland, combined against the last relic of feudalism. The moment the power of the House of Lords disappeared the road to home rule, he declared, was absolutely clear.

WILL CONSIDER GOVERNORSHIP

Saratoga, N.Y., Sept. 19.—Mayor Gaynor's first word since he took office as to his own attitude toward the movement now on foot to nominate him for governor, was received here Saturday. In a letter to Frank Gick, secretary of the Saratoga County Democratic convention, who had informed him of the resolution adopted by the convention, endorsing him for the Democratic nomination for governor, and pledging him the support of Saratoga County, the mayor replied:

"I thank you exceedingly for your letter, and the resolution which you enclose. I shall have to carefully consider the matter in the near future.

"I am now quite restored to my usual strength, but have not yet fully recovered my voice."

PROPOSES AN AEROPLANE TOUR

Boston, Sept. 19.—A tour by an aeroplane from Harvard aviation grounds on the Atlantic coast to the Los Angeles driving park on the Pacific coast is formally proposed in a letter just sent to the National Council of the Aero Club of America by Charles J. Glidden.

The tentative plan for the contest, as outlined by Mr. Glidden, embraces a daily flight of approximately 200 miles, with stops at Saratoga, N.Y., Syracuse, N.Y., Buffalo, N.Y., Akron Ohio, Fort St. Louis, Kansas City, Mo., Hutchinson, Kas., Syracuse, Kas., Sante Fe, N.M., Fort Apache, Ariz., Phoenix, Ariz., Yuma, Ariz., Los Angeles, Cal.

OTTAWA CADETS CUT LOOSE AT "EX"

Ottawa, Sept. 19.—There was a small-sized riot at the close of the Ottawa Exhibition, when the members of the Capital Cadets and some of the 43rd Regiment, who had been engaged for the grand stand shows, cut loose in the midway, upset many shows, and did damage all round, until the police could be got together to suppress the affair. Now the exhibition authorities blame the local cadets, and will take the damage out of their pay, and hereafter forbid them from the fair grounds.

Turkey and Roumania Allied.

Paris, Sept. 19.—The Temps confirms the report that Turkey and Roumania have entered into a military alliance, and say that the convention indicates Turkey's rapprochement with the powers in the triple alliance.

Tweed, Sept. 19.—The trial of Robt. Parker, over 70 years old, charged with the murder of Wm. Masters, also in his 70's, will begin in Tweed on Oct. 3.

THREW HERSELF FROM WINDOW

New York, Sept. 19.—Hurling aside her two daughters and her husband, who tried to save her, Mrs. Margaret Schunk, forty-nine years old, killed herself Saturday by diving from the sixth floor window of her home, at No. 1247 avenue A. The woman had been suffering from melancholia for some time. Every bone in her body was broken by the fall.

Mother and Daughter Arrested.

Belleville, Sept. 19.—Mrs. Mary Desislets, aged 37 years, and her daughter, Vivian Desislets, aged 19 years, are in the county jail here awaiting preliminary trial, on a charge of concealing the body of a dead child. It is alleged that the daughter is the mother of the child, and that its body was unlawfully disposed of.

Nationals Have Majority of 13.

Pretoria, Sept. 19.—The final position of the parties in the South African elections is: Nationalists 67, Unionists 37, Laborites 4, Independents 13.

FLIRTING IS NOT A CAUSE

Seattle Sept. 17.—"The act of flirting in the abstract, without evidence of consequent damaging complications, is not sufficient for a divorce," said Judge Wilson R. Gray to-day from the bench in the suit of Dr. Leon B. Collier against his wife, Myrtle N. Collier.

"Flirting is a very common and often harmless amusement and we must have something further in the way of testimony before a decree can be granted. We must have details and specifications of some overt act that will furnish a cause for divorce under the law. A prominent New York clergyman has said that there is no harm in flirting."

ENTIRE BLOCK DESTROYED

Grand Valley, Sept. 19.—At an early hour yesterday, a fire broke out and entirely destroyed the McIntyre block. The building was occupied by J. McIntyre & Sons, flour and feed; Geo. Lawson, shoes; Weather Insurance head office, and George Davey, gents' furnishing. Very little of the contents were saved.

The origin of the fire is unknown. The village and township clerk's office was situated in the building, and unfortunately nearly all of the village and township records are lost.

GRANADA TO MAKE AMENDS

Managua, Nicaragua, Sept. 19.—The new municipality of Granada, which was established May 15, has passed an act ordering that the bodies of the Americans, Cannon and Grace, executed by order of ex-President Zelaya, be exhumed for burial at Granada with national honors. A marble monument will be erected to them. If the families desire, the bodies will be sent to the United States.

A decree was published Saturday outlining the program for the government of the country until the constituent assembly formulates the new constitution. The program includes a complete change in the present judiciary, and provides for the security of property and individuals, the inviolability of the domicile and epistolary and telegraphic correspondence, freedom of worship and speeches, freedom of the press and trial by jury, and the abolition of capital punishment and torture.

LABORITES CONCLUDE

Last Work of Trades' Congress Done in a Hurry.

Port Arthur, Sept. 19.—The twenty-sixth session of the Trades and Labor Congress closed here Saturday noon with a brief address by Fraternal Delegate J. J. Manning.

Many resolutions were rushed through the last hour, among which were to seek an increased tariff on cut stone, a provincial or federal pension for those totally blind, for the appointment of more fair wage officers by the Dominion Government; an amendment to the compensation for workmen's injuries act; to seek to amend the railways act to prevent railway engineers, firemen, etc., from working too long hours. An act for compulsory voting was laid on the table. The one against military manoeuvres and displays on Labor Day was carried. The resolution for establishing a monthly magazine by the congress was referred to the executive for a report at the next convention. The adoption of a universal design for a union label by the various international unions was voted down. Unions were enjoined to support the labor press.

The two resolutions that took most of the morning were the ones to appoint a permanent organizer for Western Canada, and the Socialist resolution. With the former the name of W. R. Trotter was coupled. The delegates from the east protested against the appointment of an organizer for any particular section, and charged the western delegates with a desire to create a job for their man. The resolution was voted down, and the appointment was left with the executive council. If a man is appointed it will likely be President Glockling.

The discussion on the Socialist resolution, although brief, was exceedingly hot. Pettipiece of Vancouver led the radicals, while Landers of Hamilton, as chairman of the committee on law, led the anti's. On division the vote stood for the collective ownership of the means of wealth and production 30; against, 60.

The ways and means committee allowed Secretary Draper $800, Fraternal Delegate Pettipiece $400, Solicitor O'Donoghue $200, and the Moral Reform Association of Ontario $50.

LATE TICKS FROM WIRES

The tariff question is likely to cause a split in the British Unionist party.

A petition asking for the dissolution of the Sugar Trust will be filed at New York this week.

Thirteen balloons left Indianapolis Saturday afternoon in an endurance and distance test.

Tony Toris, Italian, shot and seriously wounded Cresenzo Anitone, at Cobourg. He was arrested.

F. W. Nichol of Westminster Township was kicked by a colt a week ago and died from his injuries.

Two workmen named Hodgens and Bathgate were killed by an explosion in the C.N.R. construction camp near Calgary.

Bishop DuMoulin, Bishop Farthing and Bishop Worrell spoke at the closing meeting of the Brotherhood of St. Andrew at Montreal.

H. Brown was killed and A. Savelberg seriously injured by their rig being struck by a train at a crossing near Hitchcock, Sask.

James Dykeman, aged 30, fell from a third-storey window in Toronto, and was instantly killed. He had been sleeping close to the open window.

Ald. Robertson, police inspector, of Winnipeg, and formerly a well-known resident of Toronto, shot and killed himself in a train from Ottawa, nearing Toronto.

The purchase of the Northern Gravel road by the Oxford committee was completed before the county solicitor saw the papers, and it turns out that the title is worthless.

"I am profoundly touched by the testimonials of respect and veneration shown me as the representative of his holiness the Pope," says Cardinal Vannutelli, in a letter of thanks to Mayor Guerin of Montreal.

The Montreal Herald (Liberal) in an open letter to Premier Whitney, tells him that he has "fallen into a trap set for your feet by the Conservative party of England, which is trying to make the world believe that true imperialism is wrapped within its tariff reform policy."

JEALOUSY THE CAUSE OF MURDER

Vancouver, Sept. 19.—Jealousy between two rival trappers was responsible for a cold-blooded murder in the north, news of which reached Vancouver Saturday, when Constable Minty of Rock Bay brought down Donald MacDonald, a Salmon River rancher and trapper, and the body of his neighbor, Frank Savage, shot by MacDonald Sept. 14, during a quarrel.

A charge was laid against McDonald for having beaver skins illegally in his possession, and Savage was sworn in as special constable to execute a search warrant at the trapper's home. MacDonald resisted execution, and Savage called in the aid of another rancher, P. Cushman. As the two special officers came out of MacDonald's hut, after making their search, the latter shot Savage through the breast, killing him instantly. He gave himself up to the provincial police.

AUTOMATIC WARSHIP INVENTED

Berlin, Sept. 19.—A new type of warship, invented by Messrs. Wirth, Beck & Nuremburg, is causing a great sensation in naval stations. All the movements of the new vessels can be controlled from a land station many miles distant.

During recent experiments at Dutzendteich, a 30-foot boat was made to go forward, backward, turn in a circle and fire mines and torpedoes, all its operations, being directed from the shore. Nobody was on board the boat.

Representatives of foreign naval powers are negotiating with the inventors. Experts predict a great future for the new craft.

Three Babes Died In Incubator.

Louisville, Ky., Sept. 19.—As a result of the death of three babies on exhibition in an incubator at the state fair here, Dr. Snyder of Pittsburg, Pa., was arrested Saturday night at Jeffersonville, Ind. His wife was also arrested as an accessory.

Sir Henry Pellatt's Own.

Portsmouth, Sept. 19.—(C. A. P. Cable.)—Sir Henry Pellatt on Saturday presented colors to a troop of Baden Powell boy scouts, and afterwards presented colors to a troop of girl scouts, named Sir Henry Pellatt's Own troop.

PROTECTION FOR CREDIT MEN

Winnipeg, Sept. 19.—An important business meeting of the Canadian Credit Men's Association, at the sixth monthly dinner in the Royal Alexandra Hotel, resulted in the adoption of a resolution to start a $10,000 fund for the prosecution of unscrupulous persons. President H. H. [illegible]ott occupied the chair, supported by R. R. Wilson, vice-president, and the board of governors.

A feature of the meeting was the desire expressed for a higher state of efficiency in mercantile agency service, and a determination to obtain more up to date and reliable information by means of harmonious working together on behalf of the members and agencies supplying the information.

CHICAGO SECOND CITY IN THE U.S.

Washington, Sept. 19.—The population of Chicago as announced by the United States census bureau Saturday is 2,185,283, an increase of 486,708, or 28.7 per cent., as compared with 1,698,575 in 1900.

This announcement leaves Chicago ranking in population as the second city of the United States, and the fourth in the world. Chicago has almost doubled its population since 1890, when the figures were 1,099,850.

AMAZING INTOLERANCE

Winnipeg, Sept. 19.—Rev. Dr. Hanson of Belfast, Ireland, at the evening Anglican Alliance meeting in the Walker Theatre here yesterday afternoon, said that the intolerance expressed in the recent speech delivered by the Roman Catholic archbishop of Montreal was amazing in this enlightened century. Rev. Dr. Hanson's remarks were loudly applauded by those present.

Fatal Car Collision.

Union City, Ind., Sept. 19.—Two men were killed and thirteen persons injured when two traction cars met in a head-on collision here Saturday night.

C.P.R. Traffic.

Montreal, Sept. 19.—C.P.R. traffic for the week ended Sept. 14, 1910, was $2,195,000. For the same week last year, it was $1,836,000.

STONED NON-UNION BOARDING HOUSE

Columbus, Ohio, Sept. 19.—The injunction granted two weeks ago upon the application of the Columbus Railway & Light Co. against the striking carmen, was continued indefinitely on Saturday, upon the argument of counsel for both the company and the men. The police were informed that Miles Hysell's boarding-house, where a number of non-union street carmen board, was bombarded with stones early Saturday morning. One brick fell on a bed in which a young women was sleeping.

Held Up by Armed Men.

Portage la Prairie, Man., Sept. 19.—Four armed men held up the night clerk of the Empire Cafe at 2.30 yesterday morning, throwing him into the street, after taking seventy-five cents off him, and followed this by breaking into the till, where they secured $1.50, and then making good their escape.

Cree Indians Consumptive.

Ottawa, Sept. 19.—W. J. McLean of Winnipeg, who has just returned from James Bay, reports that considerable consumption prevails among the Cree Indians, whom he was paying off. They are fairly prosperous, however. He found the waters of the Abitibi River higher than for sixteen years.

CAPTAIN LARSEN NAVIGATES WHIRLPOOL IN MOTOR BOAT

Intrepid Cleveland Man Runs His Little Craft Through Seething Waters of Niagara Gorge and is Finally Upset in Devil's Pool.

Niagara Falls, Ont., Sept. 19.—It was not five minutes after he had told a party of newspaper men that he would not make the trip that Capt. Klaus Larsen of Cleveland, Ohio, suddenly changed his mind yesterday afternoon and successfully negotiated the five miles of water between the Maid of the Mist landing and a point a mile and a half above Lewiston.

Larsen's motor boat, the Ferro, became disabled about an hour before he was scheduled to make the trip. He tied up at the Maid of the Mist landing on the Canadian side and attempted to get his engine going, without success. About 3 o'clock he announced that he would not make the trip, and thousands were disappointed. Then an expert worked at the engine for over an hour before he got it running. Larsen had given it to much oil.

When Larsen found that his boat would run, he suddenly announced that he would make the trip. Pulling off his coat and handing his wallet to someone ashore, he started his little craft out into midstream. He stood erect in the cockpit, with the canvas covering tied securely about his body, just above the waist, leaving his arms free outside the boat. This prevented his getting at his engine, and the machinery again stood still just after the Ferro had successfully passed the whirlpool.

Larsen kept in midstream until he neared the head of the rapids. Then he went in towards the Canadian shore. Most of the rocks in the rapids are near the American shore.

As the Ferro struck the rapids, great waves tossed her clear of the water with as much ease as they would have buffeted about a huge cork. The little craft battled manfully with the seething, tossing waters, at times rearing up and taking a leap, after the manner of a racing auto on an ordinary country road, only more pronounced in her movements into the air. Ten feet leaps into space were taken so many times that Larsen was unable to enumerate them after the trip.

In passing the whirlpool, which was reached in less than three minutes, the Ferro went in towards the American shore, cutting across the eastern corner of the pool. She experienced no difficulty in getting past this treacherous piece of water, but had hardly negotiated the feat when the engine stopped.

"It's the luckiest thing that happened on the trip, that the engine held out until I got past the pool. If it hadn't, I would not be here now, I think," said Larsen after he left the boat.

Three minutes after the engine stopped the Ferro struck a big wave that completely overturned the craft in just about the Devil's Pool. She righted herself with no difficulty. It was here that her intrepid navigator injured his leg. He said it all happened so quickly that he had no time to think.

From now on Larsen was the plaything of the mighty river, unable to hold the course, the boat swinging from one side to another. After getting through the Devil's Hole, the Ferro swung toward the rocks on the American side of the river, about a mile and a half above Lewiston, rolled over one boulder and went fast between two others. There Larsen stayed for five minutes, forty feet from shore, working desperately to release the craft. Larsen finally liberated her by working the rudder from side to side, was hit by a comber and sent careening toward the middle.

At the bend, with the Lewiston bridge in sight, the boat drifted toward the American side again, and was then caught in the shore eddy. The Ferro grounded again, this time near enough to shore to be caught by Roy Rockwell of this city, who waded into the water and caught a rope thrown by Larsen.

Larsen wanted to continue the trip, but, having accomplished the worst part of the journey, he was persuaded to board a trolley to Lewiston, setting the boat adrift. She drifted down to Lewiston and was picked up by a fishing boat at five twenty. It was four forty-five when Larsen started on the trip. Only a scratch on the back of his right hand and an injured leg was sustained by Larsen. He was all smiles after he got over his chagrin at the stopping of his engine.

CRAZY WITH $2,000 IN POCKETS

Lamar, Colo., Sept. 17.—With four painful wounds on his left arm, self-inflicted with a watch crystal, a man claiming to be Peter Simonhoff, 231 Broadway, Los Angeles, is held here pending a mental examination. The man was found wandering on the prairie near Granada. After he had been brought to Lamar he slashed the artery in his left arm with a crystal, which he had removed from his watch, supposedly with intent to end his life.

The man to-day asked permission to telegraph to Madeline Daniels in Los Angeles. The woman replied immediately. Neither message was made public.

Simonhoff at first gave his name as W. A. Cruso. He claims to be of old Polish nobility. He gave his age as 40. He is well dressed and bears every evidence of refinement. In his pockets was found over $2,000 in money.

FIRE CHIEF SENDS REPORT

Fire Chief Howard has completed the report of his visit to the Fire Chief's Convention at Syracuse and forwarded it to the Fire, Water and Light Committee.

The report should make interesting reading.

A new jail farm is shortly to be established some ten miles out of Toronto by the civic authorities.

HAD TO HAVE THEIR SMOKES

Paris, Sept. 19.—The smokers' strike is petering out. When the Minister of Finance raised tobacco prices three months ago he expected an additional monthly profit of $300,000. The first month showed a deficit of that amount. The second month showed a deficit of $180,000.

By the third month the smokers had used up all the stores they had laid in before the advance in prices. Others got tired of smoking the cheaper brands of cigars and cigarettes and an attempt to substitute the pipe for cigars came to nothing.

Those who had diminished or abandoned smoking weakened in their resolution and the month of August shows an increase of $200,000.

PRACTICALLY COMPLETED

Montreal, Sept. 19.—Hon. George Graham, Minister of Railways and Canals, came to the city on Saturday in connection with the coming transfer of the section of the Transcontinental from Superior Junction to Winnipeg. J. D. McArthur, the contractor, was also here, although very little was done, owing to the absence of Mr. Hays in Chicago.

The Minister said, however, that the section, except the completion of a few stations, had practically been completed, and that the company dedesired to take over the road as early as possible, as they wanted to get all the grain possible over the railway.

Hon. Mr. Graham was recently over this part of the Transcontinental and he pronounces it a very superior piece of railway.

COULDN'T PAY THE FINE AND HAD TO GO TO JAIL

Wm. Kelly puts most of his time in the woods. Occasionally he comes to town and last spring, to protect him from the liquids behind the bar, his name was placed on the prohibited list.

Saturday, while on a visit here, he managed to procure liquor and the result was a berth at the police station.

This morning he pleaded guilty to procuring, and the never-failing fine of $10 was imposed, the same to be paid forthwith.

William didn't pay, and had to go to jail.

ABUSE NOT ARGUMENT

Our faithful correspondent, Pro Bono Publico, has sent us his daily letter. It is hot stuff. We aim to be live members of the human race, but we are not printing the Eye Opener or Police Gazette, and consequently the letter cannot appear. Pro Bono Publico should remember that abuse is not argument.

CREMATION

The Halifax Herald and a Philadelphia paper are agitating against burial at sea. That is a worthy object. However, what difference does it make whether a shark or a worm does the trick. Cremation is by far the most sensible method in disposing of the dead. We cremate our friends and if we wish we can put the ashes in a rose jar and have them ever near us. Besides, when one is cremated he is certainly not buried alive. Cremation is rapidly meeting with popular favor in all the large centres of the world.

OVER-STRAINED

The other day a railway watchman at one of the dangerous level crossings in this city was killed by by a passing engine. The evidence adduced at the inquest showed that the victim had been on duty twenty-one hours at a stretch. As a result he was not in a fit condition, either physically or mentally, to protect the public using the crossing, or even to look after himself. The jury has strongly censured the railway for permitting such an abuse.

One must have a holiday once in a while, but no amount of spasmodic holidaying will ever make up for incessant long hours. The best plan is to make one's work recreation, and then the hours slip by and dinner is here before we are aware, and supper comes and we are surprised that the bell has sounded or the whistle blown. If one does not like the work he or she had better get into something that is enjoyable. We can never be a success at anything that is drudgery. Harmsworth, the editor of the London Daily Mail and thirty other publications, gives his employees one holiday a week besides the annual holidays. All employers cannot be Harmsworths in this age of strenuous competition, but all employers can give the occasional and unexpected holiday with pay. This makes the tie stronger between master and man, this makes the worker take more heart in his work.

The continuous grind does not get the best results. The day off, the care free hours, makes us all take heart again and go at our work with a better taste in our mouth, a clearer eye, a brighter brain and firmer grip. The town on a holiday, the nation of a holiday is usually a disaster to many more than it helps. The holiday alone is the holiday that counts.

TIMELY SERMON

Rev. Mr. Trumpour's sermon was worth while on Sunday night. He preached about the here and now. It had a live ring about it. We know that the Good Old Book is true, but we believe that more sermons on this present year of our Lord, 1910, are needed. If the Bible says that Jonah was swallowed by the whale, we take it as read; if it says the children of Israel crossed the Red Sea dry shod, we take that also, not doubting. Rev. Mr. Webb said yesterday morning that he pitied a man who refused to believe in miracles. So do we, and we will continue to believe in miracles so long as the miracle of our daily bread remains unanswered. What makes the wheat grow? Now, back to Mr. Trumpour and his address. He believed in the mother and father being a mother and father, not only in name, but in deed. Usually the old man comes home from work and sends the children to bed, because they are noisy, or lets them run the streets to get rid of them. He wonders how it is that Tom has learned to smoke. Tom learned on the corner. She wonders how it is that Mary went astray. Mary went astray after the sun went down, out in the park or up some side street, where it is nice and dark. Open the eyes of your children, dad; open the eyes of your girl, mother, before it is too late.

ERRORS

Beverly, Mass., Sept. 15. — On this, the fifty-third anniversary of President Taft's birthday, this message came from King George of England;

Balmoral, Sept. 15, 1910.
"The President of the U. S., Washington.
"I wish to offer you my hearty con- this afternoon, falling nine feet onto your birth. — (Signed.) George. R.I."
Mr. Taft replied;
"I thank your Majesty sincerely for your cordial message to-day."

This is from the Guelph Herald, We print it exactly as it appeared, not to show that it it a typographical error, but to show how easily mistakes can be made on the best conducted sheets. The Guelph Herald is one of the most carefully edited papers in Canada. So is the Hamilton Spectator, but a short while ago the police court report got mixed up with an account of a local concert and we were gravely informed that Miss ——— sang and was fined $10 and costs or 30 days. Later in the account a wrestling match figured, when the chairman was sent to the mat and pinned squarely by a toe hold.

Every sheet makes mistakes. The Toronto Star reached us with a cut upside down on its front page the other day. Accidents will happen in the best of regulated families and mistakes will occur in the best regulated newspapers.

MISTAKEN IDEAS

St. John, N.B., Sept. 17.—Mayor Fink yesterday cancelled the moving picture license of R. J. Armstrong, who proposes to show the Jeffries-Johnson fight pictures in his rink here to-night. Armstrong is going to make a test case of it.

Now, what is the sense of this. Let the people see the pictures and they will go away and forget all about it. This free advertising will do more to boost fight talk than having the pictures shown and done with it. What makes a smutty book sell? Condemnation in press and pulpit.

What makes a crowded theatre, the pasting over of the pictures on the bill boards. Eddie Foy's show was condenned in Ottawa. People were turned away. There is nothing that makes us want to see a thing or do a thing half so badly as to be told that we cannot.

PUBLIC OPINION MOVING AGAINST LAURIER

Those supporters of the Government who bury their heads ostrich-like in the sand, and declare that there is no danger of the present administration being swept from power just because they are unable to see that danger, should read the lesson taught by the recent elections in the State of Maine. That state, which should by rights belong to Canada, was strongly Republican for thirty years. It had a long line of Republican governors, and the man it sent to the legislature supported that party. But the blow fell when the Maine Republicans were least expecting it. Quietly and calmly the Democrats of Maine perfected their organization, put their platform clearly and convincingly before the people, and the elections just ended have swept them into power in that state. There were no big issues. The people of Maine simply made up their minds that the Republicans had been in power long enough and that too much prosperity was making that party careless of the public weal. The Democrats went went to the people of the state charging that the Republican regime had been one of wanton extravagance. And they won.

What happened in Maine is bound to happen in Canada when the opportunity comes for the people to render judgment on the carnival of graft and extravagance which has been running riot under the Laurier regime. Public opinion has already set in strongly against Laurierism. Good, honest government is desired, and that cannot be obtained from this moribund administration, which is catching at every straw to save itself from destruction. And when the time comes the Conservative party has in Mr. R. L. Borden a leader who will give to the country what it deserves—a business-like administration. The cry is sometimes heard that there are not enough men of ability in the Conservative party to form a government capable of carrying on the affairs of the Dominion. That was said when Whitney was hammering at the gates of Ontario, and "the heaven born geniuses" who made up the Ross government held up their hands in pious horror of the future. What Sir James Whitney has given to Ontario in the way of honest and capable government Mr. Borden will give to the Dominion as a whole when he comes into his birthright. And the little Canadians, with their heads in the sand will learn the lesson which they refuse to grasp now.

MAGNIFICENT HER RUINS

"To church, to church, the parson cries, and everybody goes."
The older ones to close their eyes the young to eye their clothes."

But what about the rag tag and bob tail all aboard for hell!

What of the numerous entertainments and the lost souls? What of the socials and the booze fighters, the teas and the ragged children and wayward women.

Magnificent even in her ruins, she sits, the church universal.

She does not need more money. She She has abundance. She does not rechinery. It is over organized. Its aids, its auxiliaries, its societies are legion.

Neither does it stand in need of an educated pulpit. The M.A.'s, the B. A.'s, the B.D.'s and the D.D.'s are tumbling over each other.

The church awaits a few Christians of the early ages.

The church wants men and women with the spirit of He who said, "Neither do I condemn thee—go and sin no more."

Big churches, fine salaries, soft pews, fancy music, plenty of socials and suppers; these things are well enough but a few fully consecrated men and women in a community will do more lasting good then them all.

Magnificent in her ruins the church sits watching for the power again.

Magnificent in her ruins she sits, the church universal.

Behold the myriad spires pointing mutely toward the sky.

Erected to the Unknown God.

See the great churches, listen to the ponderous note of the bell, hear the tramp of pedestrians, of the men, of the women and children. They go in, the door is closed. They are in the house of this unknown God.

Listen to the music stealing from the organ loft a breath from paradise. But heaven is not here.

Behold the fashions. See the latest gowns, the newest creation in millinery. Who would be bold enough to come out in frayed garments?

See there is a movement in the aisles, for an acknowledged leader of society is coming in. With her dresses rustling with proper sound, she comes to meet the unknown God, the creator of heaven and earth.

The minister preaches. Does he feel the impulse, is he in touch with this unknown God or does he repeat mere platitudes? Too often, yes.

Magnificent in her ruins the church sits disconsolate, the Bible is open, but who can interpret? She has heard the voices echoing down the ages, "All power is given to you." But tradition, fashion, pomp, ceremony and love of ease has bound her so that few can claim the promise.

The Salvation Army were the latest organization to receive this power, but even the Army is feeling the fetter of respectability. It does not go down to lift up as it once did. Here and there we see flashing across the sky, men who have received this power to whom it does not mean the unknown God. Here and there the great heart of the world throbs kin to the need of humanity, a humanity hungry and dissatisfied.

But magnificent in her ruins sits the church universal waiting to know God.

MAN AND THE HEN

There is, for instance, the produce of old mother hen. She works year in and year out, but doesn't write articles for the newspapers nor compile statistics. The egg product is, nevertheless, worth more in dollars every twelve months than is the entire wheat crop of British North America. Then, again, there is the item of butter. We have statistics of the amount of butter shipped from Canada to foreign countries, but we hear precious little regarding the thousands of tons produced every year that go into local consumption. The housewife, like the hen, produces the goods without any great amount of noise, and markets her product in the most convenient city or town without the statistician knowing much about it.—Saturday Night.

Our friend "The Colonel," once raised hens, hence this front page man for Saturday Night speaks with authority. The whistle on the Canadian General Electric works makes a terrible din and so does some of the machinery. The hen goes away into the corner and does her work and the Hen and Rooster Company of America turn out a product worth more in value each year than the entire value of the Gigantic American Steel Trust. She has a brief cackle after the programme, that's all, she doesn't cackle usually till she does the deed and that's the principle difference between a hen and a man.

Dr. Forbes Winslow has just stirred London by announcing that the whole world will soon be insane.

The Real Bargains Go to Those Who Read the Ads

Ninety-nine per cent. of the real bargains in the stores go to those who read the store advertisements.

The other one per cent. go to those who casually drop on the bargains in the rush of shopping.

If you can't afford to be one of the "one-chance-in a hundred" people, read the store ads. and learn of the bargains straightway.

And as 99 per cent. of the bargain getters are ad. readers, so 99 per cent. of the real bargain givers are advertisers. When you read all the advertised bargains, you know about all the bargains in town that are really worth while.

The Round-Up

A Romance of Arizona

Novelized From Edmund Day's Melodrama

By JOHN MURRAY and MILLS MILLER

Copyright, 1908, by G. W. Dillingham Co.

"You've got to go back where you come from, Dick," sternly answered the ranchman. "If ever you loved my daughter, now's your chance to prove it. She must never know you're livin'"—

"But"—

"It's a whole lot I'm askin' of you, Dick," continued Allen. "But if you love her, as I think you do, it may be a drop of comfort in your heart to know that by doin' this great thing fer her you'll be makin' her life better an' happier."

"I do love her," cried Dick passionately, "but there must be some reason. Tell me."

Allen held up his hand to warn Dick to be silent. He beckoned him to follow him. Slowly he led him to the door and, partly opening it, motioned him to listen.

"Forasmuch as John Payson and Echo Allen have consented together in holy wedlock," were the words that fell upon his ears.

As the doomed man stands motionless before his judges and hears his death sentence read without a tremor, ofttimes thinking of some trifle, so Dick stood for a moment. At first he did not fully realize what it all meant. Then the full depth of his betrayal flooded him. "What?" he cried. "Payson!" Allen held him back.

"Not if I have to kill you."

Again the minister's voice fell upon their ears, repeating the solemn words: "And have declared the same before God and in the presence of these witnesses, I pronounce them husband and wife. What God hath joined together let no man put asunder."

Dick, shaken and hurt, slowly sank to his knees, covering his face with his hands. A dry sob shook his frame. Here was the end of all his hopes, here the sad reward for years of toil and waiting.

"Now you know why you can't stay here," said Allen, his tones full of pity.

"Now I know."

Dick staggered to his feet and started blindly away from the house.

"Dick," cried Allen in a broken voice, "forgive me. She's my child! She loves him now!"

The betrayed friend took his hand without looking at him. In vain he tried to hide his deep emotion. "I know," he faltered. "I'll never trouble her. I'll go away never to return."

"Where'll you go?" asked Allen.

"Back where I came from—back into the desert, into the land of dead things. Goodby!"

As he wrung the ranchman's hand and turned to walk out of the life of his old comrades and the woman he loved he heard the minister repeat: "The blessing of the Almighty Father rest upon and abide with you now and forevermore. Amen."

"Evermore. Amen!" faltered Dick, bidding a last mute farewell to Allen.

The old ranchman watched him quietly as he mounted his horse and rode down the trail.

His reverie was interrupted by the bursts of laughter of the wedding guests and the cries of Fresno: "Kiss the bride, Slim! Kiss the bride!"

CHAPTER X.

FIVE weeks had passed since the marriage of Echo and Jack. On her return from the honeymoon in the little hunting cabin in the Tortilla range the young wife set to work, and already great changes had been made in the ranch house on the Sweetwater. Rooms were repapered and painted. The big center room was altered into a cozy living room. On the long, low window, giving an outlook on fields of alfalfa, corn and the silver ribbons of the irrigation ditches, dainty muslin curtains now hung. Potted geraniums filled the sill, and in the unused fireplace Echo had placed a jar of ferns. A clock ticking on the mantelpiece added to the cheerfulness and hominess of the house. On the walls horns of mountain sheep and antlers of antelope and deer alternated with the mounted heads of puma and buffalo. Through the open window one caught a glimpse of the arms of a windmill and the outbuildings of the home ranch. Navajo blankets were scattered over the floors and seats.

Echo had taken the souvenirs of the hunt and trail which Jack had collected and, with a woman's touch of refinement, had used them for decorative effects. She had in truth made the room her very own. The grace and charm of her personality were stamped upon the environment.

The men of the ranch fairly worshiped Echo. Sending to Kansas City, they purchased a piano for her as a birthday gift. On the morning when the wagon brought it over from Florence station little work was done about the place. The instrument had been unpacked and placed in the living room in Echo's absence. Mrs. Allen, Polly and Jim rode over to be present at the presentation. The donors gathered in the living room to admire the gift, which shone bravely under the energetic polishing of Mrs. Allen.

"That's an elegant instrument," was her observation as she flicked an imaginary speck of dust from the case.

Polly opened the lid, saying, "Just what Echo wanted."

Jim cocked his head as if he were examining a now pinto pony.

"Sent all the way up to Kansas City fer it, eh?"

"That's right, Uncle Jim!" chorused the punchers.

"Now the room's complete," announced Polly. "Echo's made a big change around here." The group gravely followed Polly's approving glances.

"That she has," assented Mrs. Allen. "Looked like a barn when Jack was a bachelor. This certainly is the finest kind of a birthday present you all could have thought of."

"Josephine 'll cry in a minute, boys," chuckled Allen.

"You hesh up!" snapped his wife, glaring at the grinning ranchman.

Sagebrush poured oil on the roughening waters by changing the conversation. Speaking as if making a dare, he challenged, "What I want to know is, is there anybody here present as can rassle a tune out of that there box?"

No one came forward.

"Ain't there none of you boys that can play on a pianny?" he demanded.

"I've played on the big square one down at the Lone Star," gravely piped up Show Low.

"What did you play?" asked the inquisitive Polly.

"Poker," answered Show Low seriously, his face showing no trace of humor.

"Poker!" Polly repeated, in disgust.

"That's all they ever plays on it," explained Show Low indignantly.

Polly grew impatient. This presentation was a serious affair and not to be turned into an audience for the exploitation of Show Low's adventures. Moreover, she did not like to be used even indirectly as a target for funmaking, although she delighted in making some one else a feeder for her ideas of fun.

Fresno modestly announced he was something of a musical artist.

"I 'low I can shake a tune out of that," he declared.

"Let's hear you," cried Polly, rather doubtful of Fresno's ability.

"Step up, perfesser," cried Allen heartily, slapping him on the back.

Fresno grinned and solemnly rolled up his sleeves. His comrades eyed his every move closely. He spat on his hands, approached the piano and glared fiercely at the keyboard.

"My ma had one of them there things when I was a yearlin'," he observed.

Fresno spun the seat of his piano stool until it almost twirled off the screw. His actions created the greatest interest, especially to Parenthesis, who peered under the seat to see the wheels go round. Fresno threw his leg over the seat as if mounting a horse.

"Well, boys, what'll you have?" he asked, glancing from one to the other in imitation of the manner of his friend, the pianist in the Tucson honkytonk, on a lively evening.

"The usual poison," absently answered Show Low.

Sagebrush struck him in the breast with the back of his hand. "Shut up," he growled.

Turning to Fresno, he said, "Give us the—er—'The Maiden's Prayer.'"

Fresno whisked about so quickly that he almost lost his balance. Gazing at the petitioner in blank amazement, he shouted, "The what?"

Sagebrush blushed under his tan. In a most apologetic voice he said, "Well, that's the first tune my sister learned to play, an' she played it continuous—which is why I left home."

"I'd sure like to oblige you, but maidens' prayers ain't in my repetory," explained the mollified musician.

Fresno raised his finger uncertainly over the keyboard, searching for a key from which to make a start. The group watched him expectantly. As he struck a note each member of his audience jumped back in surprise at the sound. Fresno scratched his head and gingerly fingered another key. After several false starts, backing and filling over the keyboard, he began to pick out with one finger the air "The Suwanee River."

"That's it. Now we're started," he cried exultantly.

His overconfidence led him to strike a false note.

"Excuse me," he apologized. "Got the copper on the wrong chip."

Once more he essayed playing the old melody, but became hopelessly confused.

"Darn the tune!" he mumbled.

Sagebrush, ever ready to cheer up the failing courage of a performer, chirruped, "Shuffle 'em up ag'in an' begin a new deal."

Fresno spat on his hands and ruffled his hair like a musical genius. Again he sought the rhythm among the keys. He tried to whistle the air. That device failed him.

"Will you all whistle that tune? I'm forgettin' it," was his plaintive request.

"Sure! Let her go, boys!" cried Sagebrush.

Falteringly, with many stops and sudden starts, they tried to accompany Fresno's halting pursuit over the keyboard after the tune that was dodging about in his mind. All at once the player struck his gait and introduced a variation on the bass notes.

"That ain't in it!" shouted Show Low indignantly.

"Shut up!" bellowed Sagebrush.

With both hands hammering the keys indiscriminately, Fresno made a noisy if not artistic finish and whirled about on the stool, to be greeted by hearty applause.

"Well, I reckon that's goin' some!" he boasted when the hand clapping subsided, bowing low to Polly and Mrs. Allen.

"Goin'?" laughed Polly. "Limpin' is what I call it. If you don't learn to switch off you'll get a callous on that one finger of yourn." Fresno looked at that member dubiously.

"That's it. Now we're started," he cried exultantly.

"Ain't music civilizin'?" suggested Show Low to Jim Allen.

"You bet!" the ranchman agreed. "Take a pianny an' enough Winchesters an' you can civilize the hull of China."

"Fresno could kill more with his pianny play than his gun play," suggested Show Low.

Mrs. Allen bethought herself that there was a lot of work to be done in preparation for the party. Even if everything was ready the dear old soul would find something to do or worry about.

"Come, now, clear out of here, the hull kit an' b'ilin' of you!" she ordered.

The men hastily crowded out on the piazza.

"Take that packin' case out of sight if you mean this pianny to be a surprise to Echo. She'll be trottin' back here in no time," she added.

Fresno had lingered to assure Jim: "This here birthday's goin' to be a success. Would you like another selection?" he eagerly asked.

"Not unless you wash your finger!" snapped Mrs. Allen, busy polishing the keys Fresno had struck. "You left a grease spot on every key you've touched," she explained.

Fresno held up his finger for Allen's inspection. "I've been greasin' the wagon," was his explanation.

"Get out with the rest of them!" she commanded. "I've got enough to do to look after that cake." Mrs. Allen darted into the kitchen. Jim slowly filled his pipe and hunted up the most comfortable chair. After two or three trials he found one to suit him and sank back, with a sign of content.

FASCINATING HAIR

Women Who Use Parisian Sage Have It and Keep It.

You never saw a beautiful woman who didn't have beautiful hair. The charm of a beautiful woman lies in her hair.

Many women do not realize the attractions they possess because they do not give proper attention to the hair.

The women of Paris are famed for their beauty, not because their facial features are superior to those of other women, but because they know how to keep young by supplying vigor, lustre and strength to the hair.

Up to three years ago Parisian Sage could hardly be obtained in Canada, but now this delightful hair restorer can be had in every town in Canada. Wm. Madill, Peterborough, sells it for 50 cents a large bottle, and he guarantees it to grow beautiful, luxiriant hair; to turn dull, lifeless hair into lustrous hair; to stop falling hair; to stop itching of the scalp. Understand Wm. Madill will give you your money back if it fails. Made only in Canada by Giroux Mfg. Co., Fort Erie, Ont. The girl with the Auburn hair is on every bottle.

CHILD'S APRON.

All Seams Allowed.

The one-piece idea is found in almost everything, and we have it in the apron we show, and a very practical style it is in a garment of this kind; it is so simple and convenient, for both adjusting and laundering. The single piece has the opening under the arms, where the seams are buttoned together. It is, of course, necessary to see that the material selected is wide enough to allow this cut without piecing, but if it is not a short seam at the sides will not even show if it is pressed flat. This apron may be made of any wash material, but gingham, percale and calico are the best, and the edges may be bound with cotton braid, which comes in all colors. The pattern (5130) is cut in 5 sizes—2 to 10 years. To make the medium size requires 1⅝ yards of material 36 inches wide.

The above pattern can be obtained by sending 10 cents to the office of this paper.

HOME THRICE VISITED BY DEATH SINCE JUNE

To see three of their little ones carried from the home to the grave within a few months, has been the trying experience of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Feeley, 271 Romaine street.

In the month of June, when Mamie, the seven-year-old daughter, was crossing the G. T. R. track at the corner of Park and Wescott streets, she was struck by the engine of the Port Hope train and killed.

A few weeks later a young child passed away, and the death of an infant child, which occurred on Saturday, makes the third bereavement.

HARVEST THANKSGIVING SERVICES WHICH THE S. A. WILL SHORTLY HOLD

The Harvest Thanksgiving Services in connection with the Salvation Army, will be held on Saturday, Sunday and Monday, Sept. 24, 25, and 26, in the Temple, Simcoe st. The hall will be tastefully decorated with grain, flowers, fruit, etc., and appropriate music will be rendered by the silver band, the songsters, and the children. Public cordially invited.

In connection with the services, the annual appeal is being made to the friends and sympathizers of the Army, for Thank-Offerings in aid of special funds established in Canada for the benefit of officers during illness, bereavement, or in times of special need. In this country there are about 1000 men and women who have given up their secular callings, (and in many cases lucrative positions) and who without any guarantee of salary are devoting their lives to the work of uplifting and helping fallen mankind. Out of the mere pittance received by hundreds of these officers, it is impossible to make any provision for the day of adversity, and therefore they are dependant to a very great degree upon the assistance of the friends who, while unable to give their lives, are anxious to share in this work by giving of their means.

On Monday evening, a Harvest Sale will be held in the Temple, the proceeds to be devoted to the above object, and donations of groceries, vegetables, fruit, household requisites, and saleable goods of all kinds, will be gratefully accepted. The hall will be open next Saturday and Monday to receive donations; or a phone message (Phone 440) or a post card addressed to Ensign Merrett, 204 Margaret Ave., will ensure attention. We bespeak a hearty response to this appeal by the generous people of Peterborough.

PROVED FINE ENTERTAINERS

Those who absented themselves from the concert at the Y.M.C.A. hall Saturday evening missed hearing one of the best organizations of musicians that has performed before a Peterborough audience for a long time. They were the colored Jubilee Singers of Cleveland, Ohio, eight in number, four ladies and four gentlemen.

Possessing splendid resonant voices, with the additional beauty of blending well, for two hours they delighted their hearers with a varied program of quartettes, duets, trios, octettes, consisting of plantation medleys, camp meeting songs, etc.

They are under the leadership of Mr. Thomas

The Olympian string quartette also played well together.

On Sunday afternoon at the opening meeting for men, held in the Y.M.C.A. parlor, they again assisted materially in the success of the occasion, being very liberal in their songs.

Rev. Mr. Riddiford was the speaker at the meeting and spoke on "Amplified Amputation." Mr. Riddiford, in a strong, plain address, showed the derivation and meaning of his topic.

When we cast out sin from our hearts, we let in Christ, thus amplifying ourselves and our hearts by amputating or casting off sin. He pleaded with his audience to rid themselves of whatever sin they were the slave of, and thus become more like Christ.

The rapidly increasing interest in the Sunday morning Bible class at the "Y" is a source of congratulation and credit to the officers. On Sunday morning at 9.30, twenty-one men were in attendance, making a record for this class.

AN EXCELLENT CHEESE SEASON

Ald. G. A. Gillespie, who is one of the heaviest buyers on the local cheese board, says that this year has been an excellent one for Peterborough cheese.

"The make has been good," he stated, "the pasture having been splendid this summer. The output is just as heavy now as it was in June, which is generally the best cheese month of the year."

On account of the good pasture the season will likely be a couple of weeks longer than usual.

ARE WITH THE QUEEN'S OWN RIFLES IN ENGLAND

It is interesting to note that in the visit of the Queen's Own Rifles to England, Peterborough has five representatives, who are sharing in the honors which have, and are still being bestowed on Sir Henry Pellatt and his Canadian contingent.

Walford Hatton, a son of Mr. G. W. Hatton, and who, before his removal to Toronto, was a member of the 57th Regiment, is one, and Arthur Wood, a son of Mr. R. E. Wood, county crown attorney, and when here quartermaster sergeant in the 24th Field Battery, is another member. Herbert S. Routley, a son of Mr. C. B. Routley, who left here to take a position with the Robert Simpson Co., makes the third. His Honor Judge Huycke also has a son, and Walter Blackwell, the youngest son of Mr. Wm. Blackwell, C.E., makes the fifth.

In the stock judging competition at Peterborough Industrial Fair the awards were made as follows;—1st, M. J. Stewart, Wallace Point; 2nd, C. Moore Smith; 3rd, equally divided between A. B. Mann, Bridgenorth, and Fred L. Campbell, Peterborough.

A GRAIN OF FAITH IS ALL WE NEED

Rev. Mr. Coon gave a fine discourse last evening at Mark St. church, on the many miracles performed by Christ when on earth. His text was Luke, 5th chapter, 5th verse, "Nevertheless, at Thy word we will let down the net." He showed how a grain of faith was sufficient for the performance of many remarkable miracles and cures. He had a large congregation, which was much impressed by his words.

"BOHEMIAN GIRL" THE FAVORITE

This Supremely Tuneful Romantic Opera Will be Presented by Aborn Grand Opera Co.

Some months ago the management of the Aborn English Grand Opera Company sent to a representative list of theatre-goers here a repertoire of twelve operas from which to select three favorites, with return postal cards with which to play. When a little less than three-quarters of the cards had been returned to New York, the vote was counted, and the work to receive the largest number was Balfe's "The Bohemian Girl."

Consequently this opera will be presented for the single performance scheduled for the Aborn singers at the Grand Opera House Wednesday night, Sept. 28th. The fact that so large a proportion of answers were received indicates that music lovers of this city are hungry for grand opera in English, which is quite natural, from the fact that the works of the masters have not been heard in the familiar language for a long time.

There has been no English grand opera company on tour in America for a number of years, the Aborn organization having confined their attentions to only a few big cities that would support long runs of a month or more each season.

They Can't Forget Canada

Already it has been pretty well demonstrated that certain railways of the Northwest are fighting desperately to stop the flow of immigration to the Canadian west. In fact this campaign has extended to the South western railways as well. For instance, the Texas and Pacific Quarterly, rather a pretentious magazine, published by that company and issued at Dallas, Texas, opens its July number with an uplift article which includes a quotation from Longfellow's Evangeline:—

"All the year round the orange groves are in blossom and grass grows,
More in a single night than a Canadian Summer."

Meaning, no doubt, the grass. Not the Canadian summer.

THE MURDER!

Mrs. Deline Had Had Words With a Wood-Ranger --Man Left in a Fury--She Had Been Suffering With Terrible Pains in Her Head--The Husband's Statement to Review Correspondent.

Special to Review

Havelock, Sept. 19.—No clue has as yet been found which would lead to the finding of the murderer of Telisa Deline. The police are working on the case, and it is hoped that there will be some useful information by the time of the inquest on Friday next.

It is a mystery not only as to who killed the woman, but also as to how she was killed, but this later will likely be cleared up when the result of the post-mortem is made known.

The facts briefly stated are these: That Hugh Deline left the farm of James Buchanan, where he was employed, and arrived home, as he states, at about 8.30 o'clock. He found his wife dead and ran to the home of Mr. Sam Newel, about 15 minutes' walk at about ten o'clock it is stated, but there is some uncertainty about the time. The coroner was notified next morning. The woman's face was scratched as if by finger nails, there was a slight scalp wound and her wrists were scraped as if her hands had been tied, and she had been struggling to release herself. No one had been seen enter of leave the place that day, but a person might have easily reached the place without being seen.

It does not seem possible that the husband, left as he is with two little children, could have committed the deed. He seemed to feel badly about the death of his wife, but made no effort to solve the mystery of her murder.

A CLUE.

The question then asked is was it a tramp? Two tramps were seen about that settlement a week ago, but have not been seen lately. Your correspondent, in interviewing the husband, asked him if he could throw any light on how his wife met her death. He said he could not. He was if she was on bad terms with any person. He admitted that a woodranger, who passed through that district about a week before, had words with his wife and there was bad feelings between them when he left. Deline was not at home when the trouble with the woodranger had occurred, but his wife had related the story to him when he returned. The woodranger had called at the Deline home at noon and had asked for his dinner. Mrs. Deline had given it to him, and when he had finished asked him for the pay for the meal. There was some dispute about the price, hot words passed between the two and the woodranger had left in a fury without paying her anything for the meal. Outside of this Deline knew of no one on bad terms with his wife.

PAINS IN HEAD.

Deline said that his wife for the past three years had at intervals had terrible pains in her head, and that they had been bad lately, and he had sent to Havelock on the morning of the tragedy for a bottle of medicine for her. He seemed to have an idea that death had come from the same trouble as this pain in the head, but could give no explanation of the marks on the body.

The neighbors knew very little about the Delines or their home life. They lived about a mile in from the road in a clearing where a small house and barn was erected, and where there was a small garden. The husband worked among the farmers when he got a chance, returning to his home at night. Watson Parks, a cousin of the deceased, has lived near them for about a year, and, so far as he knew, their family relations were the happiest.

To a neighbor, for whom he had worked, Deline had said that his wife was suffering from a pain in her head lately, and that he might go home any night and find her dead.

A post-mortem was performed on the body by Dr. Holdcroft, of Havelock, and Dr. Ford, of Norwood, on Saturday.

REV. MR. TROMPOUR'S STATEMENTS ON SUNDAY EVENING WERE OF A VERY VIGOROUS NATURE; TALK ON A LIVE ISSUE OF THE PRESENT DAY

(PURITY DISCUSSED)

"Young woman, the moment you allow any suggestion or allusion to anything that you know is wrong, from the man you are keeping company with, you are a fool."

The above strong statement, with many others of a similar red hot nature, were spoken by the Rev. Mr. Trumpour last evening in All Saints' church in a telling and startling sermon on the evils of impurity.

"'Keep thyself pure' and 'blessed are the pure in heart,' are the Bible injunctions," said the preacher.

Purity belongs to the whole mind of Christian thought. Terrible temptations beat at the door of every heart. There is a suggestion of the perversion of passion of the Garden of Eden. The pages of Genesis are full of stories of the violations of God's orders. The literature of every nation bears out this fact. You dare not get a copy of 'Shakespeare' in the original, it is so vile.

"This crime of impurity is a modern crime and, I fear, a local one also," said Mr. Trumpour. "For every one man who is guilty of intemperance there are ten slaves to impurity. Hell itself is raging on this earth. A startling percentage of the men of United States are victims of the habit. To the parents I would say, 'raise the boys that the promise of this thing will not be raised among us.' The temptations in our midst are fearful. You cannot walk down the streets without hearing blasphemies and suggestive phrases which shock and horrify you. From experience of many years in a boys' school, and by investigation of boys, an alarming proportion of vicious habits were discovered, which were unknown to the parents of the boys. Those who to-day are men, wish that their fathers and mothers had unfolded to them the wonderful and mysterious origin of life, and the secret of sex, instead of having had it presented to them by filthy and unclean associates. It seems to be avoided as prudish and wrong. I could tell of actual experiences with men and boys that would make you sick. You may think your own boy is not guilty of such practices. There is nothing about which a boy will lie more readily than to conceal his guilt of impurity. Eight or nine years is not too early to be told of the knowledge of sex. Parents allow children to roam the streets at all hours of night. To allow boys and girls of tender years to attend moving picture shows is wrong, and is in the same category. For every one there are six that destroy ideals of life.

"In cities the size of Peterborough picture presented that is helpful the summer time puts temptations in the way of our youth that undeniably lead to juvenile prostitution. And this sin embraces many. Some of the worst scandals the church has had have been with ministers themselves. The worst sin on earth is impurity. No man should entertain thoughts of the other sex which he could not tell his mother. There is nothing can keep a young man pure or straight more than the love of a pure woman. If you have ever been guilty of impurity in your youth you can never be really happy again. Not only this, but you may wreck and damn some other innocent soul.

"Any man whose companionship does not make a woman better, and create a desire for better things is not worthy to be called a friend, and almost always is your worst enemy."

Speaking of impure stories, the speaker said that he would give his right hand if he could blot out the impure stories he had heard in his youth. It was only by the mighty power of God he had been able to erase some of them from his memory.

For these doers of evil and vile, unclean retailers of filth and shame hanging is not the beginning of punishment.

In concluding the speaker said, "My last word to-night is 'be clean and pray God to keep you pure.'"

SPOKE ON THE EUCHARIST; SERMON YESTERDAY MORNING BY REV. DR. LANGFELT

The Holy Communion was observed at St. Luke's church on Sunday morning and the rector, Rev. E. A. Langfeldt, gave a splendid discourse on the meaning and significance of the solemn religious rites involved by it. He spoke from the passage of scripture contained in St. John, sixth chapter, verses 54 to 56. He showed what a tremendous influence for righteousness was this periodical reviewing of our vows to God, and how it kept our faces turned towards Him, the Giver of all good things. It is first by the presence of Christ within us that we obtain power to crucify sin. Infinitely great is the power of the Bread of Life. Very often it is a fact that not until late in life do we realize the great benefits of Holy Communion with Him. It strengthens men's hearts and supports life. We are one with Christ and Christ with us.

Apart from Him there can be no fruits of righteousness. Each true communicant abides in Christ. This is exemplified by the faithful martyrs, the saints and confessors of each generation, the shining lights, the devout and many Christians whom we have seen and know, who, that loves Him in sincerity would not wish to join that holy host.

Speaking of the recent Eucharistic declaration of Father Vaughan, Mr. Langfeldt said: "When we look at the noble lives of the early Christians, the heroism they manifested, the atrocious deaths they suffered, when they were sealing the doctrine of Jesus Christ, who then will say that their religion and ours is a 'soulless religion?' God forbid that we should make light of a religion that differs from ours. We have a right to have an opinion, and it should be respected. At the Eucharistic Congress the priesthood had no desire to hurt us. Is the faith of the Lord Jesus Christ soulless? Atonement and sacrifice was once made for all, and this is sufficient. From all points of view we would consider it a religious sacrilege to have it offered again.

As often as we eat and drink of the symbol of His flesh and blood, we have the hope of the blessed resurection.

Let us never forget His benefits to us. How can any one who owns His name depart from His blessedness? Great beyond any controversy are the benefits derived by His holy sacrifice.

Concluding, the speaker said: "Do not wait for the months and years to pass before renewing your covenant, but come to the altar as soon and as early as possible, and partake of the saving power of the bread of life."

SKATING PARTY AT ROLLER RINK

At the Brock street roller rink on Saturday night, between ten and eleven o'clock, Miss Theresa Tougas entertained a number of her friends to a skating party, in honor of her friend Miss Ruby McNeely, of Toronto.

The occasion was one of much enjoyment for all, and the hour's roll came to a close all too soon.

The skating party was the first of the season.

The Finnish Diet has reassembled at Elsingfors and elected as president ex-president Svinhufvid.

T.A.S. WERE PUT AWAY BY FAST KINGSTON-BELLEVILLE TEAM

Visitors Were Superior at Bat and on the Field---Saunders Struck Out Thirteen and His Team Took an Early Lead—Score Was 10-4.

The last ball game of the season proved to be a disastrous one for the T.A.S. Not only had they to be content with the small end of the 10— score but the attendance was small, and in the face of the heavy expenses of the day, which included a new pair of hose for Con. Murphy, the encouragement handed out was not crowded for lack of space. The Kingston-Belleville aggregation of pill manipulators was strong in all departments. The battery end was steady and Saunders and Brown were backed up with consistent fielding and batting. Thirteen of the locals biffed in vain and six of the eight hits came in two innings, when the four runs went o'er the pan.

T.AS. had the strongest team to be picked up in town. Rahmal, a newcomer with a rep, put away the hurling for eight innings, but he was no puzzle for the visitors. He was landed on for clean hits, but the infield, despite its strength, did not work as smoothly as might be expected, and this brought trouble to the twirler frequently. Quinlan let loose in the ninth, and was touched up for a double, which, however, was wasted.

Jack Oldham was dragged into the umpire business, owing to the nonappearance of Dan McCabe, and outside the usual upheavals, got away with his work all right.

First Innings.

Kingston—Laird, leading off, drove the first pitched ball at O'Hern, who threw him out at first. Connell doubled and took third while Gerow was striking out. O'Neil was walked and Laird came home on a bad throw. —One run.

T.A.S.—O'Hern made first when Brown let the third strike get away. Wylder beat out a tapper. Murphy forced O'Hern at third. Quinlan and Campbell fanned.

Second Innings.

Two hits, a pass and two errors, one of which was a wild throw, gave the visitors three runs, Saunders, LeFuer and Mathias counting.

O'Brien fanned, McFadden hit and went to third. Corkery swung in vain. Rahmal went free. O'Hern was hit and the bases were full. Wylder's contribution was a grounder on which he was retired.

Third Innings

Murphy was shifted to third, Corkery to second and O'Hern to short. O'Neil skied out to McFadden. Brown was safe on Rahmal's fumble and went to second. Saunders died, pitcher to first. LeFuer was passed. From third Brown scored on a wild pitch and in the attempt to get LeFuer at second nobody covered the bag, the runner going to third and scoring on Mathias' single. Pond was safe when the throw to first was dropped. Laird was out, short to first. Two runs.

Murphy sent a long fly to Mathias. Quinlan was walked and stole second. Campbell fouled out to Brown, and O'Brien was hit. McFadden fanned.

Fourth Innings.

Wylder missed Connell's third strike but got him at first. Gerow grounded out pitcher to first, and O'Neil sent a high and hard chance to Campbell, which was accepted.

Corkery, Rahmal and O'Hern were fanned in succession.

Fifth Innings.

Brown popped out to Murphy. Saunders out, Corkery to Quinlan. LeFuer was safe when Quinlan dropped the throw from O'Hern. Mathias was out on a high one to O'Brien.

Wylder let loose a single and stole second. He scored on Murphy's double. The attempt of Cornelius to take a third cushion was successful, Connell dropping the throw after it looked as though the runner was caught between the bags. Quinlan and Campbell fanned, but O'Brien's single sent Murphy home. O'Brien beat his way around to third and tallied when McFadden hit. Corkery missed three. —Three runs.

Sixth Innings.

Pond went out second to first. Laird took a pass. Connell was safe on Quinlan's error. Laird was caught at second. Murphy fell down on Gerow's grounder. Quinlan dropped the throw, but threw the runner out at the middle bag.

Rahmal was an easy out at first. O'Hern flew out to left, and Wylder croaked, Saunders to Gerow.

Seventh Innings.

The visitors were retired in order, O'Neil and Brown grounding and Saunders, when he tried to stretch an easy double into a triple, O'Brien sent a perfect throw to Murphy and the runner was nailed—likewise the baseman, but on the leg.

Murphy doubled again and was sacrificed to third by Quinlan. Campbell struck out. O'Brien clouted out a lusty two-bagger, Murphy scoring. McFadden was out, Connell to Gerow. —One Run.

Eighth Innings.

LeFuer and Mathias walked. Pond went out, pitcher to first. Laird's single scored LeFuer and Mathias came in on Connell's donation. Gerow kept up the good work and Laird took third, from where he scored on O'Neil's sacrifice. Connell made it four on a passed ball. Brown was retired after a short bunt.—Four runs.

It was one, two, three order for the T.A.S. on infield plays.

Ninth Innings.

Quinlan took the box and Rahmal first. Saunders grounded to pitcher. LeFuer sent one to the fence, and behind the foul flag, which was disputed, but allowed by the umpire. Mathias sent up a foul to Murphy and Pond fanned.

Wylder and Murphy were easy outs at first, and Quinlan didn't try to beat out his attempt to the pitcher.

BANGING SCARED THE DUCKS

The continual banging of the duck hunters' shotguns has had the effect of scaring the ducks at Rice Lake, and the bags of the opening of the season weren't very large as the result.

The old hunters claim that there were quite a number of beginners at the game who were shooting this year, and state that they would bang at the ducks, regardless of distance. So much noise had the effect of sending them soaring high and fast and spoiled the opportunities for the other fellow.

The hunting won't be tempting now till the late season in October, when the ducks will be flocking together for the trip south, and will try to pick up the decoys for the migration excursion. Then the hunter will take calm, deliberate aim from the hide and bang! another duck dead—maybe.

Peterboro 4 Norwood 1 | LAWN TENNIS | Peterboro 7 Omemee 0

The Peterborough Lawn Tennis Association played the Omemee and Norwood tennis clubs Saturday afternoon, using, simultaneously the Y.M.C.A., Bowling Club, and Golf Club courts. After the down town players had finished they united at the Golf Club. A large and distinguished assembly of ladies and gentlemen greatly enjoyed the many interesting and hard-fought contests. Tea tables were spread on the lawn about 5 o'clock, where little tete-tete parties from the gallery sat down. After all the matches were finished the gladiators of the clubs sat down at once with some of their friends, to the number of about 25, when Mrs. H. D. Burnett poured tea, which added much to the charm of it. This part of the events was enjoyed to the full. Following this, bright speeches were made by Mr. F. D. Kerr for Peterborough, Dr. Sutton for Omemee, Mr. Roxborough for Norwood, and Mr. Cluxton for Peterborough Lawn Tennis Association. Auld Lang Syne and cheers for the different clubs ended a delightful afternoon.

The results of the different matches were as follows—

F. D. Kerr (Peterborough) beat T. E. Finlay (Norwood) 6—3, 6—3.

H. D. Burnett (P) beat W. Stevenson (Omemee) 6—1, 6—1.

W. Landry (P) beat J. B. L. Grout (O) 6—1, 6—2.

In the football match for the R. R. Hall trophy, at the exhibition grounds Saturday afternoon, the C. G.E. eleven defeated the St. James team by a score of 3—0.

The winners had the game well in hand at all times, and but for the good work of Hall between the posts, would have notched a higher count. The figures at half time were 2—0, and the spectators witnessed some interesting football.

BRIEF AND BREEZY

The T.A.S. met their second defeat of the season Saturday at the hands of the team composed of Belleville and Kingston players. The West Ends beat the abstainers mainly through the latter's errors and Saturday's game was won by superior and timely hitting on the part of the visitors. It is yet to be seen just how the T.A.S. could perform in a pinch.

Capt. Larsen's attempt to motor through the whirlpool rapids at Niagara was successful. They say fortune favors the brave, but the dame must be given credit for bestowing her favors on others. Larsen must be given credit for showing an iron nerve and that's about all. Locally the result of his attempt was awaited with great interest.

The champions of the N.L.U. were shy on running and combination work against the Minto Cup holders and were never dangerous at Westminster Saturday. The score was 7—3. Twelve thousand were in attendance and the showing of the challengers was disappointing. The play was clean. Next Saturday the second game will be played.

The president and other officers of the Peterborough Lawn Tennis Association are doing a good work in arranging games with outside clubs. These competitions are one of the most effective incentives to the game of tennis or any other branch of sport.

Brief and Breezy

Archibald won the pole vault at the Dominion championship Y. M. C. A. meet at Brantford on Saturday. His jump was 11 feet 2 in. This was the mark at which he was beaten by Cameron here at the Penman meet.

The date of the opening of the world series between the Cubs and Athletics is said to be Sunday, Oct, 16th.

SMUGGLING IN ANDORRA.

It Is an Honorable Profession In the Little Republic.

Sant Julia de Loria, the rival of Andorra la Villa, is the great trade and smuggling centre. It has about 600 inhabitants only, but can boast several large shops and warehouses full of contraband commodities openly displayed. As a matter of fact, the whole nation is more or less smugglers—on principle. They have neither import nor export duties themselves, and they are fully persuaded of the benefits of free trade for everybody. France makes commodities wanted in Spain, Spain grows articles required in France, and Andorra lies between these two nations. What more natural, therefore, than that she should give aid to both her neighbors—for a consideration, of course? But smuggling in Andorra is not looked upon as a fraudulent business. On the contrary, it is considered an honorable and legitimate profession—almost an art—and one that in its higher branches requires many aptitudes—business capacity, astuteness, diplomacy, a thorough knowledge of the art of bribery and a military method for directing one's forces and commanding one's subordinates. For instance, a wealthy Andorran goes over the border into Spain and buys up cheaply thousands of sheep, which he pays for in Spanish money. They are driven home to his mountain pastures, where they are marked with his cipher. Then, in company with his headman, he strolls casually across to the French frontier—every inch of which he and his underlings know by heart—and drops into the hut of the commandant of the douaniers for a chat. Before leaving the commandant naturally offers him a petit verre, and banknotes of greater or less value are left lying on the table. Nothing definite is said; nobody's conscience or dignity is compromised. A few days later thousands of Andorran sheep are sold in the market of France and paid for in French money. How did they get across the frontier? Ah, that's just the point. The mere fact of buying with Spanish money and selling for French means from 20 to 30 per cent. profit without counting the difference in the prices of the animals. In addition to sheep, hides, tobacco, matches, olive oil, superior qualities of wines, salt, sugar and ultra-marine are the principal commodities smuggled into France. The articles that go into Spain are mostly glass and china fancy articles, bric-a-brac, paper and cutlery; also a large number of mules. The latter are bought in a wretched state for almost a song in France, turned out to grass on the splendid Andorran pastures for a few months and sold in Spain at the end of the season for a high figure.—Wide World Magazine.

"Poor Glick."

Col. Count Gleichen, whose marriage with the Hon. Sylvia Edwardes was celebrated the other day, was, prior to taking up staff work, one of the most popular officers the Grenadier Guards ever possessed. He has seen active service in five different lands. It was in South Africa that the count had his fiercest fighting, and those who saw him bowled over at Modder River never imagined that he would get up again. "Poor Glick is dead!" cried on officer to another as he saw the count kick convulsively and then lie still. "No, I am not!" was the emphatic rejoinder from the supposed corpse, as he rolled over, disclosing a ghastly wound on the neck that exposed, but happily did not sever, the jugular vein.

Differences In Woods.

Timber is classed as hard or soft, and the main point of difference between the trees that produce these classes is that the soft wooded tree has "needle leaves," slim, narrow and almost uniform in breadth, while the hard wood trees have broad leaves of various shapes. Again, some soft wood trees carry cones, such trees being termed conifers. Resin, too, is more characteristic of soft than of hard wood. To the class of soft woods belong the pines, spruces and firs, and the most common examples of these are yellow pine, white fir, pitch pine and spruce or red fir. In the commoner hard woods are oak, beech, mahogany, ash, walnut, plane, elm, birch and ebony.

TRAVELLING HOME

Baltimore Sun.

I saw them come over the water, I saw them go down thru the land.
Some lonely on feet that were weary; some smiling, with hand clasped in hand.
And, where are they going? I questioned: Oh, what do they see where they roam?
That their eyes seem to dwell on a vision? "Home, home—they are travelling home."

I saw them come out of the cities, I saw them go over the hill;
I saw little children, old people, swart sons of the forge and the mill;
The young with the feet of light dancing, the old with the yearning for rest;
"They are travelling home," said the shadow, "to lie down on the dear mother-breast."

I saw them in shadow and sunshine, I saw them at dawn and at night,
Go on, and go on, and go over the road to the lilt of delight.
Diviner than anything human, the glow on their faces that roam;
"They are travelling home," cried the shadow, home, home—they are travelling home."

EXPERTS ON THE WEST

A party of American Agricultural Editors have been touring Western Canada with Herbert Vanderhoof of the "Canada West" Magazine. At Edmonton the visitors were received by President Hays of the Grand Trunk, who proceeded to interview them. They told Mr. Hays that they had enjoyed the trip over the Grand Trunk Pacific, which traversed a fine district, showing good crops of wheat, oats and hay in Alberta. In Saskatchewan the wheat was good and oats fair with every evidence of prosperity in the new towns. They spoke with enthusiasm of the excellent character of the road. Mr. Hay's expressed his pleasure at meeting them and asked them to come again. Arriving at Winnipeg they expressed themselves to the representatives of the Press most enthusiastically. Elmer E. Critchfield of Chicago said:—"I was the only member of our party who had seen Western Canada. I had been away four years and was amazed at the growth of the towns and cities, especially of Edmonton, Prince Albert and Saskatoon. Western Canada is all right, and we found the farmers everywhere, thoroughly satisfied.

Clarence D. Strew, Managing Editor of "Farm Life" and the "National Fruit Grower & Gardener," Chicago, said: Practically everywhere we went we found fine crops and throughly satisfied farmers.

A. W. Fulton, Editor of "New England Homestead" and "American Agriculturalist" said: The trip has been a revelation and an education. I have read all that ever came my way about Western Canada, but I must admit frankly that I was utterly unprepared for what I saw. I am now armed to speak from first hand experience in answering the great number of questions that are constantly asked down our way about actual conditions in the Canadian West. I have nothing but good to report and particularly as to the success of the American settlers in every part of the West that we traversed.

Frank C. Moorehead of the "Iowa Homestead," "Wisconsin Farmer," 'Farmer & Stockman' Demoines, Iowa, was equally enthusiastic: I have never seen finer crops anywhere. I was particularly interested in the Melfort district, where several hundred Iowa farmers have settled. Without exception they have been successful, and everyone of them is thoroughly satisfied. I can only have one answer to anyone inquiring about Canada and you know what the answer is.

J. B. Montgomery, Editor of the 'Farmer" magazine and "Rural Weekly" Omaha, Nebraska, said: The Americans are not leaving Canada. They are coming and more than ever will come.

As a rule they are good farmers which is one of the reasons for their invariable success. This has been a season of seasons to show up bad farming, and for that reason, the invariable conditions in certain sections are by no means an unmixed evil. Thousands of farmers have learned a lesson by which they will benefit in future.

Mr. Parke West, Land Department, "Chicago Record Herald" declared with enthusiasm: Fine crops and prosperous satisfied farmers tell me the story why there is no truth in reports of American settlers leaving the country. We shall all have the best of reports to make to all inquiries, and our paper alone has hundreds of them at a time.

GIDDY PARIS WANTS TO SEE NO MORE HEADS ROLL OFF IN THE BASKET AGAIN -- GETTING LESS BLOODTHIRSTY

Paris, Sept. 16.—"The guillotine must go." That is, it must go if the Socialists and the Parisian mob can bring it about, for the same class that in 1793 sent to "The Widow" the best blood in France is now clamoring for the abolition of the fatal knife, and back of them is the powerful Socialist party which generally gets what it goes after. So it is not at all unlikely that the guillotine will go and with it capital punishment in France.

For ten years up to a year and a half ago, the guillotine gathered dust in M. Deibler's workshop. The hereditary executioner retained his office. He still received his nominal salary of $1,200 and possibly drew the additional allowance of $2,000 for keeping his tools in order. But during that period his extra fee of $20 for each execution was lacking. No heads were ordered off anybody's shoulders. It was believed that France, like Italy, was done with capital punishment. But it was during that period that the Apache curse in Paris germinated and grew more fruitful year by year. At length, in January, 1909, the capture and conviction of four members of the Polet band, against whom many murders of peculiar savagery were proved, resulted in a popular demand for M. Deibler to bring forth his dusty guillotine and cut off those four despicable heads. The whole of Northern France—as well as the Parsians and the people of Belgium, were committed—demanded the restoration of the guillotine. "Death to the assassins! Long live Deibler!" was the popular cry. Now it looks as though not only the guillotine but Deibler's hereditary occupation would soon become a thing of the past.

The official title of this functionary is "Monsieur de Paris." Even during the "revolution, when the gullotine went on its travels through many provinces, it was always "Monsieur de Paris" who escorted "The Widow" and directed her grisly operations. Since about the year 1870 the office of public executioner has remained in the Diebler family. For almost 200 years—from 1684 to 1874—the dynasty had but one name, Sanson. During the interregnum between the last Sanson and the first Deibler there were two headsmen, each without family and without fame. They were mere stopgaps, named respectively, Heindrich and Roche.

THE LAND OF BIG THINGS AND ALSO BIG THEFTS A BRIEF STORY OF FACTS AND FIGURES THAT DO NOT LIE

Including the defalcations in Massachusetts during the last few months, the bank thefts in the United States during five years exceed $23,000,000. Government officials are amazed by the alarming increase in defalcations and embezzlements which wreck institutions, show the frailty of human nature and fill prison cells.

Included in the five years' bank theft record are the crimes of George W. Coleman and John A. Hall, of Cambridge, and Southbridge, respectively, who got away with more than half a million.

The closing of the York County Savings Bank at Biddeford, Me., is to be included in the failure list, which has reached large proportions. The depositors will probably get in excess of 75 cents on the dollar.

TRY TO GET RICH.

The records show that a majority of bank embezzlers stole money to gamble in Wall Street.

The thefts of $28,000,000 do not represent the complete record of losses because banks conceal them whenever possible.

Temptation to try and repeat the performances of few men who have made quick fortunes in Wall Street is held responsible for increasing embezzlements among bank employees.

In the Federal prison in Leavenworth, Kan., where prisoners are received from all over the country, the banker convicts exceed every other class of prisoners except burglars and mail robbers. There are thirteen former officials of banks "doing time" in the Riverside Prison, Pittsburg. The number of banker convicts in Sing Sing could not be ascertained yesterday, as the records were not available.

It will be noticed that trifling thefts of a few hundred thousand are not noted and nothing less than a million is gone into in detail.

The number of bank officials and the total amount of thefts on record do not tell the complete story of bank thefts. To avoid publicity, banks frequently take their losses without reporting to the authorities or prosecuting the offending employees.

LOST IN WALL STREET GAMBLING.

In a majority of cases the money stolen from banks is lost in stock gambling in Wall street. Thus went the $100,000 which John H. Lowrey, in an admission made a few days ago, said he took from the Utica City National Bank.

It was said recently by the president of a surety company that there are many thefts committed in banks throughout the country that never reach the ears of the public. Bankers and heads of trust companies, it was asserted, frequently minimize the amount of stealings when the secret of losses comes out. In illustration of this it was recalled that when announcement was made very lately of the disappearance of Walter Hall, paying teller of the Herald Square branch of the Greenwich Bank (New York), an official of the bank said the amount mission from the bank was "too trivial to mention." The amount proved to be between $35,000 and $50,000.

It was first announced, following the disappearance of Cashier Erwin Wider, that the Russo-Chinese Bank at No. 52 Pine street, was out about $50,000. The value of the missing securities is now placed at $600,000.

Here is the record of some of the biggest of five years' bank thefts;—

1905—Paul O. Stensland, Chicago, banker, $1,500,000.

Frank G. Bigelow, Milwaukee, banker, $1,450,000.

Officials of Denver Savings Company, $1,700,000.

T. Lee Clarke, cashier, Enterprise, Pa., Bank, $1,200,000.

Frank K. Hipple, president Real Estate Trust Co., Philadelphia (suicide) $7,000,000.

Charles T. Barney, president of the Knickerbocker Trust Company (suicide) said to have dropped in speculation, $7,000,000.

Oliver M. Douglas, bookkeeper Trust Company of America, $1,300,000.

Henry Rieber, paying teller; John Young, auditor, Farmers' National Bank, Pittsburg, $1,105,000.

John R. Walsh, president Chicago National Bank, Chicago (misapplication of funds) $7,000,000.

Aug. Ropke, Fidelity Trust Company, Louisville, Ky., $1,140,000.

Dynamite Outrage.

Chicago, Sept. 17.—A dynamite explosion wrecked the main entrance and blew out every pane of glass in the general office building of the Winslow Bros.' Co., iron manufacturers, at West Harrison street, and South Forty Sixth avenue, Thursday night. Nobody was injured.

The concussion was felt for a mile distant.

The police regard it significant that the bomb was placed directly under the centre of the pattern shop, and that 25 union pattern makers severed their connection with the firm about three weeks ago.

To Tell the Ghost.

Victoria, B.C., Sept. 17.—Despatches received yesterday from Tokio tell of a unique telegram sent by the Governor-General of Korea, instructing young Prince Ito to inform his late father's spirit that annexation had been completed.

A special envoy will be sent to the grave, according to custom, to read the proclamation to the ghost of the departed.

C.N.R. Hotel For Winnipeg.

Winnipeg, Sept. 17.—The Canadian Northern Railway will begin shortly to build the proposed hotel in Winnipeg, to cost $2,000,000.

President Mackenzie has intimated as much.

The location for the building, Mr. Mackenzie stated, was the corner of Water and Main streets, where the old Northern Pacific formerly stood.

Five Years for Robbing Churches.

Quebec, Sept. 19.—Arthur Lamohe, who was arrested some time since by Detectives Walsh and Defoy, after an exciting chase, when almost caught in the act of taking money from poor boxes in a church, was also found guilty of pilfering the poor boxes in St. Patrick's Church, in the Basilica and the English Cathedral. He was condemned to a term of five years in the penitentiary.

Brussels, Sept. 19.—Ex-Empress Marie Charlotte, widow of Emperor Maximilian of Mexico, is reported to be failing rapidly.

Discussed Lemieux Act.

Montreal, Sept. 16.—The Lemieux Trades Dispute Act was the chief subject of discussion at yesterday morning's session of the Canadian Federation of Labor, it being both commended and criticized.

Some of the delegates wanted the scope of the act extended so as to cover all classes of labor. Some delegates on the other hand, thought the act needed amendment in other ways, as it was, at present, cumbersome, and of very little benefit to the workingmen.

Missing Woman Found.

Almonte, Sept. 16.—Mrs. James McDougall, the missing Almonte woman, for whom searching parties have been scouring the roads in the vicinity since morning, was brought in by a farmer named Mitchell, who found her six miles beyond Kingston, and kept her over Wednesday night. Her mind is believed to be affected. She had left an almost unintelligible note saying she would never return.

Boys Wanted

To handle the circulation of  THE DAILY REVIEW

WE WANT MORE BOYS

The paper the people value is the paper delivered at the home. Of course large numbers of The DAILY REVIEW are sold on the street, but the home delivery is what counts.

We want more boys for more routes. We want more boys to handle their own routes, just as plenty of boys are now doing.

Let us have names of boys willing to carry routes, and to sell papers. One cent per copy to the boy—who sells for 2 cents, or for 10 cents per week.

BIG INCREASE IN RECEIPTS

Eleven Hundred and Fifty Dollars More in Grand Stand and Gate Monies This Year Than in 1909—Another Big Attendance on Saturday—Interesting Races.

The approximate gate receipts of the Peterborough Industrial Fair for this fall are given below. Of course this amount will be largely swelled by the entry monies and concession fees.

Total gate and grandstand receipts 1910	$3,150
Total gate and grandstand receipts 1909	2,,000
Increase for 1910	$1,150
Grandstand receipts 1910	400
Grandstand receipts 1909	309
Increase 1910	$91

The fair is over.

The three days' exhibition for 1910 at the Peterborough fair grounds show that the receipts were bigger, the exhibits greater, and the fair more satisfactory generally than in any previous year. That tells the story briefly, but comprehensively so what's the use of further elaboration.

INTERESTING RACES.

The races on Saturday afternoon were not as exciting as those of the day previous, but were interesting nevertheless, the final heat in the free-for-all furnishing the climax of the day's sport, Jennie Price winning the heat with nothing to spare.

All the races, the free-for-all, which was taken by Jennie Price, the 2.30 won by Harry Mack, and the running race, captured by Cobourg Maid, were won in straight heats.

FREE-FOR-ALL.

In the first heat in the free-for-all the four starters, Jennie Price, Collingwood Rooker, Planet and Harry Direct, swept past well bunched for the first half, but Jennie Price, won the mile hands down, finishing three lengths ahead of Collingwood Rooker, who showed the same daylight to Planet. Harry Direct didn't seem to be on edge and wasn't dangerous for a place in any of the heats.

Jennie Price negotiated the first mile to the brisk tune of 2.16 1-4, the fastest time of the fair.

In the second heat Collingwood Rooker made a commendable bid for first place and finished close to Jennie Price. Planet trailed at third.

DID HE USE CHAIN.

The judges suspected that Driver Sutherland used a chain on Collingwood Rooker in the second heat. The driver was called to the stand, but denied the charge. The driver of Jennie Price didn't know whether it had been used or not, but "Jimmy" McDowell, Planet's mechanic testified that Sutherland used the chain.

Watch was set on him for further offences, but no compiaints were returned.

A SURPRISE DASH.

Jennie Price lagged in the third heat, the driver being content to lay back and wait for the burst on the final stretch. However, he didn't urge his horse any too soon, for Collingwood Rooker almost had the heat when Jennie nosed under the wire a "wee bit" winner.

The summary:

Free-for-all—Purse $200.

Jennie Price, R. McGirr, Meaford	1	1	1
Collingwood Rooker, R. Whitton, Peterborough	2	2	2
Planet, J. McDowall, Toronto,	3	3	3
Harry Direct, Dr. Johnston, Peterborough	4	4	4

Time—2.16 1-4, 2.20 1-4, 2.21 3-4.

THE 2.30 RACE.

In the first heat Ned Wilkes lost considerable ground by breaking at the first turn, but picked up and gave Harry Mack a hot chase at the end of the mile. The latter was there all through however, and pulled in ahead in three straights with Ned Wilkes second and Lulu Chimes third.

The summary:

2.30 trot or pace—Purse $150.

Harry Mack, D. McMann, Reaboro	1	1	1
Ned Wilkes, W. A. Fanning, Lindsay	2	2	2
Lulu Chimes, T. McKiver, Peterborough	3	3	3

Time—2.24 1-4, 2.24 1-2, 2.24 3-4.

THE RUNNING RACE.

In the running event there were two races, for the horses came in like the C.P.R. midnight, in excursion season—in two sections.

Cobourg Maid and Princess of India, both owned by J. McIntosh, of Cobourg, so badly outdistanced Baltimore Belle and Right of Way that they almost lapped them in both heats of the race. Neither one of the latter two could move as fast as a threshing machine. At the start of both heats "Right of Way" was afraid of himself and got left at the post by so much that the race became a handicap. However, the horse managed to lope by Baltimore Belle in the last heat and came under the wire in the lead and travelling with the speed of a rocking horse pounding up hill. The crowd enjoyed the touch of comedy. Third money was divided between the two.

The summary:

Running race—Purse $125.

Cobourg Maid, J. McIntosh, Cobourg	1	1
Princess of India, J. McIntosh, of Cobourg	2	2
Baltimore Belle, Jas. Beatty	3	4
Right of Way, Harry Tinney	4	3

Time—1.57, 1.58 1-4.

"How did the general order of the big crowds at the exhibition impress you?" asked the Review of President Leary to-day.

"It was the very best," replied Mr. Leary, "and we appreciate the efforts of Chief Thompson and his officers."

Incidentally it might be stated that no reports were made to the guardians of the peace.

SPRINGVILLE

(Special to the Review)

Springville, Sept. 19—Rev. D. D. McDonald of Keene officiated at the Presbyterian Church, Springville yesterday in connection with the harvest home services. The collection was liberal, and the congregation large. People were much pleased with Mr. McDonald, and he will be welcomed back again. The congregation are looking forward with expectation to the pumpkin pie social on Tuesday night.

Dr. Marsh took Rev. Mr. McDonald's work in Keene. His sermons were much enjoyed.

A Rare Old Book.

The second book printed in the English language was "The Game and Playe of the Chess," which the title page says was "Fynyshid the last day of Marche, the yer of our lord god a thousand foure hondred and LXXIIj." Only twelve copies of the work are now known to exist. In 1813 an Englishman of the name of Alchorne sold his copy for a sum equal to $270 in United States currency. Fifty-six years later, in 1869, the same volume (an imperfect copy) was sold for $2,150. The British museum has refused an offer of $10,000 for its copy, which is imperfect to the extent of having seven leaves missing.

The Making of Words.

Dean Swift protested against "speculations, operations, preliminaries, ambassadors, pallisadoes, communication, circumvallation, battalions," as newfangled expressions brought into common use by the war of his day. Today nearly all these are the most orthodox English. In his time "mob" seems commonly to have been written "mobb," and "phizz" also had the doubled consonant. Hence his complaint that "we cram one syllable and cut off the rest, as the owl fattened her mice after she had bit off their legs to prevent them from running away."

Nearly two hundred prisoners are working on New Ontario roads at Matheson, Helsiand and Porcupine.

It Saves You Waiting

On Saturdays we have so many persons who drive long distances or come by train, that we are unable to promise appointments for that day, but we wait upon persons in turn. Many persons call write or phone for appointment, we then reserve time for such and it saves them much waiting, as the time so given is kept open for them. We make such appointments for any day or evening other than Saturday. Evening is quite as good as day time for the eye examination, but it is necessary to arrange for this a day or two in advance.

GAYNOR BLAMES YELLOW PRESS FOR HIS INJURIES

Lays Fault at Hearst's Door.

In Letter to His Sister, Mayor of New York Charges Proprietor of New York American With Inflaming Minds of His Enemies.

New York, Sept. 20.—Mayor Gaynor's own story of the attempt upon his life was published yesterday in the form of a letter written on Sept. 2 by the mayor to his sister, Miss Mary Gaynor of Utica, N.Y. It is a remarkable human document, in which the mayor describes in detail his feelings following the shooting.

The mayor directly accuses the Hearst newspapers of instigating the attack, in which Gallagher was the active agent. False articles, he says, worked upon people of wicked or disordered minds to such an extent that these persons flooded his mail with clippings from the Hearst papers, and caused him to abandon his habit of walking across the Brooklyn Bridge.

"I was not surprised when I was shot," wrote the mayor to his sister. "I had been expecting an assault."

Miss Gaynor, in giving out the letter, said that she did so because she felt it belonged to the whole public, and that the publication would do much good.

Mayor Gaynor, in referring to the pictures of the Reno prize fight, said he had no way to stop the threatres from showing them.

That was the beginning of the attack on him by the Hearst papers. "But the Hearst newspapers kept on denouncing me for not stopping them," says the mayor.

"Finally," continues the mayor, "one day they printed in large type an officer of the Christian Endeavor Society who had called on me and asked me on behalf of that society to stop the pictures, and stated that I told him he was a fool, and was sent by fools. I had never said such a thing.

"Meanwhile, people of wicked or disordered minds would cut these articles out and send them to me with abuse and threats.

"Finally they printed that terrible cartoon of me, entitled 'The Barker.' I was dressed up as a ruffian, standing outside of a prison fight with a cane and barking for people to go in and see the sport. Two men slugging each other, one of them down and bleeding, were exposed in the ring."

The mayor says that he has not read a line of what has been published of the shooting, nor does he now remember the name of the man who shot him. Mayor Gaynor wrote that after the shot was fired:

"My next consciousness was of a terrible metallic roaring in my head. It filled my head, which seemed as though it would burst open. It swelled to the highest pitch, and then fell and then rose again, and so alternated until it subsided in a continuous buzz. It was sickening, but my stomach did not give way. I was meanwhile entirely sightless.

"I do not think I fell, for when I became conscious I was on my feet. I supposed they saved me from falling, and they were supporting me. My sight gradually returned, so that after a while I could see the deck and the outlines of the crowd around me. I became conscious that I was choking. Blood was coming from my mouth, and I tried all I could to swallow it, so those around me would not see it.

"Though the thing had not entered my head that morning, I was not surprised when I realized that I was shot. I had had a feeling for some weeks that I might be assaulted, on account of anonymous threats I was getting by mail. I had not received so many nor so regularly since I was opposing the ring corruptions and the McKane conditions in Brooklyn and Gravesend when I was a young man."

Robert Adamson, the mayor's secretory, said last night that the mayor's condition continues to improve. "It is true," he explained, "that he has had pains on the right side of his head since he was shot, but they are due to neuralgia. It is true also that his voice is husky and low. This is because he has been compelled to do too much talking since he left the hospital. The mayor plans to return to his desk at the city hall on Oct. 3, and in the meantime to do as little talking as possible."

ARCHBISHOP MACLAGAN DEAD

London, Sept. 20.—Dr. MacLagan, the former Archbishop of York, is dead.

Most Rev. Wm. Dalrymple MacLagan, P.C., D.D., D.C.L., LL.D., was born at Edinburgh in 1826, and was the fifth son of David MacLagan, M.D. He served in the Indian army 1847-52, retiring as lieutenant. He left the army for the church, and was ordained a deacon in 1856. He became Bishop of Lichfield in 1878, and Archbishop of York in 1891. It was he who crowned Queen Alexandra in 1902. He retired from the archbishopric in 1909, and was succeeded by Dr. Cosmo Gordon Lang, Bishop of Stepney, who had a short time before declined to become Bishop of Montreal.

Insane Woman is Cured by Hypnotism; Mind Over Matter

Berlin, Sept. 17—Hypnotism is being successfully used to restore to sanity Frau von Schonebeck-Weber, the notable figure of the Allenstein Garrison tragedy.

It was during her long-drawn-out trial on a charge of complicity in the murder of her first husband, Major von Schonebeck, by her lover, Captain von Goben (who committed suicide in prison), that the woman became insane.

She has been living in a private nursing home during the last month, and under the supervision of a leading German nerve physician, Professor Eulenburg, she has been daily hypnotized. The result of the "suggestion" to which she has been subjected is remarkable, and the physicians state that after twelve months' complete rest they have no doubt that the formerly demented woman will be completely cured.

WENT FISHING ON SUNDAY

Whitby, Sept. 20.—The Lord's Day Alliance is actively responsible for a large party from Toronto being arrested in Frenchman's Bay Sunday afternoon.

The party were in half a dozen boats busily engaged hauling in bass and perch, with plenty of bait on board, when the officers appeared during the afternoon in another boat. One boatload containing two young ladies and a male escort escaped by landing on shore. The fair ones waved their handkerchiefs in a farewell to the constables and disappeared amongst the shrubbery.

Those arrested will be tried here on Friday before the police magistrate, and are: R. W. Fraser, Alf. Vigo, G. A. McDonald, Mrs. Fitter, Pat Hare, Mrs. Johnson, Wm. Fox, Geo. Sheppard W. London, C. Swinson and James Corbett.

FATHER KILLED BY SON

Gull Lake, Sask., Sept. 20.—Lewis McBride murdered his father Friday evening in a drunken frenzy. Both occupied a homestead ten miles from the city.

McBride and his son had been in town drinking freely. They returned to their homestead shack and engaged in a drunken brawl, during which Lewis grabbed a double-barrelled shot gun, and discharged the contents of one barrel into his father's stomach.

The shot brought the younger man to his senses, and, realizing what he had done, he immediately set out to town for medical aid, but it was too late. Upon explaining what had occurred at the homestead, he was arrested by Constable Fisher of the Royal Northwest Mounted Police.

EIGHTEEN MONTHS FOR BURGLAR

Owen Sound, Sept. 20.—A series of petty burglaries which have been perpetrated during the past fortnight, in which entrance was forced into several business houses, and small amounts of money taken, came to an end on Saturday night, when Sidney Hope, a young Englishman, was arrested. This morning he confessed to having committed the burglaries when he was confronted by the owners of the articles found in his room in connection with a Chinese restaurant.

The prisoner is an undersized man and was able to force his way through very small openings. Eighteen months in the Central Prison was the sentence he received.

INVESTIGATING UNEMPLOYMENT

Paris, Sept. 20.—Former Premier Bourgeois, in opening yesterday the first international conference on unemployment, said that the purpose of the congress was to investigate the scientific causes of unemployment, with the object of organizing methods for conserving human resources. Besides discussing means of combatting unemployment, the delegates will attempt to lay the basis for a labor legislation between the city and the country districts, and between different countries.

BAD FIRE IN WINNIPEG

Apartment House Burns and Many Narrowly Escape —Loss $125,000.

Winnipeg, Sept. 20.—Fire, which broke out at 2.30 yesterday afternoon in the fashionable residential district of Fort Rouge, and which was not under control till night, did damage roughly estimated at $125,000, while thirty men working on the roof of the unfinished apartment block in which the fire started had a narrow escape.

It broke out in the apartment house of Hicks & Patterson, being erected at a total cost of $150,000, totally destroying it, and then jumped back to McMillan Block, where seven frame houses were speedily licked up. The apartment house was brick and stone, wood finished, and the fire started from an explosion of the plumber's gasoline furnace. A high wind was blowing, and the unfinished structure, being not closed in, the flames spread so rapidly that the men working on the roof were cut off before they recognized their predicament.

Some jumped, others slid down by ropes, and all escaped with a few minor injuries. Forty-five men working inside escaped uninjured.

The $80,000 so far expended on the building is represented by $20,000 insurance.

Racing from house to house, the occupants of the burned residences on McMillan avenue had no time to save even their personal belongings.

Seventy-five firemen and five engines battled with the flames, and F. H. Ireton, engineer of Fire Station No. 4, stoically watched the conflagration lick up his own home.

CONFERENCE OF CATHOLIC CHARITIES

Washington, Sept. 20.—Everything is in readiness at the Catholic University of America for the first national conference of Catholic Charities, which will begin a four days' session next Sunday. At least 300 prominent churchmen from all parts of the United States and Canada, who are interested in this first movement to perfect a permanent national organization of the charitable work of the Catholic Church of the continent, will be in attendance.

Will Send Big Delegation.

Ottawa, Sept. 20.—Orangemen here will send a big delegation to Toronto if any demonstration is planned there for July 12th. They are entirely in sympathy with the proposal to have an Orange demonstration there on a large scale to offset the remarks of Roman Catholics in the recent Eucharistic Congress at Montreal.

OBLIGATORY ARBITRATION

Peace Society Hopes to Effect Treaty Between Britain and U.S.

Boston, Sept. 20.—An unlimited treaty of obligatory arbitration between the United States and Great Britain is the hope of the American Peace Society, as a result of the proposal that the two countries join in 1914 in a celebration to observe the completion of 100 years of peace between them.

The plans for a celebration commensurate with the position among nations of the countries directly interested, and with the occasion, have not yet approached the point, it is said, where details have been definitely discussed, but it is proposed that the observance of the centenary be exclusively along the lines of peace without military forms of demonstration, and that it include a parade of the merchant marine of both nations, as well as features to commemorate the growth and mutual assistance of educational institutions of Canada and the United States.

Reads Like a Romance; The Story of a Lottery Ticket Across the Sea

Brussels, Sept. 19.—An extraordinary story is just made public in respect of the chief prize of $40,000 in the exhibition lottery. It was long unclaimed, and the identity of the possessor of the winning ticket has only just been established in a curious way. A young Belgian miner, who had purchased a ticket for the lottery, was killed at work through a stone falling on his head some days before the results were announced. According to custom he was buried in his best suit of clothes.

When the weeks passed and the $40,000 remained unclaimed th eyoung man's relations remembered that he had a lottery ticket in his waistcoat pocket, and applied to the authorities for permission to exhume the body.

After some delay this was granted, and the winning ticket was found. The miner was only nineteen years of age.

WILL BE WORLD'S LARGEST CHEESE

Appleton, Wis., Sept. 20.—The largest single cheese ever made in the world will be constructed on a flat car at the John L. Jacquot cold storage plant in this city this week, for exhibition at the National Dairy Show at the Coliseum in Chicago, Oct. 20 to 29.

The cheese will weigh 4,000 pounds. It will take from 40,000 to 50,000 pounds of milk to produce the curd. That will mean all the milk for one day from 2,100 of the best dairy cows in the county, and it will take the entire output from 2,500 dairies in the county for that day. From 400 to 500 men will be required to do the milking, but the entire cheese will be made in one day by N. Simon of Neenah, assisted by six of the most expert cheese makers in this county, and six helpers. It will cost over $800 to produce the big cheese, which will be valued at from $1,000 to $1,200.

Captive of Another Sort.

Ottawa, Sept. 20.—Joseph Brisbois was to get married yesterday, but upwards of a dozen charges of theft interfered. He is under arrest. He was building a house, and, it is alleged, stole the lumber and all of the material for building, not forgetting the tools.

CRIPPEN WAS WAITING FOR CAUSE FOR DIVORCE

Landlady Tells of Girl's Jealousy.

In Outburst of Depression Crippen's Paramour Told Witness of Her Hopes an Fears.

London, Sept. 20.—Something of what Ethel Claire Leneve suffered as, half mad with jealously, she impatiently awaited the fulfilment of Dr. Hawley H. Crippen's promise to make her his wife, was revealed at yesterday's session of the inquest into the death of Belle Elmore, with the murder of whom the doctor and his typist are jointly charged.

In her distress, Miss Leneve confided in her landlady, Mrs. Jackson, and the story that the latter told on the witness stand rivaled the most sensational evidence introduced at the murder trial.

Mrs. Jackson said that the accused girl gave up the room which she had occupied at the home of the witness on March 12, explaining that she was leaving to be married to Dr. Crippen.

Until the first week in February Miss Leneve had slept regularly at Mrs. Jackson's. After that she stopped at the house only occasionally. She said that she spent the other nights at the homes of friends. On one occasion Miss Leneve mentioned having been at the Hilldrop Crescent home of the Crippens, early in February, to help the doctor in a search for a bank book which showed an account for $1,000. She added that a diamond tiara and rings had been found in the house and that the doctor had raised $850 on these.

About the middle of February the witness said Miss Leneve appeared most miserable and depressed. The landlady insisted upon an explanation, telling the girl that she must have something awful on her mind to be in such a condition. The witness testified that the other replied:

"Would you be surprised if I told you that it was the doctor and Miss Elmore? He was the cause of my trouble when you first knew me. She is his wife, and when I see them go away together it makes me realize my position, as to what she is and what I am."

Mrs. Jackson asked: "What is the use of worrying about another woman's husband?"

To this Miss Leneve answered: "Miss Elmore has been threatening to go away with another man. Dr. Crippen has been waiting for her to do so when he would divorce her."

Solicitor Newton, who is looking out for the interests of Dr. Crippen and Miss Leneve, suggested that her lodger's excitement was due to the landlady having resurrected a trouble which the girl experienced during her earlier association with Crippen, but the witness maintained the correctness of her evidence as given.

Another blow was given to Dr. Crippen's fight for liberty when the wife of Dr. T. H. Burroughs, Crippen's closest friend in London, identified a lock of hair, which was disinterred with portions of the human body, in the cellar of the Crippen Hilldrop Crescent home, as being from the head of Belle, as Mrs. Crippen was known on the stage.

Prof. Pepper, the pathologist, repeated the testimony which he had given at the trial in the Bow street police court. In response to questions by the coroner he said:

"I can form no definite opinion as to whether the parts found were those of a male or female. If I take the hair discovered into consideration there is a strong presumption, almost conclusive evidence, that the parts were those of a woman."

THE BELMONT MURDER

The Finger of Investigation is Tracing the Evidence In Belmont Murder Mystery---Deline An Epileptic--Acted Queerly--Developments Are Expected

From Our Own Correspondent.

Havelock, Ont., Sept. 20.—Developments are expected in the Belmont murder case before long, but in exactly what direction it is not known just now. The police are making vigorous attempts to have something substantial to work on before the inquest is resumed on Friday. The difference in time is as yet unaccounted for. It will be remembered that Deline stated himself that he arrived home about 8.30 o'clock in the evening. He left the home of Mr. Wm. McMillan, about fifteen minutes' walk, at 8 o'clock. Mrs. Newel says he did not arrive at her home until about ten o'clock. Here is an hour and a half of time to be accounted for. It is believed that Deline is epileptic. He has shown symptoms of it, and he has always been regarded a little queer by his neighbors. He has some nervous trouble that effects his speech, and when he is aroused his lips will emit frothy saliva. Many queer actions on Deline's part have been noticed by neighbors. Sometimes he would halt in his work in the field and shout, apparently for no reason. He would then continue his work.

Provincial Detective Reburn and County Constable Williams, of town, are working on the case to-day, although there is very little evidence on which to work. The one thing that is clear is, that some time between 8 and 10 o'clock p.m. on Thursday Mrs. Deline was attacked in the back shed of her home by an unknown assailant and in the desperate struggle which seems to have ensued she received a shock which caused her death.

Although several theories have been set forth there is very little evidence to justify an arrest as far as the public know.

A despatch from Toronto says;—Provincial Detective Henry Reburn has been despatched to Havelock by Superintendent J. E. Rogers to investigate the death of Mrs. Deline, the woman who was found dead in her house on concession twelve of Dummer township, Hastings county.

The unfortunate woman was badly bruised and lacerated when found, but the physicians ascribed her death to fright.

The provincial police are satisfied, from the report of the crown attorney, received yesterday, that death was due to a shock resultant from an attempted assault by someone yet unknown.

DELINE PROBABLY UNDER SURVEILLANCE

Special to the Review.

Havelock, Sept. 20.—Another interesting situation in Belmont township mystery developed this afternoon while Provincial Constable Reburn and County Constable Williams were at the home of Hugh Deline. Reburn, bent on an interview, Deline appeared in town unattended and apparently unaware of what was pending. He was at once showed by Village Constable Bennett, who is helping Williams on the case, though he was not molested nor interfered with in any way. Bennett kept an eye on Deline, waiting the re-appearance of the other officials, who obviously hunt in vain for their man.

BIG MERGER OF POWER

Montreal, Sept. 20.—The advance of Montreal Power to 150 and over, and the calling of a meeting to-day by that company, leads to the belief that there is a grand merger of the Montreal Street Railway, Montreal Power and Shawinigan Power Companies on the tapis.

It is stated "on the street" that the Street Railway will go in at 250, Power at 170 and Shawinigan at 125, with a working understanding with Canadian Power, whose friends have captured, perhaps, the absolute control of Street Railway.

AFFAIRS IN PORTUGAL

Lisbon, Sept. 20.—It is believed that King Manuel's appointment of sixteen peers, all supporters of the present Liberal Cabinet, will afford sufficient new strength to the Government to avoid the necessity of a dissolution of Parliament and new elections, which the Republicans declare would mean revolution.

The Government continues its campaign again the Jesuits, and is proceeding with the expulsion of other religious orders, which re-entered Portugal after the issuance of the decree of 1901.

PAPAL LEGATE AT WINNIPEG

Winnipeg, Sept. 20.—Cardinal Vannutelli, papal legate, spent a busy day in Winnipeg, beginning his work at an early hour. At 7 o'clock he said mass at the chapel of the Grey Nuns, and took breakfast there. At 8.30 he was at the Hospice Tache, where an entertainment was presented by the orphan boys and girls under the care of the church. He then attended, in company with the Archbishop of St. Boniface, the reception at St. Mary's Academy, and also visited the Ruthenian, German and Polish schools. At noon he was at the St. Boniface Hospital, which he inspected, and where he took lunch. In the afternoon he was present at a public reception at Government House. He left yesterday afternoon for St. Paul.

GRABBED GUN WRONG WAY

Langham, Sask., Sept. 20.—A. S. C. Latchford, accountant of the Northern Crown Bank, died as the result of a wound received in a goose-hunting expedition near here. He grabbed the gun by the muzzle and received the charge in his neck. He came west from Toronto in 1908. A. J. Wells, manager of the same branch, who also hailed from Ontario, was drowned a short time ago.

THANKSGIVING DAY

Monday, October 31st, is to be Thanksgiving Day. Years ago our Puritan Fathers to the south held Thanksgiving Day with prayers and fasting. So did our ancestors. Now its games and feasting, crowded theatres and reduced rates on the railroads. Yes the churches are open and the preachers preach and a few attend, a few who hold life lightly and whose Hope is Beyond. But what of the thousands who attend the football games, who watch the road races, who feast and gorge, who get drunk and get out on a tear. The spirit of Thanksgiving Day is almost utterly lost.

E. KING DODDS

E. King Dodds is dead. The last eulogy we wrote was over the remains of that very live corpse—Walt Mason. Mason is not dead, but still grinding out his yard of poetry daily. But E. King Dodds is dead and buried, for the funeral took place to-day. He was a live member in his palmy days, a reporter, editor, advertising manager, and magazine publisher. Yes, and he was an orator too. E King Dodds was a stump speaker of more than ordinary ability. Sir John A. Macdonald counted him as one of his best right-hand men on the platform. He was active in the times of the Dunkin Act, and later in the days of the Scott Act. Blindness came and his voice was seldom heard on the platform and the liquor interests lost a good man to urge their cause against local option. But blindness did not kill the spirit of E. King Dodds, nor did his incurable disease, dropsy. He was game to the last. But death won out and this afternoon the remains were buried in Mount Pleasant cemetery.

THE GREAT PROMISER

Sir Wilfrid Laurier knows quite well that the Hudson Bay route could never be a success commercially, and the building of a railway to Fort Churchill through the muskegs and bogs would be enormously expensive. There would not be enough traffic over the road to keep the steel from rusting. And yet, in order to catch a few paltry western votes the Premier is willing to pledge the credit of Canada for the construction of the road. Other provinces, which require much in the way of public works, have their needs brushed aside because a band of western voters have clubbed the Government into binding itself to the Hudson Bay railway. To saddle the Maritime Provinces, the great province of Quebec and the banner province of Ontario, with an increased burden of debt for this fanciful undertaking is a piece of crowning folly. But it was ever thus under the regime of Laurierism. The National Transcontinental was born prematurely because its parents came to the sudden conclusion that "time cannot wait." Now, before the Transcontinental with its enormous expenditures, is finished, Sir Wilfrid Laurier has pledged himself to build another road up to that frozen northern sea. With the Georgian Bay problem to be solved, the deepening of the St. Lawrence canals imperatively demanded, and the many necessary works which are clamoring for recognition, it would have been thought that the Premier would have permitted business judgment to supersede the desire for votes to rule in this Hudson Bay railway project. It is perhaps too much, however, to suggest that anything pertaining to business could ever occupy the mind of a man whose senses have been dulled by the insense of idolatory swung by financial followers. And, as of old, Canada's interests are sacrifices on the alter of opportunism.

THE TIES THAT BIND

To Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Feeley, 271 Romaine street, we approach in silent sympathy. Death has had its heavy hand upon their home and there are three vacancies now where once was living flesh and blood. In hours like this, words are cold and dumb and only those who have the Ties That Bind can appreciate the blow that has fallen upon this Romaine street home. And where is this somewhere? We look to the stars in their silent twinkling, we search the skies in a glance. But we know not. Yet some where we know they are, and they are the ties that bind.

THE FARMER SUFFERS ALSO

The price of timothy seed has nearly doubled during the past three months, outrunning the advance in clover seed.—Farmers' Avocate.

We have to pay more for our beefsteak and our chickens, our eggs and our butter. The farmer also has to pay more. He has to pay more for his help and for his incidentals about the farm. Who gets the cream. Do we, the common people? Does the farmer who rises early and works till late? Not on your life. Who gets it then? The combine, the trusts and the corporations. These fellows who live in the big houses, ride in expensive automobiles and private cars, and whose names are familiar ones. They get the cream, my boy—ours the skim milk.

NOT WELL POSTED

An American Associated Press despatch from Beverley, Mass., yesterday stated that the British ambassador at Washington had had given his consent to Canada entering into direct negotiations with Washington relative to a treaty of reciprocity.

This is illustrative of some United States press agencies' ignorance of the constitution of the British Empire and the mother country.

The American Associated Press ought to know that a British ambassador at Washington has as much right to give such consent as a cigar store wooden Indian. —Kingston Standard.

Our American cousins are great. Hurrah for the eagle and its screech.

But their ignorance of things Canadian is sublime. This is a sample. There are thousands of Americans who have never heard of Toronto. The writer met one once in Reno, Nevada. Soon after he met a lawyer in Lincoln, Nebraska, who, on having the incident of the Reno man's ignorance related to him, laughed loudly and spoke of his high opinion of Toronto (the Capital of Canada). Wouldn't that jar you, and he a lawyer. However, Uncle Sam, the day is coming when you will know all about us, and your daughters will come here to live. We are not bad people even if it does get cold in the winter time. We have lots of big things beside the wheat crop, and out faith in our future is sure. And say, we are not anxious about reciprocity.

PRESCOTT'S PROGRESSIVE PAPER

Why did——stay behind the scenes so long the other night?—Prescott Messenger.

Now, this is what one would call personal journalism. The Prescott Messenger is enterprising. It would be hardly safe in Peterborough. We might have to write something like this; Mr. ——, it is too bad you lost at poker on Sunday night. Mr. A——, you are a liar. Miss B—— what were you doing in the park last night? We cannot afford to adopt these tactics. It might land us in jail.

THE LICENSE LAW

The town of Prince Rupert has from the start been a no-license town. Under local prohibition the illicit sale of bad liquor has proceeded almost unchecked, and drunkenness abounds. The P. R. Empire, which has vainly striven for the enforcement of the law, now comes out boldly in favor of a license system as the only remedy for the existing evil conditions.—Hamilton Herald.

There is a man in Peterborough from Maine. Maine is a prohibition State. This man neither drinks, smokes, chews or swears. He is a good living man. To the writer he stated that prohibition was a farce. He said that in Maine, in his home town, drunkenness was very common. This man has come to Peterborough to assume a responsible position. He is not talking through his hat. He is not talking for a purpose. The Ontario license law is good, as good as can be framed. The law says that under certain conditions liquor can be sold as legally as tea or milk or sugar. The hotel man should be made keep the law. Then there would be no need of the Indian list, no need for many of the tragedies that happen daily all over the country as the result of too much booze. When the hotel man breaks the law, why, soak him.

SIDE LIGHTS

FROM THE PERSIAN.

Edward Fitzgerald.

Alas for those who having tasted once
Of that forbidden vintage of the lips
That, press'd and pressing, from each other drew
The draught that so intoxicates them both,
That, while upon the wings of Day and Night,
Time rustles on, and Moons do wax and wane,
As from the very Well of Life they drink,
And, drinking, fancy they shall never drain,
But rolling Heaven from his ambush whispers,
"So, in my license is it not set down;
Ah for the sweet societies I make
At Morning, and before the Night-fall break;
Ah for the bliss that coming Night fills up,
And Morn looks in to find an empty cup!"

Sarnia Canadian.

Britannia still rules the waves, so far as the mercantile marine is concerned. More than one half the mercantile marine of the world flies the British flag. Fifty years ago the proportion was 56.4 per cent. to-day it is 59.2 per cent. There were times during the intervening period when it was much greater but the remarkable fact that all the other nations of the earth can only muster 40 per cent. of the world's shipping between them makes a marvellous showing for Great Britain.

WOMEN AND CHILDREN.

Kansas Issue.

The following letter was received the other day by the editor, written by a woman who signs her name and gives her address;—

Dear Sir,—Will you please tell me what to do with a man that drinks three days straight, while he has scarlet fever in his family, everything eaten up and no money in the house. I have four children to feed and a baby nine months old to nurse. When he gets a few dollars it is nothing but the saloon, and I get what is left. There is even no money to pay for the doctor, and I had to stop taking in washing on account of scarlet fever in the house.

"Let whiskey alone and it will let you alone." What a contemptible lie. This poor woman and her children never touch it. Here is a situation that we would commend to the personal liberty advocates.

ACCIDENTS IN LONDON.

Montreal Gazette.

The British Home Office has published a statement which shows that in London streets in 1909 there were 303 fatal and 13,388 other accidents. Of those with fatal results, 86 were ascribed to motor cars and cycles, and 59 to motor omnibuses, 26 to mechanical tramways, 3 to horse tramways, 9 to horse omnibuses, and 120 to other horse vehicles. The proportion due to accidents to horse vehicles seems large, and that due to tramways small. There may in the latter connection be opportunity for people on this continent learning some lessons from the English city.

WORTH OF HIS MONEY.

St. Louis Mirror.

This is a jury room secret that has come into circulation in some mysterious way; "Look here," said one of the jurymen, after they had retired, "If I understand aright, the plaintiff doesn't ask damages for blighted affections or anything of that sort, but only wants to get back what he has spent on presents, pleasure trips, and so forth."

"That is so," agreed the foreman. "Well, then, I vote we don't give him a penny," said the other hastily. "If all the fun he had with that girl didn't cover the amount he expended, it must be his own fault. Gentlemen, I courted that girl once myself."

HOW THEY GET RICH

Winnipeg Tribune

As an illustration of the way the cost of the eastern end of the G. T. P. R. has more than doubled the original estimates, the land dealt at St. Boniface may be quoted. A piece of land was offered at $99,000, but a couple of middlemen came into the game, secured an option, and the commission bought from them at $222,000, leaving $23,000 rake-off. It's the same all along the line.

EXPERT OPINION

Henry Clews & Co., Sept. 17.

The most disturbing feature in the market at present is the political situation. All indications point to liberal Democratic gains in November, and possibly a Democratic Congress after the next session. The present strong drift towards radicalism is not much relished in financial circles, especially as there is every propect of more or less radical legislation when members elected next November take their seats. It is to be hoped that the present wave of radicalism will later on be checked; for the political outlook is anything but assuring, and is regarded with some apprehension in high financial circles. General trade continues quiet. Our iron and copper industries are still suffering fro moverproduction and the textile markets from the abnormal price of cotton. Nevertheless, there is no unsoundness in the business outlook which a period of quiet and moderate liquidation will not effectually cure.

A Romance of Arizona

Novelized From Edmund Day's Melodrama

By JOHN MURRAY and MILLS MILLER

"Jack ain't back yet?" Polly put the question.

"No; he rode over for the mail."

Polly rearranged the chairs in the room, picking up and replacing the articles on the table to suit her own artistic conceptions. She straightened out a war bonnet on the wall. She was flicking off a spot of dust on the gilt chair that Jack had got as a wedding present for Echo on the day of the station agent's murder, and, being reminded of the tragedy, she asked, "That posse didn't catch the parties that killed Terrill, did they?"

"Not that I hear on. Slim Hoover he took the boys that night an' tried to pick up the trail after it entered the river, but they couldn't find where it come out."

"One of them fellers, the man that left the station alone and probably done the job, rode a pacin' horse," answered Jim between puffs of his pipe.

"Then he's a stranger to these parts. Jack's pinto paces. It's his regular gait. It's the only pacin' hoss around here."

"That's so," he assented, but made no further comment. The full force of the observation did not strike him at the time.

Polly began to pump Colonel Jim. There were several recent happenings which she did not fully comprehend. At the inquisitive age and a girl, she wanted to know all that was going on.

"Jack's been actin' mighty queer of late," she ventured, "like he's got somethin' on his mind."

Jim smiled at her simplicity and jokingly replied, "Well, he's married."

The retort exasperated Polly. She was not meeting with the success she desired. "Do hush!" she cried in her annoyance.

"That's enough on any man's mind," Jim laughed as he sauntered out of the door.

"Somethin' queer about Jack," observed Polly, seating herself at the table. "He ain't been the same man since the weddin'. He's all right when Echo's around, but when he thinks no one is watchin' him he sits around an' sighs."

Jack entered the room at this moment. Absentmindedly he hung his hat and spurs on a rack and leaned his rifle against the wall, sighing deeply as he did so. So engrossed was he in his thoughts that he did not notice Polly until he reached the table. He started in surprise when he saw her. "Hello, Polly!" was his greeting. "Where is Echo?"

Polly rose hastily at the sound of his voice.

"Didn't you meet her?" she asked. "We got her to ride over toward Tucson this mornin' to get her out of the way so's to snake the pianny in without her seein' it." Polly glided over to the instrument and touched the keys softly.

With admiration Jack gazed at the instrument.

"I came around by Florence," answered Jack, with a smile.

Eagerly Polly turned toward him. "See anything of Bud Lane?" she queried.

"No." Again Jack smiled, this time at the girl's impetuosity.

"He'll lose his job with me if he don't call more regular," she said. "Say, Jack, you ain't fergettin' what you promised—to help Bud with the money that you said was comin' in soon as Dick's share of a speculation you and him was pardners in? I'm powerful anxious to get him away from McKee."

Jack had not forgotten the promise; but, alas, under the goading of Mrs. Allen that he should clear off the mortgage on his home, he had used Dick Lane's money for this purpose. In what a mesh of lies and broken promises he was entangling himself! Now he was forced further to deceive trusting little Polly in the matter that was dearest to her heart.

"No, Polly, but the fact is—that speculation isn't turning out so well, after all."

The disappointed girl turned sadly away and went out to Mrs. Allen in the kitchen.

Jack removed his belt and gun and hung them on the rack by the door. Spying Echo's father at the corral, he called to him to come into the house.

"Hello, Jack!" was Allen's greeting as he entered, shaking the younger man's hand.

"When did you come over?"

"This mornin'," Allen told him. "Echo's birthday, you know, an' the old lady allowed we'd have to be here. Ain't seen you since the weddin'. Got things lookin' fine here." Allen slowly surveyed the room.

Jack agreed with him with a gesture of assent. A more important topic to him than the furnishing of a room was what had become of Dick Lane. After the wedding ceremony no chance had come to him to speak privately to Allen.

The festivities of the wedding had been shortened. Slim had gathered a posse and taken up the trail of the slayers. Jim Allen had joined them. The hazing of Jack and the hasty departure of the bridal pair on horseback in a shower of corn, shelled and on the cob, prevented the two men from meeting.

The older man had volunteered no explanation. Jack knew that in his heart Allen did not approve of his actions, but was keeping silent because of his daughter.

Jack could restrain himself no longer. "Jim, what happened that night?" he asked brokenly.

Allen showed his embarrassment. Meanin' "— Then he hesitated.

"Dick," was all Jack could say.

"I seed him. If I hadn't he busted up the weddin' some," was his laconic answer.

"Where is he?"

Allen relighted his pipe. When he got the smoke drawing freely he gazed at Jack thoughtfully and answered, "He's gone, back where the come from—into the desert." Jim puffed slowly and then added, "Looks like you didn't give Dick a square deal."

Allen liked his son-in-law and was going to stand by him, but in Arizona the saying "All's fair in love and war" is not accepted at its face value.

"I didn't," acknowledged Jack. "I was desperate at the thought of losing her. She loved me and had forgotten him. She's happy with me now."

"I reckon that's right," was Jim's consoling reply.

To clinch his argument and soothe his troublesome conscience Jack continued, "She never would have been happy with him."

"That's what I told him," declared Allen. "He knew it, an' that's why he went away, an' Echo, no matter what comes, she must never know. She'd never forgive you—an', fer that matter, me neither."

Jack looked long out of the window toward the distant mountains, the barrier behind which Dick was wandering in the great desert, cut off from the woman he loved by a false friend.

"How I have suffered for that lie!" uttered Jack in tones full of anguish. "That's what hurts me most—the thought that I lied to her. I might have killed him that night," pondered Jack. He shuddered at the thought that he had been on the point of adding murder to the lie. He had faced the same temptation which Dick had yet to overcome.

"Mebbe you did. There's more'n one way of killin' a man," suggested Allen.

Jack swung around and faced him. The observation had struck home. He realized how poignantly Dick must have endured the loss of Echo and the thought of his betrayal by Jack. As he had suffered mentally so Dick must be suffering in the desert. In self justification he returned to his old argument.

"I waited until I was sure he was dead. Six months I waited after we heard the news. After I had told Echo I loved her and found that I was loved in return—then came this letter. God, what a fight I had with myself when I found that he still lived—was thinking of returning home to claim her for his own! I rode out into the hills and fought it out all alone, like an Indian. Then I resolved to hurry the wedding—to lie to her—and I have been living that lie every minute, every hour."

Jack leaned heavily on the table. His head sank. His voice dropped almost to a whisper.

Allen slapped him on the back to cheer him up. Philosophically he announced: "Well, it's got to be as it is. You'll mebbe never hear from him again. You mustn't never tell her. I ain't a-goin' to say nothin' about it. Her happiness means everything to me."

Jack grasped his hand in silent thankfulness.

The two men walked slowly out of the room to the corral.

CHAPTER XI.

As Echo galloped across the prairie in the glorious morning air the sunshine, the lowing of the cattle on the hills and the songs of the birds in the trees along the Sweetwater had banished all depressing thoughts, and her mind dwelt on her love for Jack and the pleasantness of the lines in which her life had fallen.

Only one small cloud had appeared on the horizon. Jack had not shared with her his confidences in the business of the ranch. He told her he did not want to worry her with such cares. True, there were times when he was deeply abstracted, but in her presence his moroseness vanished quickly. Carefully as he had tried to hide his secret, she had, with a woman's intuition, seen beneath the surface of things and realized that something was lacking to complete her happiness.

As Echo turned toward home a song sprang to her lips. Polly spied her far down the trail.

"Boys, she's comin'," she shouted to the men, who were at the bunk house awaiting Mrs. Payson's return. As they passed the corral they called to Jack and Allen to join them in the living room to prepare for the surprise for Echo.

The party quickly reassembled.

"Good land," shouted Allen, "get somethin' to cover the pianny with!"

The punchers rushed in confusion about the room in a vain search.

"Ain't there a plagued thing we can cover that pianny with?" cried the demoralized Allen, renewing his appeal.

Polly came to the rescue of the helpless men by plucking a Navajo blanket from the couch. Tossing one end of it to Show Low, she motioned to him to help hold it up before the instrument like a curtain.

"Stand in front of it, everybody," ordered Mrs. Allen, who had left her cake baking and hurried in from the kitchen. "Polly, spread your skirts—you, too, Jim."

Allen ran in front of the piano, holding out an imaginary dress in imitation of Polly. "Which I ain't got none," he cried.

Parenthesis jumped in front of the piano stool, trying vainly to hide it with his legs.

"Parenthesis, put your legs together," Mrs. Allen cried.

"I can't, ma'am," wailed the unfortunate puncher. He fell on his knees before the stool, spreading out his waistcoat for a screen. Mrs. Allen helped him out with her skirts.

"Steady, everybody!" shouted Jack.

"Here she is!" yelled Sagebrush as the door opened and the astonished Echo faced those she loved and liked.

Echo made a pretty picture framed in the doorway. She wore her riding habit of olive green, from the hem of which peeped her soft boots. Her hat, broad, picturesque, typical of the southwest, had slipped backward, forming a background for her pretty face. An amused smile played about the corners of her mouth.

"Well, what is it?" she smiled inquiringly.

The group looked at her sheepishly. No one ventured to answer her question.

"What's the matter?" she resumed. "You're herded up like a bunch of cows in a norther."

Sagebrush began gravely to explain. He got only as far as "This here bein' a birthday" when Echo interrupted him: "Oh! Then it's a birthday party?"

Once stopped, Sagebrush could not get started again. He cleared his throat with more emphasis than politeness. Striking the attitude of an orator, with one hand upraised and the other on his hip, he hemmed and hawed until beads of perspiration trickled from his temples.

Again he nerved himself for the ordeal.

"Mebbe," he gasped.

Then he opened and closed his mouth, froglike, several times, taking long, gulping breaths. At last, looking helplessly about him, he shouted, "Oh, shucks, you tell her, Jack!" He pushed him toward Echo. Jack rested his hand on the table and began, "We've a surprise for you—that is, the boys have"—

"What is it?" asked Echo eagerly.

"You've got to call it blind," broke in Sagebrush.

"Guess it," cried Fresno.

"A pony cart," hazarded Echo.

"Shucks, no!" said Show Low at the idea of presenting Echo with anything on wheels.

Echo then guessed, "Sewing machine."

Sagebrush encouraged her. "That's somethin' like it. Go on, go on."

"Well, then, it's a"—

Sagebrush grew more excited. He raised and lowered himself on his toes, backing toward the piano. "Go it; you're gettin' there," he shouted.

"It's a"—

Again she hesitated, to be helped on by Sagebrush with the assurance: "She'll do it. Fire away. It's a"—

"A"—

"Go on."

Sagebrush in his enthusiasm backed too far into the blanket screen. His spurs became entangled. To save himself from a fall he threw out his hand behind him. They struck the polished cover of the instrument, slid off, and Sagebrush sat down on the keys with an unmistakable crash.

"A piano!" cried Echo exultantly.

"Who done that?" demanded Show Low angrily.

Parenthesis from his place on the floor looked at the mischief maker in disgust. "Sagebrush!" he shouted.

"Givin' the bull thing away," snarled Fresno.

SAVED FROM AN OPERATION

By Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Belleriver, Que.—"Without Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I would not be alive. For five months I had painful and irregular periods and inflammation of the uterus. I suffered like a martyr and thought often of death. I consulted two doctors who could do nothing for me. I went to a hospital, and the best doctors said I must submit to an operation, because I had a tumor. I went back home much discouraged. One of my cousins advised me to take your Compound, as it had cured her. I did so and soon commenced to feel better, and my appetite came back with the first bottle. Now I feel no pain and am cured. Your remedy is deserving of praise."—Mrs. EMMA CHATEL, Valleyfield, Belleriver, Quebec.

Another Operation Avoided.

Adrian, Ga.—"I suffered untold misery from female troubles, and my doctor said an operation was my only chance, and I dreaded it almost as much as death. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound completely cured me without an operation."—LENA V. HENRY, R.F.D. 3.

Thirty years of unparalleled success confirms the power of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to cure female diseases.

What the Knife Said.

"Some folks want funny inscriptions engraved on their silver," said the jeweler. "Takes wedding knives. Many wedding cakes are such mountainous affairs that a special knife is required to cut them. One of last month's brides cut her cake with a knife that was a present from her aunt. I guess not many of the guests got to read the inscription; if they had they would be talking about it yet. Those knives are supposed to be used for cutting the bride's cake and then laid on the shelf for the rest of time, but the aunt couldn't distinguish, apparently, between wedding and birthday cakes, for she made us engrave on the knife, 'May I serve thee well and often'."

The Educated Chinaman.

To the ordinary Chinaman one talks pigeon English, but it is not always possible to know who is an ordinary Chinaman. I was once in Shanghai and saw two English sailors who wanted to be directed to the quay. One of them said, "Here, ask that old chink walking along there." So the other went up to a stately looking Chinaman and said, "Hi, Johnny, you telle me chop-chop which way velly good water is?" The Chinaman stared at him in cold scorn. "If," he said, "you will speak to me in proper English I will answer you."—London Mail.

How Far the Blood Travels.

The mileage of the blood circulation reveals some astonishing facts. It has been calculated, for instance, that, assuming the heart to beat sixty-nine times a minute at ordinary pressure, the blood goes at the rate of 207 yards in a minute, or nine miles an hour, 220 miles a day and 80,000 miles a year. If a man eighty-four years old could have had one single blood corpuscle floating in his blood all his life it would have traveled in that time nearly 7,000,000 miles.

AWAKENING OF SCIENCE

TO THE VALUE OF FRUIT

What is "FRUIT-A-TIVES"?

Medical men are just beginning to realize the possibilities of fruit in curing disease. Its action on the liver, kidneys and skin is wonderful. Yet fruit in its raw state is impracticable in treating disease because of the minute quantity of the active or curative principle contained in fruit juice.

A physician in Ottawa, after years of patient work, discovered a process, whereby the medicinal or bitter principle of fruit juice is increased in quantity and thus a more active and more valuable substance is obtained.

"Fruit-a-tives" is the only medicine in the world made of fruit.

Hundreds of prominent people in every section of the Dominion owe their good health to "Fruit-a-tives." Hundreds more are daily becoming stronger and better by taking them. "Fruit-a-tives" is daily proving its inestimable value as a natural cure in all cases of Constipation, Biliousness, Torpid Liver, Backache and Headache, Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Kidney and Skin Troubles.

50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, or trial box, 25c. Sold by all dealers, or sent, postpaid, on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

HE LECTURED ON THE NEEDS OF SOUTH AMERICA

Mr. Robert Long, of Brandon, University, was at Murray street church last evening and spoke at the meeting of the Young People's Society.

Mr. Long's subject was one with which he is well acquainted. He vividly described the country of South America, told the story of its earliest history, down to the present day, described the people, their spiritual needs and the efforts put forth to evangelize them. The lecture was illustrated by means of a blackboard. He also touched on the mineral wealth of the country.

A large number of people attended the lecture and the chairman was Mr. Bruce Quinn.

LISTER GOT LIQUOR AT REQUEST OF EMPLOYER

Did Not Drink However—The Magistrate Quoted Scripture--Judgment Reserved.

The limit was reached in a blacklist case at the police court this morning.

Instead of there being a procurer for the prohibited one, the boot was upon the other foot, and it was a case of the lister procuring whiskey for another, not served by Inspector Stewart. His offence came under the "possession" part of the clause in the Liquor Act.

It all happened like this. The regular charge was read to the lister, with the date fixed at Saturday, September 10. He pleaded guilty.

On being called to the witness box to explain where he got the liquor, he stated that, while doing some carpenter work for an employer on George street, the latter complained of not feeling well. He (witness) was then asked to go out and purchase some whiskey, but his reply was that he was on the list.

"Well, I'm not," replied the other.

Then witness said he would go out and see what he could do. Arriving at Kingan's corner, and waiting for about ten minutes he met a friend from down near Garden Hill, who did not know of his being posted. Fifty cents parted company and the friend purchased a flask of whiskey. On the return to his work witness said the flask was still sealed and remained in that condition up to the time his employer placed it in a drawer, with the remark that he would use it when in need.

In answer to His Worship witness said that he had not taken any of the liquor and that he had not had a drink since last Good Friday, and that was in Lindsay.

Isn't there something in the Bible which says, "Cursed is he that putteth the cup to his neighbor's lips?" queried the Magistrate. No answer came from the witness, but the Chief thought that there was.

"You couldn't drink it yourself, but you would get it for some other poor devil," was the magesterial comment.

Judgment was reserved.

A NIGHT OF KNIGHTS

Three Members Given a Fitting Farewell by the Knights of Phythias

The members of Marathon Lodge, No. 39, Knights of Pythias, assembled at the dining parlours of the Peterborough Lunch Co., last evening to bid farewell to Messrs. W. W. Armstrong, Thos. Savigny and Melleville Halladay, who leave this week for the west. The occasion was a pleasant one for all, songs music, speeches and a tasty repast, making a splendid programme. Smith's orchestra provided excellent music, and Mr. F. R. Clarke gave several banjo selections, including his ever welcome "Watermelon" song.

Toasts were proposed and responded to in a happy manner, and the singing of "For they are jolly good fellows," "Auld Lang Syne" and the National anthem, brought the affair to a close.

Messrs. McDonald and Jacobi, are deserving of great credit for the manner in which they prepared the spread and which was up to their past reputation for excellence.

BY THE WAY

What makes us growl and kick and fume,
And at the cat hurl mother's broom?
That cold.

What sticks to us and will not leave,
And makes our friends each for us grieve?
That cold.

What makes us pull on winter clothes
And makes us think of frosts and snows?
That cold.

What makes us sneeze with all our might,
And brings the dope box out each night?
That cold.

HARDWARE CONVENTION AND EXHIBITION AT PETERBOROUGH

Arrangements Well Under Way for Sixth Annual Convention of Ontario Retail Hardware and Stove Dealers Association—About Two-thirds of the Space in Large Armouries Already Allotted to Exhibitors.

(From "Hardware and Metal.")

Plans for the big convention to be held by the Ontario Retail Hardware and Stove Dealers' Association at Peterborough, February 21 to 24, 1911, are nearing completion, and it is is expected that a meeting of the executive committee will be held next month to complete the arrangements and deal with other business before the Association.

The fact that this is to be the first convention held east of Toronto, is exciting a great deal of interest amongst hardware men in Eastern Ontario, and it is expected that there will be a greatly increased attendance from eastern and northern Ontario, while the members from western Ontario will be on hand in equally large numbers as in previous years as Peterborough is only a short distance east of Toronto.

As in previous years the convention will cover four days. The present plan is to devote every afternoon from 1.30 to 4.30 to convention business, the exhibition hall being closed during these hours. In the mornings the convention committees will meet.

The exhibition will probably be open each morning from 9 to 12 and from 4.30 to 6 each afternoon. Besides this the exhibition will likely be open Tuesday and Wednesday evenings, the first night to hardware men only with a special program of friendship creating fun, and the second night, a band concert being provided and the general public admitted, while the retailers are in an educational "Question Box" session.

Certain hours will also be named each morning when Peterborough hardware manufacturers will be "at home" to visiting retailers.

On Thursday night exhibitors and retailers will fraternize again in a social event, which it is expected will excel in real enjoyment all previous gatherings.

The accompanying plan shows that the exhibition is to be on a much larger scale than attempted at previous conventions. The securing of the big armouries, 80x176 feet in size, made it possible to allow larger spaces to exhibitors, and booths at Peterborough will all have a frontage of twelve feet and a depth of ten feet, making 120 square feet, compared with 68 square feet at London, the prices charged being practically the same, and that exhibitors at previous conventions appreciate the opportunity of bringing their new goods before the retailers at the convention is shown by the advance booking so far made in response to circular letters sent out in August:

THE EXHIBITION.

Metallic Roofing Co., Steel Trough and Machine Co., Boeckh Brothers, Limited, Cummer-Dowswell, Limited, International Varnish Company, Canada Paint Company, S. F. Bowser Mfg. Company, Dunlop Tire & Rubber Goods Co., D. Maxwell & Sons, Standard Paint Co., Moffat Stove Co., Gendron Mfg. Co., Supreme Heating Co., Pittsburg Perfect Fence Co., Lewis Bros., Limited, Clare Bros., Limited, Onward Mfg. Co., Gillette Safety Razor Co., Lufkin Rule Co., McClary Mfg. Co., D. Moore Co., Brantford Roofing Co., Tobin Arms Manufacturing Co., Carborundum Co., Goldie & McCullough, Imperial Varnish Co., Oneida Community, Under option—Northern Aluminum Co., Brandram-Henderson, Limited, James Robertson Co., Rapid Tool Co., F. W. Bird & Son.

The above shows over two-thirds of the booths already booked over five months in advance of the convention dates. The two large spaces at the end are being reserved for special exhibits to be made of "Made in Peterborough" hardware and "Philadelphia made Hardware," plans being nearly completed for a composite display to be made by five Philadelphia firms, North Bros., Disston Saw Co., Enterprise Mfg. Co., Fayette R. Plumb Co., and the Miller Lock Co., and for a similar display by Peterborough hardware manufacturers.

At St. Mary's, N. B., a Scott Act inspector seized 240 bottles and two kegs of liquor at a "temperance" hotel.

A Levis despatch states that Mr. C. M. Colmay, of New York, is considering the erection of a million dollar hotel there, probably in Shaw's Park.

BARN DESTROYED

Fire at Residence of Dr. Rogers in Monaghan Just Outside City Limits—Loss of Barn and Contents Placed at $1600—Electaic Wiiing Given as Cause.

At three o'clock this morning the fire brigade received a call to the home of Dr. Rogers, the veterinary surgeon, who lives on the gravel road, Charlotte street, a short distance over the boundary line between the city and North Monaghan township.

A barn belonging to the doctor took fire, the electric wiring being responsible, it is said, and was burned to the ground with all its contents.

Dr. Rogers had recently built a house on the property and is only occupying two rooms of it. The most of his household furniture was in the barn and this and two buggies, harness, veterinary instruments and other contents were destroyed.

The loss is estimated at $1,600 partially covered by insurance.

CANOE COMPANY GET THE STRIP OF KING ST. LAND

At the meeting of the Manufacturers' Committee last night the committee agreed to recommend to the City Council that the Peterborough Canoe Company get the strip of land 21 ft. by 98 ft. they asked for on King street in return for 165 feet by 50 feet from the company along the water front south of the company's property.

When the committee met last night and the matter was presented, there was a misunderstanding as to the extent of the city's concession and Ald. Bradburn thought the city was geting enough in return.

Those present were chairman, Ald. Gillespie; Ald. Turner, Bradburn, Dufus, and Morgan, and Industrial Commissioner Duggan and Mr. H. C. Rogers, of the Peterborough Canoe Company.

Attention

All members of Queen Alexandra Circle No. 136, A. O. F., are earnestly requested to be present to-morrow (Wednesday) evening, at eight o'clock sharp. As matters of importance is to be discussed. E. J. Martin, Sec.

A HANDICAP TO OVERCOME

The Peterborough Fair was a big success. It made a good impression in spite of the ramshackle main building. Everybody seemed pleased with the fair.

But in pictures, stage settings and fall fairs, the environment is lent to quite an extent by the surroundings.

The proper atmosphere cannot be obtained from such delapidated buildings as at present grace or rather disgrace—the Peterborough Fair grounds? And besides that the present buildings are absolutely inadequate and unsuitable in every way.

It's pretty nearly up to the city to buy the present grounds or some grounds suitable and the fair society will put up buildings that will be a credit to the exhibition and in keeping with the importance of Peterborough's annual fall fair.

It's an issue that deserves immediate consideration. The fair directors are willing and ready.

What about the town?

BRIEF AND BREEZY

The hockey enthusiast is asking question these days. He wants to know what is what. The fact of these being several outside men roaming about the town gives color to the street corner talk regarding the prospects for a real live team. The time is not ripe for correct dope to be given out. Meanwhile let's hope for the best.

Isn't it pretty near time to call a meeting on behalf of the proposed Junior O.R.F.U. team or is it the intention of the intention of stumbling along any old way as long as fourteen men can be placed on the team to represent Peterborough when the time arrives for a game.

Peterborough, according to Buck Irving, of Guelph, will be interested in a professional league this season and Belleville is mentioned as a side partner. It looks good, but you can bet that the kind of pro. hockey that has been played up west for the last couple of years, wouldn't take a little bit around these parts. Call it off.

The kids made a good showing at the Brock street rink last season, and what is necessary is a little encouragement. Two of them, Lane, unfortunately removed elsewhere, but there are others. The fact of a player being on the "outside" shouldn't debar him from getting a decent invitation to come out and show what he can do. And he shouldn't pass unnoticed until half the season is over.

WHEN CONNIE MACK TOOK HIS TURN WITH BIG MIT

They tell a lot of good stories about stuff Connie Mack pulled off when he used to catch behind the bat and talked opponents into going out.

Mack was with Pittsburg, and Gumbert was pitching. Chicago, with only one run needed to tie and two out, had the bases filled and Anson up. The old man was the terror of all pitchers in that day, and never landed harder on a ball than when a bit meant runs.

But Anson was the perfect judge of a ball, and never would aim at bad ones. The ball at which he swung had to cut the plate. On this occasion Gumbert was a trifle wild, and the first two balls were wide. The third cut the plate and Anse let it go. The next was another strike, but still the old man waited. He could hit just as well with two strikes as none, and anyway a base on balls would tie the score.

It was a critical situation, for if Gumbert put the next ball over it was a cinch that the old man would land on it hard, and perhaps break up the game. The catcher of to-day would have waited like a sheep and let the pitcher work out his own salvation, but the backstops of that day were resourceful.

Mack thought it was up to him, so he ran down to Gumbert and gave him the injunction to pitch the next ball just a little wide of the plate, and then stay in position to pitch, waiting for a signal from Mack.

Gumbert curved one about eight inches outside the plate, and Anson never moved to hit at it.

"Good strike, AD!" yelled Connie, as he grabbed off his mask and started for the bench, as though the side were out.

"Strike!" shouted Anson, wheeling half around to the umpire to protest.

"I didn't say so," remarked the arbitrator. "Three balls."

Before Anson could turn back to position Mack gave the sign to Gumbert. Ad. sent the ball straight over the heart. Nothing in Mack's attitude told that he was expecting the pitch. He didn't have his mask on he wasn't in position to catch, for he had been standing three feet away from the plate to distact Anson's attention.

Anson never got his bat off his shoulder.

"Three strikes," yelled the umpire Connie just managed to bat the ball down and touch the home plate, thus retiring the man who was on third.

Anson kicked and stormed for 20 minutes, but there was no reversing the decision, for he had never been out of the box, time wasn't called and Gumbert had been in a legal position to pitch when the ball was delivered.

TWO BIG STARS ON TOBOGGAN

The bell is almost ringing for the two greatest pitchers in the National League. Christy Mathewson and Mordecai Brown are nearly done, so far as the speed, the fooling curves and the general mechanical execution are concerned. Other pitchers, handicapped as they are now, would have been shunted to the soup before this time, but these two held on and win game after game because they have think tanks.

Both Brown and Matty are being slammed ever so often now. Even their wizard-like control is not what is used to be. When the records are made out of 1910 they will show that more hits per game were made off Brown and Matty than ever before in their previous career, and that they issued more bases on balls These two old foxes are worth a dozen youngsters even now, and the way they win is the grandest display of actual pitching art that the game can show.

MARSH WANTS TO RUN HORSE

Says the Calgary Herald:—John D. Marsh, the Canadian Marathon runner left the city yesterday. Before going he stated to the Herald that he was willing to bet $200 that he can beat any horse in Calgary in a 26 mile race, providing the rules which governed the Shrubb race with a horse are strictly kept. He is willing to enter a free-for-all race with five or six horses under the same conditions, but he will not put up money on the result of such a race.

Marsh has several races booked for the next two weeks, but if a race can be arranged with a horse he will return.

WE WANT MORE BOYS

The paper the people value is the paper delivered at the home. Of course large numbers of The DAILY REVIEW are sold on the street, but the home delivery is what counts.

We want more boys for more routes. We want more boys to handle their own routes, just as plenty of boys are now doing.

Let us have names of boys willing to carry routes, and to sell papers. One cent per copy to the boy—who sells for 2 cents, or for 10 cents per week.

ACTION FOR $3000 DAMAGES

Writ Against Bishop Construction Co. on Behalf of Michael Sullivan--Physician Appointed to Examine Plaintiff as to Extent of Injuries Received in Accident at Dam

Sullivan v. Bishop Construction Co.—T. N. Phelan for defendant, M. L. Gordon for plaintiff. Motion by defendant for a physical examination of plaintiff. Order made for examination by Dr. McNulty at a time and place to be appointed by him.—Toronto World.

Michael Sullivan fell off the new waterworks dam last April, and it is asserted he was knocked off by being hit with a form that was being lifted from the pier. He was carried down the river through the logs and ice, it is claimed, for about a mile.

On behalf of Sullivan Messrs. O'Connell and Gordon have issued a writ for $3,000 against the Bishop Construction Company. Robinette, Godfrey and Phelan, of Toronto, have been retained by the Bishop Construction Company, and at their request the physician was appointed to ascertain the extent of Sullivan's injuries.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

The Review does not hold itself responsible for opinions expressed by its correspondents

To the Editor of the Review.

Sir,—As an old citizen, I want to lay my tribute of praise at the feet of Rev. Mr. Trumpour for his courageous and, God knows, timely censure of lax parents and their young. The officers of the law say that immorality is the curse of Canada. In Peterborough it is awful, and in many cases parents are deceived, and let their children persuade them to let them out. The animal instincts of the young are too strong, unless there is a good bringing up behind them, to control them. One half of this community should be going on all fours.

Yours,
A CHILD-LOVER.

HIS DEATH IS DEEPLY REGRETTED

The following, which is taken from the Kingston Whig, relates to the death of Dr. J. M. McCarter, a brother of Mrs. Vincent Eastwood, city, and who passed away after an operation for appendicitis;—

Those who personally knew the late Dr. J. M. McCarter, of Verona, speak in glowing terms of the work he did as physician to the people of this district. He was a hard worker, and some of his sleep was often obtained in his carriage as his horse plodded homeward in the grey morning light after wearing, all-night work. The people he attended mourn his death deeply, for he was good to them all. His remains have been laid at rest in the cemetery at his old home at Almonte.

St. John's Church Notes

A special general meeting of St. John's Anglican Young People's Society was held in the guild room last night, the president, Mr. R. J. Devey, presiding, supported by Rev. Canon Davidson, Rev. Chas. Carpenter and a goodly number of members. It was decided to give a reception to Rev. and Mrs. Carpenter on Monday, Oct. 3rd, and all young people of the congregation are warmly invited to take a part. The social feature of the gathering will take the form of an apron and tie social, and a pleasant evening is assured. Reports of the year's work and financial condition of the society were given, and suggestions invited as to the programme for the new season's work, and helpful addresses were given by the clergy. An interesting meeting closed with prayer at 10 o'clock.

The members of St. John's choir are asked to assemble in the vestry at 7.30 p.m. on Thursday night, to get their books to attend the Harvest Festival service at St. Luke's. Repeated Next Year

The London Teachers' Association, with a membership of 16,500, arranged for a trip to Canada during the summer vacation this year. The party visited Quebec, Montreal, MacDonald College, St. Annes de Bellievue, Ottawa, Algonquin National Park, Muskoka Lakes, Toronto, Niagara Falls, and returned through the Thousand Islands and St. Lawrence Rapids to Montreal. In the September number of the "London Teacher" an account of the trip is given, and it shows how thoroughly the party enjoyed their trip. The originator, Mr. Thos. Gautrey, has written to the European Traffic Manager of the Grand Trunk System, through whom the trip was arranged, expressing gratification at the admirable way in which all the arrangements were carried out and intimating that the party was most enthusiastic, and that the trip, which covered the most attractive portions of Quebec and and Ontario, will certainly be repeated next year.

ROD AND GUN FOR SEPTEMBER

With the opening of the bird shooting season the September number, of Rod and Gun in Canada, published by W. J. Taylor, Limited, Woodstock, Ont., gives a number of delightful stories dealing with days amongst the ducks, geese, woodcock and prairie chickens—experience which will cause many a thrill to sportsmen reading them. Numbers will be able to duplicate, in remembrance, many of these published experiences, and in this way live over again red letter times in their histories. Variety marks this production, every lover of the outdoors, whatever his particular taste, receiving attention. The story of two young moose, one of a pet raccoon, the efforts of an amateur to trap a bear, particulars of the American bison, the Alpine Club's last camp and some dog lore show the manner in which the magazine covers the wide variety of outdoor life. The verses in this number are excellent, and the Bohemian ring of "Fishin's Good" will find an echo with many even of the most staid. "My Little Irishman," with his wonderful story of the monster that got away, while the "Evening Chorus" is equally good. The issue should be found with every shooting party this season.

It Saves You Waiting

On Saturdays we have so many persons who drive long distances or come by train, that we are unable to promise appointments for that day, but we wait upon persons in turn. Many persons call write or phone for appointment, we then reserve time for such and it saves them much waiting, as the time so given is kept open for them. We make such appointments for any day or evening other than Saturday. Evening is quite as good as day time for the eye examination, but it is necessary to arrange for this a day or two in advance.

OPEN DOOR HOPELESS

Lord Brassey Discusses Britain's Trade With Canada.

London, Sept. 21.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—At the annual conference of the Association of Chambers of Commerce, which has opened at Leeds, in his presidential address, Lord Brassey took what he described as a new venture. He described his recent cruise to Newfoundland and Canada, and after emphasizing their remarkable progress, he dealt with Canada as a market for British goods. He said that in many lines Britain could compete with the United States, but that consignments for Britain far exceeded those from all other countries.

It would be vain to look for admittance through the open door into Canadian markets. The manufacturers of the Dominion gave employment to some 400,000 workers, but were unable, as yet, to compete with the huge factories of the United States and the skilled factory labor of this country. There was, however, a movement in the far west for a reduction of duties, and he pointed out that Sir Wilfrid Laurier on his recent tour said that the Canadian tariff must be gradually reduced.

Britain was grateful to the states of the outer Empire as customers for goods and for supplies of food, but there was another benefit which they conferred, far reaching in its effects, of momentous import in relation to industry and finance, namely, the borrowing of sums for railways and public works, built mainly with British capital.

A resolution in favor of Imperial immigration for land settlement and the desirability of holding an Imperial conference on the subject was carried unanimously.

ACQUITTED OF BIGAMY

Cobourg, Sept. 21.—A. Speirs of Port Hope was tried here yesterday on a charge of bigamy. In Februray, 1873, he married his first wife in New York, and deserted her, leaving seven children. Ten years ago he again married in Cobourg.

Speirs was acquitted on the ground that he had lived seven years without knowing his first wife was still alive.

This being Judge Huycke's first court in his native town, short complimentary addresses were made by H. A. Ward, K.C., and Crown Attorney W. F. Kerr, K.C.

WHO PAYS THE PIPER?

Montreal, Sept. 21.—If a train runs off the track on the uncompleted G.T.P. Railway between Winnipeg and Lake Superior while it is carrying the 1910 grain crop to water, who will pay the piper? That is the question that is agitating the Government, the contractors, the G.T.P., and even the wheat people of the west. The railway refuses to take the risk, claiming that it should rest with the contractors until the road is out of the contractors' hands. At the same time they would like to start earning dividends and to get a share of the western grain crop movement. The track is finished and trains are going over it daily, but they are Contractor McArthur's trains, and not for business traffic.

TAILOR GETS AFTER HIM

New York, Sept. 21.—Notice of service by substitution in the suit brought by Wm. Barnes, a tailor, to recover $987 he claims Robert Winthrop Chanler owes him for wearing apparel, including the suit in which Mr. Chanler led Lina Cavalieri, the singer, to the altar, was filed with the clerk of the city court yesterday.

It is in connection with this application that the validity of the famous Chanler-Cavalieri pre-nuptial agreement will be tested. If the court names a receiver to take charge of Chanler's possessions, it will, it is said, in legal circles, amount to practically a decision that the singer has no legal claim on the goods and chattels the bridegroom bestowed upon her.

LENIENT TO GAS COMPANY

Berlin, Sept. 21.—Before Sir William Meredith, in the fall assizes, Jas. L. Bastin of Galt brought suit against the Dominion Natural Gas Co. for $25,000, for damages sustained in the natural gas explosion in Galt last winter, which resulted in the death of his wife and daughter and damages to his property. A settlement was effected in court, endorsed by the judge, by which the defendant company pay J. Bastin $3,500 and $200 to cover the costs of the proceedings.

DECLARES ARREST AN OUTRAGE

Winnipeg, Sept. 21.—A. G. S. Smith, commercial traveler of Duluth, who was held by the Winnipeg police for four days on a nominal charge of vagrancy, on suspicion that he was connected with the jewel robbery at the Royal Alexandra Hotel, has been released, largely through the intervention of the United States consul-general and personal friends.

Smith declares that the whole proceeding is an outrage. The fact that he occupied a room on the same floor as Countess Antrim, and that his board bill was not paid, seem to have been some of the excuses for taking him into custody.

IT WILL AWAKE FRENCH SENTIMENT

Ottawa, Sept. 21.—Le Temps, the local French daily, publishes a strongly worded criticism of Mgr. Bourne, Archbishop of Westminster, for his speech on the English language, delivered at the Eucharistic Congress, and of Bishop Fallon of London, in regard to his dealings with the bilingual schools of his diocese.

"It is under the blows of misfortune that apathy disappears," says the editorial part, "and we say to Mgr. Fallon, very well; continue your work of Anglicization, and you will contribute to the awakening, not only in the French-Canadians of your diocese, but also in all our compatriots in Ontario, of the national French sentiment, unfortunately somewhat dormant in some of us."

THE BLOOD LIQUEFIED

Naples, Sept. 21.—The phenomenon of the liquefaction of the blood of St. Januarius took place Monday after prayers lasting 55 minutes, in the presence of a great multitude. The people interpret the rapidity of the liquefaction as proof that the peril from cholera is over.

In the great church at Naples there are preserved the head and some of the blood of Januarius, Bishop of Benevento, who was beheaded for the faith near Puteoli. The blood, as his acts relate, was gathered from the ground by a poor woman at the time of the martyrdom and placed in two small glass vials. On several occasions, it is recorded, his relics were carried in procession during eruptions of Vesuvius. The standing miracle of the liquefaction of the blood of St Januarius consists in bringing the congealed pieces near the head, the vials being placed on the altar, and prayer being made. After a longer or shorter interval the blood is said to become liquid and flow.

MOTOR BOAT RUN DOWN

Brockville, Sept. 21.—Four prominent citizens of Brockville, ex-Mayor Cossitt, H. B. White, Allan Gilmour and W. H. Downey, almost went to the bottom of the St. Lawrence yesterday afternoon by their launch colliding with a log some three miles east of Brockville in mid-stream. The boat, one of the largest and fastest on the river, was going at top speed when the crash came.

The collision not only bent the shaft, putting the engine out of commission but stove a large hole in the keel. The boat quickly swamped, but with life-preservers the quartette succeeded in keeping afloat until assistance came from the shore. The boat sunk just as land was reached.

MABEE DENIES THE RUMOR

Edmonton, Sept. 21.—"There is nothing in it." In these words Chairman Mabee of the Railway Commission, in session here, refuted the story that he was about to be taken into the Dominion Cabinet to replace Hon. A. B. Aylesworth.

Sir Louis Davies, judge of the Supreme Court, put a quietus on another rumored shuffle of the Ottawa Cabinet when asked about the reported resignation of Hon. Frank Oliver to become Lieutenant-Governor of Alberta, and to be succeeded at the head of the Department of the Interior by Premier Sifton. It was all newspaper gossip, he said.

A Homeric Poet.

Dalton, Ga., Sept. 21.—Georgia's "cornfield poet," John W. Groucher of Crow Valley, is dead at the age of 77.

Groucher's celebrity did not extend outside this state, but he had a claim to distinction rarely attained by modern poets. Like many Homeric bards he never wrote his verses, but recited them instead, improvising the meter as he proceeded, and often setting the words to the original and spontaneous musical themes.

JOHN HENDRY OF C.M.A. OPPOSED TO RECIPROCITY

While no Harm Has Yet Been Done, He Says, Canada is Straying Into Dangerous Paths—Parliamentary Committee Reports on the Subject of Compensation to Workmen.

Vancouver, Sept. 21.—The report of the Parliamentary committee of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association, which yesterday convened here for its annual meeting, submits for consideration the very important matter of compensation to workmen. It refers to it as a matter "that will undoubtedly require careful watching," and proceeds:

"While your committee are not in a position to bring in any recommendations, they are inclined to believe that there is a good deal of justice in the contention sometimes put forward that the artisan who works for a wage which is little more than sufficient to support his family, and who, while engaged in his regular occupation, suffers injury through no fault of his own, should be entitled to compensation of some sort without having to fight his case through the courts. They feel, therefore, that the association should be prepared to make some concessions. The tendency, however, on the part of organized labor is to press legislation which will carry things to the other extreme, and, in order to secure for the workman the compensation to which they think he is entitled they would impose upon the employer conditions so arduous as to constitute a very serious tax upon production.

"If the matter could be compromised by relieving from all further claims for compensation those employers who insure their pay roll up to the extent of a year and a half's wages it would seem as though a solution of the difficulty could be reached that would be satisfactory to both sides, for in that event the cost of insurance could be accurately ascertained by the employer beforehand, and provision made for the same, while the employe in the event of an accident would receive the compensation to which he was entitled without having to have recourse to legal process. This arrangement, of course, presupposes that the employe would insure himself for an amount equal to that carried for him by the employer, so that in the event of fatality his family would receive the equivalent of three years' wages, which is generally conceded to be about right."

The committee also notes the establishment in connection with the association of a legal department, in charge of F. W. Wegenast. Its work has already necessitated a considerable addition to the clerical staff. A great deal of attention has been given the British Columbia Companies Act. In addition to the test case before the Supreme Court relative to the federal power for the granting of company charters, steps have also been taken to bring to the attention of the Provincial Governments the vexatious diversity in the laws of the different provinces in a number of subjects affecting the manufacturing and commercial interests of the country generally. These subjects include not only that of company law but also conditional sales, lien notes, bulk sales, assignments and preferences, etc., etc.

The work of the tariff committee for the year has largely related to the administration of the present act. Of Canada's negotiations with the U. S., the report says: "It was perhaps well a compromise was arrived at, but it would have been more satisfactory had it not affected any Canadian industry, or if the tariff rates payable in the United States on the articles in question had been made reciprocal." A large number of complaints of a confidential nature respecting foreign manufacturers dumping their goods into Canada at export prices have been investigated with excellent results.

"This occasion is unique in that it marks the first time in 39 years of activity that the association met in annual session west of Winnipeg," President Hendry of Vancouver told the delegates. Two special trains brought 300 delegates from the east, while some 200 from all parts of British Columbia joined them here.

President Hendry made a vigorous plea for the continuance of the preferential tariff in favor of the old country and her colonies, and dwelt on the desirability of Canada preserving the right she now exercises of making her own trade treaties. He strongly opposed reciprocity with the United States.

"As an association of Canadian manufacturers, it is our proud boast that we stand first, last and all the time for the inviolability of the British preference," he said, "and while all true Canadians will endorse the Government's attitude toward negotiating our own treaties, the recent convention with France and the removal of the German surtax, together with the concessions to the U. S., diverted a certain volume of trade from imperial channels.

"In this expression of my views I do not wish it to be assumed that I am of the opinion any serious harm has already been done. My object has ever been to call attention to a tendency which seems to be leading up into dangerous paths," he said.

ROY GZOWSKI ILL WITH FEVER

Toronto, Sept. 21.—C. S. Gzowski received a cablegram yesterday from Cambridge Hospital at Aldershot stating that his son Roy, who went over with the Queen's Own Rifles, was very seriously ill of typhoid fever in that institution.

Would Remove Police Commissioner.

New York, Sept. 21.—Acting Mayor Mitchell has recommended that Police Commissioner Baker be removed on the ground of unfitness, in permitting gambling to flourish in the city unchecked.

Mr. Mitchell said that Commissioner Baker, in a letter to him, showed insubordination.

SOMETHING WRONG WITH THE BRAKES

Brantford, Sept. 21.—A rear-end collision in front of the Grand Trunk depot at noon yesterday derailed a dozen cars and smashed a number of others. Engineer Connell of Mimico and Fireman Melanson jumped from their engine when they saw the impending crash, both escaping with slight injury.

The Fort Erie way freight stood on the main line track ready to pull out, when a through freight from Sarnia to Mimico came down grade behind it. Engineer Connell was unable to stop his train, something going wrong with the airbrakes. The caboose of the way freight was demolished and a freight car containing Amos Crandell of this city and his horse, Hol B., bound for the Dunnville races, was turned turtle, but the occupants escaped injury.

COMPANIES TO AMALGAMATE

Montreal, Sept. 21.—The truth of the statement that the ticker tells the tale was once more exemplified yesterday, when power ran up to 159, sagging back to 155, and at the conclusion of a meeting of street directors, held later in the day, a statement was given out to the effect that the directors of the Street Railway were of the opinion that an amalgamation of the two companies was necessary, and that a committee of the two had been appointed to discuss details.

THREATEN GENERAL STRIKE

Manchester, Eng., Sept. 21.—Cotton mill employes yesterday accepted the defi of the Cotton Employers' Federation, and declared that if the threatened lockout on Oct. 1 became operative they will effect a general strike throughout England by forcing the shutting down of 700 cotton mills, which, with the allied industries affected, would throw out 550,000 workmen.

$5 FINE FOR ATTEMPTED MURDER

Ottawa, Sept. 21.—John Lewis of Hull was tried there yesterday morning on a charge of attempted murder, and got off on the trivial fine of $5.

Levis got into a row with a neighbor's wife, and ended by throwing an axe at the woman, which missed her, but stuck in the side of a door.

A Defeat for Roosevelt?

Albany, N.Y., Sept. 21.—W. Barnes, jr., in a statement last night, claims that the result of yesterday's primaries gives Vice-President Sherman a clear majority of 55 votes over Col. Roosevelt for the temporary chairmanship of the Republican State Convention.

LATE TICKS FROM WIRES

Colin McIvor fell overboard while sailing off Goderich and was drowned.

All of the thirteen balloons that left Indianapolis on Saturday in the great race have been reported.

The schools have been closed at Middletown, Conn., because of the epidemic of infantile paralysis.

Six union bricklayers at Winnipeg have been fined $100 each for "bolting" during the recent strike.

One hundred and fifty persons were injured in a railroad wreck near Oporto, Portugal. None were killed.

Both factions of the Republican party are claiming victory as a result of the primaries in New York State yesterday.

Hon. Geo. E. Foster has returned to Ottawa from New Brunswick. He looks in better health and spirits than during last session of Parliament.

Daniel Gillam, employed at Beatty's shipyard, Welland, was struck by a heavy plate of iron about 6 o'clock last evening and almost instantly killed.

Warrants have been issued for a number of candy manufacturers at Philadelphia on charges of using sulphuric acid in the manufacture of marshmallows.

Five men who took part in the production of the Jeffries-Johnson fight pictures at St. John have been fined $30 each for showing the pictures without a license and committed for trial on the charge of giving an immoral show.

New Wing to Hospital.

St. Catharines, Sept. 21.—The cornerstone of the new wing being added to the General and Marine Hospital was laid yesterday afternoon, in the presence of a large gathering of prominent citizens, by Robert McLaren, president of the hospital trustee board.

Suffered an Eclipse.

May Ask Conciliation Board.

Ottawa, Sept. 21.—The Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen of the Intercolonial are appealing to the Deputy Minister against a refusal by Chief Superintendent Brady to consider their demand for readjustment of their wage schedule. Should this fail of success they will ask for a board under the Lemieux Act.

Died on Way to Telephone.

Welland, Sept. 21.—John Dunn, who lived between Ridgeville and Fenwick, near here, driving Monday evening to Welland with his wife, and when near the Button farm, got out to telephone. A few feet from the rig he was seized with an epileptic fit and died instantly.

HAS BEEN RETIRED

Ottawa, Sept. 20.—W. C. McMahon, superintendent of printing at the Government Bureau, has been superannuated, following the enquiry into the Printing Bureau scandals. Mr. McMahon went to the Printing Bureau in 1890, and was appointed assistant King's printer, controller of stationery and superintendent of printing on Sept. 1, 1908. He was born in 1856.

Third Caretaker to Drown.

Cobalt, Sept. 20.—Mike Hilpin, caretaker of the Gavin-Hamilton mine, Elk Lake, has in all probability been drowned, as his upturned canoe has been discovered, and he is missing.

He is the third caretaker of Elk Lake camps to drown or die within two months. The last seen of him was when he got provisions at Elk Lake.

THE WOLVES MAY GO MAD

Rabid Dog Showed Signs of Having Bitten the Animals.

Ottawa, Sept. 21.—That danger exists of the epidemic of rabies in Ontario spreading to wolves and other wild animals in the northern part of this province is the statement made by the veterinary-general's department in regard to a report received from Toronto that such a danger was apprehended.

The situation is the latest phase of the rabies question, which, particularly in Western Ontario, has been engaging the attention of the Dominion and provincial authorities for many months.

A particular case, which has served to bring the matter prominently to notice, is that of a dog biting a man at Elk Lake which was killed and the head forwarded to the Provincial Health Department for examination. It was found that the dog was rabid. Before the animal was killed there were unmistakable evidences that it had several conflicts with wolves, in the woods from which it came, and the fear is expressed that, once inoculated with the dread disease, wolves and other wild animals will run amuck through the forests of Northern Ontario.

"Wolves are certainly very prone to the disease when exposed to it," said Dr. Tennant, acting veterinary-general, in discussing the affair. Rabid wolves have little fear of man, and have been known to run right into mining camps, biting everyone in sight."

BANK PRESIDENT DIES IN MONTREAL

Montreal, Sept. 21.—The death took place yesterday morning at an early hour of F. X. St. Charles, president of the Bank of Hochelaga, who had been connected with the bank since its foundation thirty-nine years ago.

The succession will probably fall to Hon. J. D. Roland, Robert Bickerdike, M.P., is vice-president, but it is quite likely that he will decline the presidency, thinking that a French-Canadian should have the first place on the directorate.

Former Toronto Clergyman Dead.

Brandon, Man., Sept. 21—Rev. F. W. Walker, rector of St. George's Church, died in the hospital yesterday afternoon, after a month's illness from typhoid pneumonia. He came west from Toronto, and had lived in Brandon for five years.

Marie, Mich., Sept. 21.—The passenger steamer Lakeland of Port Huron and barge John Smeaton, belonging to the Pittsburg Steamship Co., were badly damaged in a collision in a fog early yesterday in Little Rapids Cut, below this city. CLOTHES

We are opposed to good clothes, the silk hat and the Prince Albert. But sitting down and meditating we ask ourselves why it is. Well, its because we can't afford the. We don't believe in trusts or combines. Sitting a little longer we come to the conclusion that if we could we would be a director on a trust or a combine if we had the price. Clothes—this is the fall season, and if you haven't put e'm on you better. We do not mean drawers, but that new fall suit.

CHIEF THOMPSON'S STATEMENT

"I have yet to find the boy in whom the last spark of goodness has fled."—Chief Thompson, of the Peterborough police.

True for you, Chief. You might have said man instead of boy and your remarks would not have been less accurate. No soul is so dead but that some one some time can strike the note to which he will respond. It makes no difference whether he is a burglar or a thief, a drunkard or a pimp. Somewhere in that man is the Divine Spark. Say, are we doing what we can to find it in the man whom we call down and out?

HOSE

A lady passed the Review office yesterday afternoon after the paper was issued, and the sporting editor remarked that her stockings were a lovely brown. Now, we don't care a rap about the stockings, its the petticoat that we are interested in. A day or two ago the New York Times had a lengthy editorial on a woman's petticoat. It dealt on the fact that in Paris the fair sex paid as much if not more attention to the petticoat and stockings than the skirt. Why is it that a man turns around when a woman holds up her dress? That is a problem that can never be solved, and that is why the Parisians are so careful about their petticoats and hose.

THE PROTESTOR

Rev. Mr. Trumpour's sermon has produced a sensation. Astonishing. isn't it, how the world sits up and takes notice when a man says anything or does anything worth while. In the columns of the Review will be seen the opinions of prominent Peterborough people, showing that they are in full sympathy with Mr. Trumpour's remarks. Yes, whenever a man advocates anything different he is immediately noticed. If he advocates it hard enough he is crucified. No, not on a cross, but crucified by words and insults and slander and disdain.

Now, Rev. Mr. Trumpour was talking religion, but Bernarr Macfadden was sentenced to two years in jail for agitating personal purity in his magazine "Physical Culture." However, he didn't get the years. The sentence was suspended. Bernarr Macfadden to-day is cordially hated by hundreds of physicians. He does not believe in medicine. He is a faddist. He believes that we eat too much. He is not a prohibitionist, although he gave $1,000 to carry local option in Battle Creek, Mich. He is a temperance crank. He believes in temperance in food, in marital relations, in drink, in everything that has to do with our body. He deals not with the soul, but with its temple—this clay—his flesh and blood.

AN APOLOGY

A note in the Sanitary Record says that as flies are nature's scavengers—sent to dispose of and reconvert into wholesomeness the putrid things that would otherwise poison the atmosphere and spread fever and death in all direction—so if we get rid of these flies we might be in a worse plight than before. Do away with the fever spots and you do away with the flies as well.—Mail and Empire

We humbly apologize to the Board of Health. Long have we wronged them in their firm friendship for the fly. However, that insect that got stuck in the milk pitcher this morning looked very much like the insect that we saw taking nourishment from the office spitton. It also resembled the little creature that roosts on the garbage pile next door. But, gentlemen, kindly accept our apology for our condemnation—you in your friendship for flies and filth are friends of the race.

A CORN ROAST

(Tom Begley in Lindsay Post.)

For the jaded mind and the heavy breast, for the old who wish to renew their youth and the young who dwell on courtship and romance, for the dyspeptic and the sallow-cheeked book worm, there is no better pastime than a corn roast. The husking bee, quilting party, plowing match and melon hunting parties are all good in their time. They save a people from that starchy, cold manner which demands a high collar and a modish dress, but they do not combine all the qualities of Bohemianism, joviality, poetry and feasting, that belong to a bonfire, a sissing ear of corn and a ruddy cheek. There is color in the setting that impresses itself vividly on the memory.

One of these corn roasts was held here the other night at Pleasant Point. Above the moon was reigning in all its splendor and glory. Below shadows crept mystically here and there where the light did not cast its strangely sentimental beams. On the shores overlooking the placid surface of Sturgeon Lake, blazed a fire built of logs and limbs. The red flame shot fitfully heavenward, and the smoke curled here and there to the vagaries of the breeze. Around the burning pile, like campers in the northland, sat the corn roasters—a merry, fun-loving group—turning an ear as the Indian did a cut of venison on his spit. To the north, and against the dim horizon, glowed the lights of distant Fenelon Falls, and through the clear night air could be heard the rhymic lap of the waters, as though to lend a note of music to the mellowness of the hour.

Now, isn't that lovely? But who in blazes would recommend a dyspeptic to a corn roast? And why must he be sallow-cheeked, and a book worm to enjoy it? A man with a sallow cheek is the toughest mortal on earth. History tells us that Joseph had a sallow cheek, and he was one of the best authorities on corn the world ever had. We like a corn roast for the shadows that are in it, but we do not like corn roasts on moonlight nights, where the old watch dog of the skies reigns in splendor and glory and strangely sentimental beams. Give us the corn roast on a dark night, and we won't ask for anything else but an ear of corn and a hand to hold, no matter whether the hour is mellow or the waters rhymic.

OUR NAVY

The Liberal press throughout the country is making much of the fact that bodies of Germans and French Canadians settled in the west have assured Sir Wilfrid Laurier that they are willing to send their sons to man the Canadian navy. The avidity with which these officers were seized upon by these organs which find it necessary to support the government in return for government patronage proved that the administration is surely in need of a kind word respecting the proposed expenditure of millions for the creation of a naval force which will be of little use to the Empire in time of war, and which will only take part in England's battles when it suits the whims of Sir Wilfrid Laurier. It is doubtful if the bulk of the people of Canada who are putting up the money for this "order-in-council" navy realize that their hands have been completely tied by the voluable opportunist who sits at the head of the council table.. All the young French Canadian and German lads in Canada could not raise one finger to repel an enemy of Britain until the High Mogul in his palatial residence on Laurier avenue made up his mind that the Canadian naval force should enter the fray.

We are therefore completely at his mercy as a nation, of the man who at the time when the whole Empire was roused over the South African war, had to be whipped into sending the clamoring contingent to the front. The navy, the creation of which was authorized by the majority of Parliament last session CANNOT BE OF ANY ASSISTANCE TO BRITAIN. It cannot even fire a gun without permission and England might be swept from the face of the sea before the machinery of government gave the word which would pull the trigger. Even the Toronto Globe realized that if Canada was to do anything it must be of a practical nature. On March 24th, 1909, the Globe said editorially." But as a matter of fact war is in progress. The contest in shipbuilding is war. If the mother country were engaged in a desperate conflict Canadians could not get across the ocean fast enough to the aid of the mother land. But we must remember that our aid is as much needed now as if a physical war instead of a shipbuilding war was on. It is Canada's duty from every point of view, from our affection for the land of our fathers, and for our own self interest to take prompt and practical action."

But the Canadians who wished to rush over the sea to the defence of the mother land would find the door locked to active participation in the struggle against England's enemies, and the key in the pocket of Sir Wilfrid Laurier.

Again the Globe on March 28, 1909, came out boldly—as boldly as that partisan sheet can ever hope to come—and declared;

"The sort of vessel that should be built is fixed by the circumstances. The competition now raging between Great Britain and Germany, is in the direction of first-class battleships. IF CANADA WERE TO BUILD A LITTLE FLEET OF WASPS AND HORNETS IT WOULD HAVE NO MORAL EFFECT ON THE SITUATION AT ALL. What we would like Canada to do would be to manifest, by a veritable act that in this competition of the fleets she ranges herself proudly and gladly by the side of the mother country."

Oh. wilt thou have my hand dear,
to lie along in thine;
As a little stone in a running stream,
it seems to lie and pine,
Now drop the poor pale hand, dear, unfit to plight with thine.

Oh, wilt thou have my cheek, dear, drawn closer to thine own?
My cheek is white, my cheek is worn,
by many a tear run down.
Now, leave a little space, dear, lest it should wet thine own.

Oh, must thou have my soul, dear,
Red grows the cheek, and warm
Red grows the cheek and warm the hand, the part is in the whole.
Nor hands nor cheeks keeps separate,
when soul is joined to soul.

A Canadian's Cheerful Philosophy.

From Saturday Night, reproduced not for Fame's Sake but for Royalty's sake, not of the king kind.

Homeopathic pellats of philosophy are the specialty of Charles F. Raymond, a Canadian writer, whose third book has just been published by the Dodge Publishing Company of New York. It bears the title "The Happy Life," which indicates that it bears a generic relationship to his previous volumes "Just Be Glad" and "Cheer Up." He has a simple and picturesque way of putting things, and adopts the Socratic method in dealing with the reader. That is to say, he puts a question merely with a view to answering it himself. The Athenians got so annoyed with Socrates for this sort of thing that they decreed his death, but times have changed, and Charlie Raymond is getting to be recognized as one of the good things of life in this country. Two extracts from "The Happy Life," by which, for one thing, he means the industrious, wide-awake life, serve to show the quality of his work and are worth framing up in the meeting place of every labor union. For instance:—

"In the shop where you work are you only a bit of the machinery, walking in and out by the shriek of the whistle, or are you a sufficient crank to believe that you can help make your department pay a little better for the firm? In the office or in the bank, do you copy from one book to another in a come-day-go-day manner, or are you known as a crank on being particular with your work?

In the union are you known as a crank, or do you pay your dues, and that is the end of it?

The cranks are the people that make the wheels go round."

And again:

"In the railway, in the office or on the roadbed, in the tower or on the car, from the man who taps the wheels to the one who works the key, how goes the battle? There are chance s everywhere about you.

Whoever you are, and wherever you belong, can you fill the place a little further up?

Wherever men and women are, there is the door of opportunity.

Is it closed?

Burst it in, I say, burst it in."

Raymond, by the way, in addition to being a cheerful philosopher, is a newspaper man who, during the past fifteen years, has worked in various Ontario centres from Oakville to Toronto, and is now doing a prodigious amount of live and excellent work for the Peterboro' Review, of which he is editor. His motto toward the fakir and the human parasite in whatever form is "Sic 'em."

The Round-Up

A Romance of Arizona

Novelized From Edmund Day's Melodrama

By JOHN MURRAY and MILLS MILLER

Copyright, 1908, by G. W. Dillingham Co.

Show Low could contain himself no longer. Going up to Sagebrush, he shook his fist in his face, saying: "You're the limit. You ought to be herdin' sheep."

The victim of the accident humbly replied, "I couldn't help it."

Mrs. Allen smoothed out the differences by declaring: "What's the difference? She wouldn't have guessed, not in a million years. Stand away an' let her see it."

Fresno swept them all aside with the blanket.

"Oh, isn't it beautiful—beautiful!" cried Echo.

"Who—what—where"— she stammered, glancing from one to the other, her eyes finally resting on Jack.

"Not guilty!" he cried. "You'll have to thank the boys for this."

With happy tears welling up in her eyes, Echo said: "I do thank them. I do, I do. I can't tell how delighted I am. I can't say how much this means to me. Oh, I thank you! I say it once, but I feel it a thousand times." She seized each of the boys by the hand and shook it heartily.

"Would you like to have another selection?" asked Fresno, relieving the tension of the situation.

"No!" shouted the punchers unanimously. Fresno looked very much crestfallen since he considered that he had made a deep impression by his first effort.

"Mrs. Payson's goin' to hit us out a tune," announced Sagebrush.

Echo seated herself at the piano. Jack leaned against the instrument, gazing fondly into her eyes as she raised her face, radiant with happiness. Allen had taken possession of the best rocking chair. Mrs. Allen sat at the table, and the boys ranged themselves about the room. Their faces reflected gratification. They watched Echo expectantly.

Echo played the opening bars of "The Old Folks at Home." Before she sang Fresno, holding up his right index finger, remarked to no one in particular, "I washed that finger."

The singing deeply affected her little audience. Echo had a sweet, natural voice. She threw her whole soul into the old ballad. She was so happy she felt like singing, not lively airs, but songs about home. Her new home had become so dear to her at that moment.

Mrs. Allen, as usual, began to cry. Polly soon followed her example. There were tears even in the eyes of some of the punchers, although they blinked vigorously to keep them back.

When she repeated the chorus Sagebrush said to Fresno, "Ain't that great?"

That worthy, however, with the jealousy of an artist and to hide his own deeply moved sensibilities, replied, "That ain't so much."

Jack had become completely absorbed in the music. He and Echo were oblivious to surroundings. His arm had slipped about his wife's waist, and she gazed fondly into his face. Sagebrush was the first to notice their attitude. On his calling the attention of the boys to their happiness these quietly tiptoed from the room. Polly signaled to Mrs. Allen and followed the boys. Josephine awoke Jim as if from a dream and led him slowly out, leaving the young couple in an earthly paradise of married love.

"I want you to be happy."

When Echo finished she turned in surprise to find themselves alone.

"Was it as bad as that?" she naively asked Jack.

"What?"

"Why, they've all left us."

Jack laughed softly. "So they have. I forgot they were here," he said, looking fondly down at his wife.

Echo began to play quietly another ballad. "I've always wanted a piano," she said.

"You'd have found one here waiting, if I'd only known it," he chided.

"You've given me so much already," she murmured. "I've been a big expense to you."

Jack again slipped his arm about her waist and kissed her. "There isn't any limit on my love," he declared. "I want you to be happy"—

"Don't you think I am?" laughed Echo. "I'm the happiest woman on earth, Jack, and it's all you. I want to be more than a wife to you. I want to be a helpmate, but you won't let me."

A wistful expression crept over Echo's countenance.

"Who says so?" he demanded playfully, as if he would punish any man who dared make such an accusation.

Echo turned on the stool and took his hand. "I know it," she said, with emphasis. "You've been worried about something for days and days. Don't tell me you haven't."

Jack opened his lips as if to contradict her. "We women learn to look beneath the surface. "What is it, Jack?" she continued.

Jack loosened his wife's hand clasp and walked over to the table.

"Nothing. What should I have to worry about?" He spoke carelessly.

"The mortgage?" suggested Echo.

"I paid that off last week," explained Jack.

Echo felt deeply hurt that this news should have been kept from her by her husband.

"You did, and never told me?" she chided. "Where did you get the money?" she inquired.

"Why, I"— Jack halted. He could not frame an excuse at once nor invent a new lie to cover his old sin. Deeper and deeper he was getting into the mire of deception.

Echo had arisen from the seat. "It was over $3,000, wasn't it?" she insisted.

"Something like that," answered Jack noncommittally.

"Well, where did you get it?" demanded his wife.

"An old debt—a friend of mine—I loaned him the money a long time ago, and he paid it back—that's all."

Jack took a drink of water from the olla to hide his confusion.

"Who was it?" persisted Echo.

"You wouldn't know if I told you. Now, just stop talking business."

"It isn't fair," declared Echo. "You share all the good things of life with me, and I want to share some of your business worries. I want to stand my share of the bad."

Jack saw he must humor her. "When the bad comes I'll tell you," he assured her, patting her hand.

"You stand between me and the world. You're like a great big mountain standing guard over a little tree in the valley, keeping the cold north wind from treating it too roughly." She sighed contentedly. "But the mountain does it all."

Jack looked down tenderly at his little wife. Her love for him moved him deeply.

"Not at all," he said to her. "The little tree grows green and beautiful. It casts a welcome shade about it, and the heart of the mountain is made glad to its rocky core to know that the safety of that little tree is in its keeping."

Taking her in his arms, he kissed her again and again.

"Kissing again!" shouted Polly from the doorway. "Say, will you two never settle down to business? There's Bud Lane an' a bunch of others just come into the corral. Maybe they want you, Jack."

Jack excused himself. As he stepped out on the piazza he asked Polly, "Shall I send Bud in?"

"Let him come in if he wants to. I'm not sendin' for him." Polly spitefully turned up her nose at him. Jack laughed as he closed the door.

Echo reseated herself at the piano, fingering the keys.

"How are you getting on with Bud?" she asked the younger girl.

"We don't get on a little bit," she snapped. "Bud never seems to collect much revenue, an' we just keep trottin' slow-like. Wish I was married an' had a home of my own."

"Aren't you happy with father and mother?"

Polly glanced at Echo, with a smile. "Lord, yes," she replied, "in a way, but I'm only a poor relation! Your ma was my ma's cousin's cousin or somethin' like that."

Echo laughed. "Nonsense," she retorted. "Nonsense. You're my dear sister and the only daughter that's at the old home now."

"But I want a home of my own like this," said Polly.

"Then you'd better shake Bud and give Slim a chance."

Polly was too disgusted to answer at once. "Slim Hoover—shucks! Slim doesn't care for girls. He's afraid of 'em," she said at length. "I like Bud with all his orneriness," she declared.

"Why doesn't he come to see you more often?"

"I don't know. Maybe it's because he's never forgiven you for marryin' Jack."

"Why should he mind that?" she asked, startled.

"Well, you know," she answered between stitches, drawing the needle through the cloth with angry little jerks, "Bud he never quite believed Dick was dead."

Echo rose hastily. The vague, haunting half thoughts of weeks were crystallized on the instant. She felt as if Dick was trying to speak to her from out of the great beyond. With a shudder she sank into a chair at the table opposite Polly.

"Don't," she said, her voice scarcely above a whisper. "I can't bear to hear him spoken of. I dreamed of him the other night—a dreadful dream."

Polly was delighted with this new mystery. It was all so romantic!

"Did you? Let's hear it."

With unseeing eyes Echo gazed straight ahead, rebuilding from her dream fabric a tragedy of the desert in which the two men who had played so great a part in her life were the actors.

"It seems," she told, "that I was in the desert, such a vast, terrible desert, where the little dust devils eddied and swirled and the merciless sun beat down until it shriveled up every growing thing."

Polly nodded her head sagely.

"That's the way the desert looks, and no water."

Echo paid no heed to the interruption. Her face became wan and haggard as in her mind's eye she saw the weary waste of waterless land quiver and swim under the merciless sun. Not a tree, not a blade of grass, not a sign of life, broke the monotony of crumbling cliffs and pinnacled rocks. Onward and ever onward stretched yellow ridges and alkali whitened ravines, blinding the eye and parching the throat.

"Then I saw a man staggering toward me," she continued. "His face was white and drawn, his lips cracked and parched. Now and then he would stumble and fall and lie there on his face in the hot sand, digging into it with his bony fingers, seeking for water."

"It was Dick."

Echo shut her eyes as if to blot out the picture. Its reality almost overpowered her.

"Suddenly he raised his eyes to mine," she resumed after a pause. "It was Dick."

In her excitement she had arisen, stretching out her arms as if to ward off an apparition.

"He tried to call me. I saw his lips move, framing my name. Dragging himself to his feet, he came toward me with his arms outstretched. Then another form appeared between us, fighting to keep him back. They fought there under the burning sun in the hot dust of the desert until at last one was crushed to earth. The victor raised his face to mine, and—it was Jack."

Echo buried her face in her hands. Dry sobs shook her bosom. Awe stricken, Polly gazed at the overwrought wife.

"Phew!" she laughed to shake off her fright. "That was a sure enough nightmare. If I'd a dream like that I'd wake up the whole house yappin' like a coyote."

As the commonplace ever intrudes upon the unusual, so a knock on the door relieved the tension of the situation. It was Slim. He did not wait for an invitation to enter, but, opening the door, asked, "Can I come in?"

"Sure, come in!" cried Polly, glad to find any excuse to shake off the depression of Echo's dream.

"Howdy, Mrs. Payson? Just come over to see Jack," was the jolly sheriff's greeting.

"He's down at the corral," she informed him.

Mrs. Allen hurried in from the kitchen at this moment, calling: "Echo, come here an' look at this here cake It looks as if it had been sot on."

Echo closed the lid of the piano and called her mother's attention to the presence of Slim Hoover.

"How d'ye do, Slim Hoover? You might have left some of that dust outside."

The sheriff was greatly embarrassed by her chiding. In his ride from Florence to the Sweetwater the alkali and sand stirred up by the hoofs of the horses had settled on his hat and waistcoat so freely that his clothing had assumed a neutral gray tone, above which his sun tanned face and red hair loomed like the moon in a fog. Josephine's scolding drove him to brush his shoulders with his hat, raising a cloud of dust about his head.

To be continued.

The Pet Cat.

Cats need careful feeding, and it is not generally believed that they can and will (if taught) eat green vegetables. They should be given these in the form of cabbage, cauliflower and asparagus once every day, and that at noon.

Strangely enough, the pet cat's heaviest meal, consisting of four ounces of meat, should be given at night, and it should invariably be run through a chopper. Potatoes are excluded from the diet of all well cared for cats, but sardines are given twice a week and only in cold weather.

Cats have individual tastes that may be gratified within reason. The ordinary American cat—and it is more satisfactory than the Angora—may even be given peaches or currants or cocoanut. These are mentioned because they were the peculiar dainties most liked by a cat of the writer's acquaintance.

All of the cat's milk is boiled and given warm and well diluted, and last, but very important, a daily supply of fresh water and green grass is absolutely necessary.

THE DAILY REVIEW PATTERN SERVICE

CHILD'S DRESS.

All Seams Allowed.

Making dresses for the little folks is such a pleasure that "mother" will make just as many as she can possibly find time for, and every new design helps her just that much. The little frock we illustrate at this time is a very simple one, and because of its simplicity is just what is needed. The dress hangs straight from the neck in front and back, the required fullness being obtained by tucks at the shoulders. The tucks turn away from the center-front and the plain space may be hand-embroidered if desired. The bishop sleeves are finished at the hand by a narrow band. Only white materials would be used for these little dresses, and lace insertion and edging for the trimming. The pattern (5150) is cut in sizes ½ to 5 years. To make the dress in medium size will require 2¾ yards of material 27 inches wide, or 1⅞ yards 36 inches wide; with three yards of insertion and 4½ yards of edging.

The above pattern can be obtained by sending 10 cents to the office of this paper.

Special to the Review.

London, Sept. 21.—A demonstration was made against Miss Leneve while she was being taken to the Bow street police police court this morn- a crowd of several hundred persons surrounding the cab and hooting and yelling. The police, who escorted the cab, had to fight their way through the trance to the police court. The girl almost collapsed as a result of the demonstration against her, and a physician had to be called to quiet her nerves before the proceedings commenced.

HARVEST HOME SERVICES AT PARK ST. BAPTIST CHURCH

Special Harvest Home services will be held next Sunday in the Park St. Baptist church. The church will be elaborately decorated for the occasion. Those who were privileged to see the the beautiful decorations last year will see the efforts of Brother Arthur Jackson and his committee surpassed this time. The committee request that no vegetables or fruit be brought to the church this year, as they intend using wheat, oats and other grains.

Another special feature of the Harvest Home festivities will be the introduction of a new organ, which will be skillfully handled by Mr. Harold Foster, the popular organist and choir leader of the Park St. Baptist church. The new organ is the same as is used in the Sacred Heart Church, and will be a splendid help in the service of song. There will be special sermons and music by the choir for the occasion.

On monday a grand Harvest Home supper and platform meeting will be held A special musical programme will be given and addresses by local ministers. Tea will be served from 6 to 8 o'clock in the parlors of the church.

11 1-16 cents was the prevailing price this morning on the Cheese Board although a couple of factories sold at 11 cents even.

In the absence of President Switzer, Vice-President Hanna was in the chair.

Mr. Watkin opened the bidding at 11 cents. Mr Gillespie made it 11 1-16, and as there was no advance he took Keene, Warminster Central Smith and Warsaw. Mr. Gunn named 11 1-16 for further selections and took Ormonde, Villiers, Westwood, Norwood, and Daisy D. Mr. Weit gave the same price for obtaining Selwyn, Lakefield, Young's Point and Lang. At the same figure Mr. Gillespie thought East Emily, Trewern, Bensfort, Cedardale, Cavanville Fraserville, Fleetwood, and offered 11 cents for the balance of the board. Oakdale refused; King Edward accepted. Myrtle, Maple Leaf, Indian River, Killarney refused. North Dummer sold at 11, as did also Stoney Lake. Pine Grove also refused. Aborn Opera Company Appearing in Very Limited Number Of Smaller Canadian Cities

In the larger cities of their route, the Aborn English Grand Opera Company is this season presenting a most attractive repertoire, composed of such widely popular works as "Carmen," "Faust," "Il Trovatore," "The Bohemian Girl," "Lucia di Lammermoor," "Lohengrin," "Aida," "Cavalleria Rusticana," all of which have as strong appeal to ordinary music lovers uneducated in music as to the advanced musician. In the very few cities where they will appear for one night only, one of these operas is selected according to the preference of the locality. This city is one of the few that will be included in the Aborn tour for one night only, and consequently their engagement at the Grand Opera House on Wednesday night, Sept. 28th, is viewed as an important event in local musical history.

TECHNICAL EDUCATION

To the Editor of the Review.

Sir,—Why is it that our government is so slow about giving the people technical education? We cannot hope to keep up with Britain, Germany and United States unless our artisans become a technically educated people. We are ever so far behind. In fact the mass of our mechanics are just rule-and-thumb men as they used to be—good and true men to be sure—but wholly neglected by the state. Railways, manufactories and agriculture are all looked after by somebody, but not the mechanic. The knowledge of principles of drawing and construction is easy to teach and WHY ISN'T IT TAUGHT?

Come! brace up, somebody.

Yours,

HUGH DELINE ARRESTED ON THE CHARGE OF MURDERING HIS WIFE

Havelock, Sept. 21.—Hugh Deline was arrested here to-night by Constable Williams on a charge of murdering his wife, Telisa Deline, at their home in northern Eelmont township on Thursday night last. The authorities believe they have sufficient evidence to convict the man on the charge.

The case hinges on the fact that clothing belonging to Hugh Deline bears the same stains as that worn by his wife at the time she met her death. This has been established and many other things will help to convict the man.

THE CIRCUMSTANCES.

The circumstances of the affair, are that on Thursday night last Hugh Deline left the home of Jas. Buchanan at eight o'clock. According to his own statement he arrived at his own home at 8.30 o'clock. Mrs Newel says that he notified her of the affair at ten o'clock. Here is an hour and thirty minutes to be accounted for. What did Hugh Deline do in that time? That is the question that he will be called upon to answer.

This difference in time was what pointed the finger of suspicion at Deline from the first and which has led to his arrest.

Matters looked more interesting on Tuesday morning when Provincial Detective Reburn appeared on the case to assist Constable Williams. Williams has been suspicious of Deline ever since the tragedy and has been working hard to procure evidence enough to justify an arrest. When Constable Williams and Detective Reburn joined forces in the case to-day matters were speedily brought to a head and the arrest followed.

AN ABLE MAN WORKING ON IT.

Detective Reburn efore acting, wished to interview Deline and with this in view he drove to the Deline home in company with Constable Williams at noon to-day. While they were going out north one way, Deline was coming to Havelock to make some purchases by another route. Constable Bennet, of town, knowing that suspicion pointed towards, Deline, kept track of him, until the other officers returned.

When Constable Williams made known to Deline that h ewas under arrest, he made no resistence, but said; "All right, but I am innocent." He was brought before Magistrate Joyce of Havelock, to-night and remanded until Friday, when he will appear at the inquest. He will be taken to the county jail at Peterborough in the meantime.

Deline, when first questioned, stated that he had not changed his clothes on the night of the tragedy, but it is known that he wore different clothes when he arrived at Newel's than when he left Buchanan's. It is stated that he has admitted that he did change some of his clothes. Here is then, another question for him to answer. Why did he change his clothes before giving the alarm?

ONLY 27 YEARS OF AGE.

Hugh Deline is about 27 years of age, light complexion and medium height. He came to Belmont township about a year ago from Madoc township. When seen by your correspondent to-day, he said that he had come to town to-day to buy some groceries for the house. He is living at his old home where both his mother and mother-in-law are staying and caring for the two little children, aged three months and two years.

ENTHUSIASTIC GATHERING MARKED INAUGURAL BANQUET

Half a Thousand Members to be Secured in Ten Days and Workers Are Brimful of Confidence for Success--Address by Mr. W. A. Warburton an Inspiration.

They're off.

The campaign at the Young Men's Christian Association to increase the present membership by five hundred was inaugurated last evening and commenced this morning.

Will five hundred be secured within the next ten days? The meeting last night said so. The majority in attendance remained at the building after the banquet and speeches, to get in readiness for the fray, and to-day the big undertaking is on in earnest.

There is enthusiasm behind the campaign and its going to mean much hard work, but then there are a lot of self-sacrificing young fellows at the Y.M.C.A. and as such are loyal to the institution, which has done so much for them.

As it was remarked during the evening, the workers do not have to go forth in their search for members with an apology for the institution.

On the contrary, the officials, the equipment and the opportunities afforded, cannot be excelled in the city. There are one hundred reasons which can be given in support of the solicitations for new members.

There is a system too, behind the movement. Committees have been formed and every factory and store in the city will be the headquarters of one of more of the small army of young men, who have taken off their coats with the statement that we can win.

Printed matter pertaining to the institution and its advantages will be ready in the course of a day or two and will be distributed.

To be frank, that banquet at the Y.M.C.A. last evening was about the biggest success of its kind to be held there that has been reported by the Review for some time.

The attendance was large and it was evident that those present were not on hand merely for purpose of eating.

They were united for the task before them and each was willing to do his share and help the other fellow out with all the power that was in him. The proper spirit of enthusiasm was shown. It wasn't the kind which disappears with the following day.

The presence and address of Mr. G. A. Warburton, who passed through the recent campaign in Toronto had an inspiring influence. He had a breezy manner about him and he said a whole lot of things that were material in their purpose.

Of course it would be impossible to get away from the fact that the eating part of the programme was not enjoyed.

The ladies excelled themselves last night and so did those seated at the tables.

Then everybody satisfied, Mr. Chas. E. Sisson called for order, and in a fifteen minute address outlined the system to be used throughout the ten days' campaign.

There came a vocal selection by Mr. G. W. Mulligan and one that was very greatly enjoyed.

ALD. TURNER.

Ald. Turner, vice-president of the Y. M.C.A. Board, was next called upon for a few remarks.

He was present, he said, to convey the best wishes for a successful campaign. The Y.M.C.A. stands for a great deal in the community, said the speaker. To-night the executive extends to all interested in the work every encouragement, coupled with the hope, that the campaign for five hundred new members will not only be successful but that that many more will be secured.

It will take much hard work, but take off your coats, and go at it; get a good start and success will be half won.

Rev. W. C. Riddiford, pastor of Park St. Baptist Church, followed with a prayer.

Short addresses were next given by Mr. J. A. Johnston, Dr. Middleton and Mr. J. J. Thompson, physical director.

OUR INSTITUTION

The right spirit with which to go into the work was touched on by Mr. Johnston, and Dr. Middleton spoke on behalf of the Boys' Department.

Mr. Thompson dealt with the work of his department.

"We have a modern, up-to-date, first-class building," he said. "We have baths equal to any in the city, and the only swimming pool. We have our gymnasium and bowling alleys, for which leauges will be formed as usual. Basketball and indoor baseball will be played, and it may be possible for us to put in indoor tennis. Then there are the classes and the outdoor sports in the summer time.

SWIMMING CAMPAIGN

A swimming campaign will be started. Tickets will be issued to the teachers of public schools, and these will be passed to the pupils. Any boy over twelve years of age will be given swimming lessons until he has learned the art.

There will be advance swimming and life saving classes. These will be under the supervision of Mr. W. O. Taylr, late of the Montreal Swimming Club.

Toboggan and skieing clubs will be organized during the winter.

The leaders' corps is the best in this part of the country, and no one need go out with an apology for the Y.M.C.A.

MR. W. A. WARBURTON

Mr. Warburton, on being introduced to the gathering, was happily greeted. He said he was glad of the opportunity to be present, and he thought the physical director had struck his note when he said that the workers need not go out with an apology for their institution. "We are all tied up to the one great movement, which is not only national in Canada, and not only international, but world-wide" said the speaker.

"There was a time when a Y.M.C.A. member was, not to say the least, attractive. He was one of those soft, goody, goody fellows. It was different now. There are lots of young fellows who believe that to feel religious is to be weak, but we want them to understand that it ought to bring a spirit of bravery in a man.

"The reason that we don't get better men as active workers is because we don't give them enough to do. They should get something big." To illustrate, at this point the speaker referred to the big things that had been undertaken and brought to a head during the campaign at Toronto. What was said to be an impossible task was crowned with greater success than was anticipated.

There the spirit of "we can, by God's grace" was shown, and self-sacrifice was demonstrated time and time again, and in this the workers spent the happiest time of their lives.

"I don't know anything better than work which helps to make the best kind of citizenship," said Mr. Warburton, "and every man, woman and child should be interested in this campaign. Every manufacturer, every merchant, has something to gain.

"Men and boys are just the same here as in any other place—and every boy is a problem. Some are driven to the bad because they are misunderstood, misinterpreted, and very often misrepresented. To bring the boys together to such an organization as this is a splendid thing. He is brought into good association with Christian young fellows. He sees the 'stunts' being pulled off in the gymnasium.

Take these strangers who come to town. How things are different from what they expected.

Now, if the Y.M.C.A. didn't hold a meeting or didn't make a convert, but opened up a good place for these young strangers, and by doing this made them better citizens, it would be worth while. The Association has the privilege of doing this good work. As a rule young men don't want to be alone. They have the "club" idea, and the question which arises is answered by the Y.M.C.A.

In regard to this campaign its going to be the greatest blessing if you do it in the right way. Self sacrifice is needed. A Christian man that doesn't sacrifice is not a true Christian.

There are the fellows in the factory and shops who ought to be reached. They are made of good stuff. We have the chance to bring the young men together. The Y.M.C.A. should be a meeting place for labor and capital. The results to the employer and employee are great.

During the address the speaker gave many illustrations of how young men and others had been benefitted by their association with the Y.M.C.A., and in his closing remarks urged that the members go to work with warm hearts and with zeal and enthusiasm. God's blessings on the work and the result will be that each will get a blessing, and the community will be lifted to a higher level.

GENERAL SECRETARY.

Mr. H. M. Gilchrist was the last speaker, and he put special stress on the necessity for self-sacrifice in the campaign. Let us do things that is going to cost us something, he said. In helping a young man the country was assisted. The young men of the present day were the men of the future, and it was necessary that they be led to be strong. We ought to have a thousand members at the Y.M.C.A. It is a disgrace that there are only two hundred.

For the sake of our country, our town, our church and our Association let us put forth our best efforts. Let us show the community that we can do something big and thus make this institution a telling one in this city.

THANKS.

On motion of Messrs. P Kerr and J. Kingsboro, a vote of thanks was tendered to those taking part in the evening's program, and the affair was brought to a close with the singing of God Save the King.

AN ATTRACTIVE GROUP PICTURE

Of Past presidents of St. Peter's Total Abstenience Society

A large group picture that is attracting much attention is on exhibition the north window of Merrell and Meredith. All the past presidents of St. Peter's Total Abstinence Society, together with the founder of the society, Rev. Father O'Sullivan and His Lordship Bishop o'Connor, are shown. His Lordship is seen in the centre, Rev. Father O'Sullivan at the top and the other photos are arranged about the remainder of the large space. The picture has a large and an attractive gold frame, and all the work was done at the Roy studio.

O, YOU PUMPKIN PIE

A pumpkin pie social at Springville last night was a big success.

Threatening weather did not hinder the enjoyment of the affair and a large crowd spent a very pleasant evening.

The tables were decked with fern leaves, vines and fruit and were especially attractive. They were situated in two large tents presided over by Dr. Rogers and Mr. Glover.

After the spread a festival was held in the church at which the following talent supplied the programme, Miss Julia Choate, violiniste; Mr. Werdene and Messrs. Lee and Bradley.

At St. Mary's, N. B., a Scott Act inspector seized 240 bottles and two kegs of liquor at a "temperance" hotel.

The Gordian Knot

CROWE—COUGHLIN.

A quiet but pretty wedding was solemnized this morning at six o'clock at the Church of the Sacred Heart, when Miss Helen Rose Coughlin was united in marriage to Mr. Edward Crowe. Rev. Dr. O'Brien officiated.

The bride, who was assisted by her sister, Miss Veronica, was attired in a beautiful gown of grey taffeta trimmed with baby Irish lace and pearls, while her sister wore pink mulle with black velvet and overlace. The groom's gift to the bride was a pearl necklace, and to the bridesmaid an amethyst ring.

The groom was assisted by Mr. Harry Donovan.

The bride was the recipient of many beautiful presents, among which was a handsome clock from the employees of J. J. Turner and Sons, where the groom is employed.

The bride's travelling suit was of lady's navy blue coth, with large black hat to match.

The young couple will reside at 218 King street.

NATTRASS—McCONNELL.

In the Methodist church, Millbrook, on Wednesday, September 14th, a charming wedding of great interest was solemnized by the Rev. W. P. Rogers, of Millbrook, when Miss Minnie Irene Nattrass, of Millbrook, and Mr. Ed. McConnell, of Lindsay, were joined in holy matrimony in the presence of a large number of friends and guests.

The bride was prettily attired in a beautiful travelling suit, and carried a large bouquet of roses, carnations and maiden-hair ferns. She was given away by her father, Mr. Harry Nattrass, while Miss Stella Hetherington played the wedding march. The ceremony was performed under an arch of asters, roses and ferns.

Mr. W. Cameron and Mr. W. H. Coombe performed the duties of ushers.

After the ceremony a charming reception was given at the bride's home the house being attractively and becomingly adorned for the occasion.

A large number of guests were present, some of whom were Mr. and Mrs. R. McConnell and daughter, Maud of Emily; Mr. B. Mainers, of Lindsay, and Miss Millie Richardson, of Toronto.

Mr. and Mrs. McConnell left on a wedding tour to Toronto, Winnipeg and North Dakota, and will be absent three or four weeks. They will reside in Lindsay on their return.

The bride was the recipient of a large number of handsome presents, among them being a Morris chair from the bride's parents, also a linen shower from Miss Dean's Sunday school class, and a kitchen shower from the choir.

The "Rue Edouard VII."

Paris, Sept. 20.—Paris will in a few months have a new street. It will be called the Rue Edouard VII., after "the most Parisian of Kings," and as a fashionable shopping and lounging thoroughfare it will probably rival the Rue de la Paix.

The Rue Edouard VII will be a rainbow-shaped street, about a quarter of a mile in length, situated between the Rue Scribe and the Rue de Caumartin.

Five Injured In Tenement Fire.

New York, Sept. 20.—Five persons were injured, two perhaps fatally, in a panic which attended an early morning fire in a downtown tenement district on the west side yesterday. Two of the injured are women. All were hurt by jumping from windows.

Hotel Gutted by Fire.

Lindsay, Sept. 20.—A serious fire broke out in the Queen's Hotel, Woodville, Sunday afternoon, which was only extinguished after a stern fight made by the bucket brigade. The hotel was badly gutted and will not be ready for occupation for some time.

TEA FOR THE GUARD.

The Festivities Were Conducted on Strict Military Lines.

While looking for pirates along the Chinese coast, Admiral John Moresby encountered some strange adventures and some that were ludicrous. One of his experiences he describes in "Two Admirals."

When visiting the mandarin of Tien Pach, he with his blue button, robes and attendants, I with our paymaster, gunner and a guard of ten marines and a sergeant, tea was offered to us and accepted as a matter of course. Then, in an access of politeness, the attendant proceeded with the tea to the guard, stiffly drawn up in the courtyard, the men with rifles shouldered.

The sergeant looked round distractedly for guidance; he had no precedent for a tea party on duty. The men stared with cool contempt at the spoonful of acid tea.

Fearing lest a refusal might be an affront, I hastily said, "Sergeant, let the men take it."

He looked at me for an instant with a long, horrified look of remonstrance; then, stepping to the front as if drilling, he gave the word:

"Order arms! Ground arms! Take the cups! Drink the tea!"

Like Wordsworth's "forty feeding like one," they grasped the cups and with a single gesture emptied them down their throats.

Next came the stately commands: "Return the cup! Take up arms! Shoulder arms!"

It was done. The sergeant was himself again; he felt he had been equal to the occasion, and I stifled my unseasonable laughter in a cough and a handkerchief.

GENERAL HAMILTON.

Many Good Stories Are Told of Lord Kitchener's Successor.

Some good stories are being told of General Sir Ian Hamilton, who was recently appointed to the post of inspector-general of the Mediterranean forces to succeed Lord Kitchener. Here is one of them:

In the late Boer war one of the columns, half regular, under General Ian Hamilton, became so notorious for looting that the soldiers were nicknamed "the Thousand Thieves." Consequently General Hamilton reviewed them one day in a small village near Bloemfontein for the purpose of warning them against any future depredations. The column had just drawn up and was waiting for the general to begin the review when a ragged rooster ran out from a hut and across the front of the line. Suddenly a private left the line and ran after the rooster.

"Halt!" shouted Hamilton.

The soldier ran on. He soon overtook the rooster and turned back, wringing the neck of the fowl. As he passed the general he noted the fierce scowl on his face. The soldier was not easily daunted, but this time he temporized. Throwing the defunct rooster at the feet of the general, he said, "There now; I'll tache ye t' halt whin the gineral says so."

At which the column roared with laughter, and even the general smiled, and the soldier got only two days' imprisonment.

Threaten to Tie Up Every Contract.

Montreal, Sept. 20.—At a meeting of striking plumbers yesterday, it was said by one of the officers that a settlement of the dispute might be reached on Wednesday. If they failed to reach a settlement, the threat was made that every important contract in Montreal would be tied up indefinitely.

Oldest Barrister In Canada Dead.

St. John, N.B., Sept. 20.—Robert Hutchinson, K.C., clerk of the peace in Kent County, registrar of vital statistics, and Norwegian and Swedish consul, is dead, aged 85 years. He was probably the oldest practicing barrister in Canada.

Threaten Big Lockout.

Manchester, Eng., Sept. 20.—The federation of master cotton spinners yesterday decided on a general lockout on Oct. 1, unless the Fern mill dispute at Oldham is settled by that date.

In the event of a lockout 150,000 operatives will be affected directly.

Accidentally Killed.

Cornwall, Sept. 20.—While working in the lumber woods near Cloquet, Minn., Dan McDougall, son of the late John Ridley McDougall, and brother of the late Alex. McDougall, lot 32, concession 9 of Lancaster, Glengarry, was accidentally killed.

Suffocated In Tar.

Sharon, Pa., Sept. 20.—Playing about a vat of tar yesterday the 2 1-2-year-old son of John Koss fell in and was suffocated. Several hours after being missed, the child's mother found his body, half submerged in the tar.

Attempted Suicide.

Orangeville, Sept. 20—John Stephen Switzer, a young hired farm hand of East Luther Township, is in jail here, charged with attempted suicide while temporarily insane. Switzer, who is an unmarried man about 25, gashed his throat and forehead with a razor and nearly severed his left wrist.

Welsh Colliers on Strike.

Cardiff, Wales, Sept. 20.—Twelve thousand miners employed in the Cambrian colliery trust, went on strike yesterday, forcing the temporary closing of the mines that supply practically all of the coal for the English navy.

Charged With Forgery.

St. Thomas, Sept. 20.—Marshall McMillan has been arrested, charged with issuing forged checks on the trademen and banks here during the past month or so.

An automobile came whizzing through a small town and bowled over a prominent resident. Among those who saw the accident and were excited by it was a young physician just beginning to practice.

"A doctor! A doctor!" he cried. "Somebody run for a physician!"

"How about yourself?" suggested an acquaintance who happened to be at the scene.

"Sure enough!" said the young practitioner. "I never thought of that."

At dinner especially—as at any "meat meal"—Regal Lager proves a real help to weak digestions. It tones the stomach and does the nerves good. Yet it is no more stimulant and certainly not an intoxicant.

The names of those lost were: William Woodruff, Robert Young and the latter's sister, Mary.

Col. Gibson In Winnipeg.

Winnipeg, Sept. 20.—The Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario, Hon. J. M. Gibson, arrived in this city at noon, and was met by a delegation of prominent Scottish Rite Masons. Last night a reception was held by the craft in the Masonic Temple. Mr. Gibson, who is being entertained at Government House, said "the bountifulness of what I have already seen in the West strikes me as most impressive. The Duffield Block, which has stood at the west end of Ontario street for over twenty-five years, and which was in a very delapidated condition, was the scene of the fire.

There had been no person living in it for some time, and the origin is unknown. It was not long until the whole building was a mass of flames, and only for the rain that had fallen before, the fire would likely have spread to other buildings.

It Saves You Waiting

On Saturdays we have so many persons who drive long distances or come by train, that we are unable to promise appointments for that day, but we wait upon persons in turn. Many persons call write or phone for appointment, we then reserve time for such and it saves them much waiting, as the time so given is kept open for them. We make such appointments for any day or evening other than Saturday. Evening is quite as good as day time for the eye examination, but it is necessary to arrange for this a day or two in advance.

C.M.A. ARE UNWILLING TO ADVOCATE HIGH TARIFF

Recommendation of Committee That an Educational Campaign be Instituted is Rejected by Convention—Will Wait and See What Steps Are Taken.

Vancouver, Sept. 22.—Practically rejecting a resolution to conduct a campaign of education along tariff policy lines, but at the same time expressing the hope that the Dominion Government would not overthrow the present fiscal arrangements in favor of those more radically making for free trade, the Canadian Manufacturers' Association yesterday debated the most important features of the present situation with respect to free trade and protection.

"Let us not listen to a sectional, parochial, little meeting of grain growers," said C. S. J. Phillips of Montreal, in urging that no discussion of the issues be undertaken at the present time.

"The less said now, the better," remarked A. Saunders of Goderich.

It was in adopting this idea of silence for the immediate present that the convention decided not to make any move towards instructing its tariff committee to go ahead with a campaign along protection lines.

The debate came at the close of the reception of the tariff committee's report. It was to the effect that the committee mentioned undertake the duty of issuing pamphlets, laying the tariff situation before the citizens of Canada, especially those in the agricultural districts, and that a select committee meet their representative body for the purpose of taking up the whole issue.

H. J. Waddie of Hamilton proposed the resolution, and R. A. Robertson seconded. While nothing in it specifically stated that protection was to be laid before the people as a desirable policy, yet that was the understanding, and the entire debate was not centred on whether protection was needed or not, but rather as to whether the association should advance protection arguments now, or wait until the opening of Parliament before attempting to meet the memorials recently laid before Premier Laurier by the farmers of the middle west.

Mr. Waddie, who was responsible for the unsuccessful resolution for a tariff educational campaign, said the farmers needed the lesson the most. The discussion had been missed by the manufacturers on their way across the prairies. There the free trade germ had been started, and, with advent of so many free traders from the old country, who found the present tariff conditions in this young land rather irksome, the doctrines of free trade would be largely spread, unless a counter campaign was carried on. The farmers evidently thought that they were being "soaked" for the benefit of the manufacturers' interests, and it was the duty of the latter to demonstrate that this was not so.

P. W. Ellis of Toronto thought that it would be wiser if the manufacturer would take some action to hold a conference with the agricultural interests, with a view to arriving at some amicable arrangements as to tariffs. At the present time some of the free traders, such as one man in Portage la Prairie, declared that the seven million people in Canada should not be taxed $100,000,000, but they did not go on to say to what they proposed doing to raise the money necessary for the improvements demanded in the Dominion, and they did not offer any changes to the present policy of tariffs prevailing in the country. It was strange why so many took exception to the levying of duties which provided money for the needs of Canada. He followed with illustrations of what had been achieved by the protection in the United States.

R. A. Robertson of Hamilton, confessing himself as one of the "extinct dodos" in the manufacturing ranks who did not favor high protection, declared that, instead of starting a campaign to spread the doctrines of protection, it would be wiser to approach the farmers with a little sugar coating and hold conferences with them. It could perhaps be termed "A Conference for the Discussion of Ways and Means for Maintaining the Revenue of the Country."

The supporters of the "wait" idea won, and an amendment to leave the whole question in the hands of the committee to do as was thought best, took the place of the resolution which was withdrawn.

Only one business session was held yesterday. Three will be held to-day, the closing day of the convention, with a banquet in the evening, following the election of officers and members of the executive council. Ballots have been handed out to the delegates and will be returned to-day.

Assaulted Six-Year-Old Child.

Winnipeg, Sept. 22.—Two years and twenty lashes was the sentence meted out by Judge Meyers yesterday to Arthur Lefevre, for criminally assaulting a child six years old. R. P. Graham, deputy assistant attorney-general, for the crown, recommended the maximum penalty, that of life.

Married at Eighty-One.

Leamington, Sept. 22.—Major A. W. Morley, 81 years of age, was united in marriage here yesterday to Mrs. Mary Wood, aged 73 years. The major was born and raised in Lake County, Ohio. He is a veteran of the American civil war.

Taxi Drivers Out on Strike.

Pittsburg, Sept. 22.—All Pittsburg taxicabs were tied up at midnight because of a strike of the chauffeurs, who declare they will not return to work until the companies agree to pay for the gasoline.

TROLLEY CARS COLLIDE—FORTY-TWO LIVES LOST

Fort Wayne, Ind., Sept. 22.—Forty-two passengers were killed and seven were seriously injured in a head-on collision between two interurban cars on the Fort Wayne and Bluffton division of the Fort Wayne and Wabash Valley Line yesterday. The wreck occurred seven miles north of Bluffton at a sharp curve.

The cars in collision were a northbound local car, crowded to the steps, and a southbound extra car from Fort Wayne. They met while both were running at high speed.

The collision is said to have been made by a misunderstanding of orders for the southbound extra to take a switch near Kingsland. The motormen of the two cars did not have time to set brakes when they sighted each other.

The heavily loaded northbound car was crushed and the bodies of the dead and injured were strewn on either side of the track amid the wreckage. The screams of the injured men and women, following the crash of the cars, brought the neighboring farmers to the scene.

Conductor Spiller of the southbound car was unhurt, and ran back toward Kingsland and flagged a car which was approaching the wreck at full speed and would have plunged into it.

Wrecking cars and physicians were rushed from Fort Wayne and Bluffton and the bodies of the dead and the injured were conveyed to hospitals in the two cities.

BAR HOBBLE SKIRT FROM THIS CHURCH

Grovesville, N.J., Sept. 20.—Rev. Peter Henry, of the First Reformed Church, walked out of his study the other day and saw a hobble skirt. Rev. Mr. Henry made a mental note of it, and on Sunday the hobble skirt was his theme. He called them walking balloons and designated the wearers as lunatics and godless ones.

The anti-hobble crusade created a sensation in town, for the pastor made the positive announcement that no woman wearing such a skirt would be admitted into his church. "Any one," said he, "who will so debase herself and her sex as to wear such a sartorial travesty should be chastised."

No damage to the crops west of Edmonton has resulted from the recent frosts and rain, according to J. J. Moore of the Immigration Department.

Three men were arrested at Oak Lake, Man., with about four thousand dollars' worth of jewelry in their possession, stolen from a store in Mamiota.

Judge Demers of Montreal refused yesterday to maintain an injunction against the civic enquiry into the charges that certain employes were Freemasons. His honor declared, however, that the investigation was irregular.

That Canadian manufacturers should unite in having an agency in the City of Mexico is the suggestion made by the trade commissioner in the weekly report issued by the Department of Trade and Commerce. At present the U. S. practically controls the market.

CRIPPEN MUST STAND TRIAL FOR MURDER OF BELLE ELMORE

Ethel Leneve is to be Tried as Accessory After the Fact—Evidence That She Was Going to Marry Crippen After His Divorce Turns Tide Against Her.

London, Sept. 22.—Dr. Hawley H. Crippen and his typist, Ethel Clara Leneve, were formally committed yesterday for trial for the murder of the former's wife, Cora Belle Crippen, the actress who was known on the stage at Belle Elmore. The doctor is charged as the principal and his companion as an accessory after the fact.

Arthur Newton, counsel for the prisoners, said he would reserve his defence until the trial proper was held.

The inquest into the death of the person, parts of whose body were unearthed in the cellar of the Crippen home in Hilldrop crescent, has not been ended, and another session of the court will be held next Monday. The crown has attempted show that the parts found were of the body of Belle Elmore, but its medical experts have not been able to swear positively regarding the sex of the victim. At Monday's session Emily Jackson, at whose home Miss Leneve lodged up to March 12 last, recited a conversation which she had with her lodger, which indicated that the girl expected to marry Crippen after his wife had left him. This testimony appears to have robbed the accused girl of some sympathy which she has heretofore enjoyed, and was the cause of a hostile demonstration when she arrived at the Bow street court yesterday. The cab which she occupied, which was followed by a crowd of hooting women, and their taunts, were echoed by the throng that had gathered in the vicinity of the court.

There was nothing especially new in yesterday's testimony. Inspector Dew identified the suit of boy's clothing, which William Long swore he had purchased at Crippen's request, as the suit worn by Miss Leneve at the time of her arrest. Mrs. Jackson repeated the evidence which she had given before the coroner's jury. Miss Merion Curnow, who formerly was employed as an office manager by Crippen, told of cashing checks for the doctor shortly before he fled for Canada. She said Crippen told her to say nothing about him to anyone. Gilbert M. Rylance, the prisoner's partner in the manufacture of artificial teeth, told of receiving a note from Crippen in which the latter said that in order to escape trouble he would be obliged to absent himself for a time.

ONTARIO PEACHES IN LONDON

Toronto, Sept. 22.—C. C. James, deputy Minister of Agriculture, received a cablegram from N. B. Colcock, Ontario Government agent in London, yesterday, stating that the first shipment of Ontario peaches to England have arrived in excellent condition and the fruit is on sale in Covent Garden, where it is eagerly sampled by dealers.

The fruit was grown near the experimental farm at Jordan, and was selected by P. W. Hodgetts.

Consignments of peaches have been made from South Africa to London, and Mr. James states that 5,000 baskets will be shipped from Ontario to London this season.

"LINE BUSY" AND THEN TWO WOMEN GOT VERY BUSY

Pittsburg, Pa., Sept. 21.—Incensed over the continual repetition of the phrase, "Line's busy" while she and her guests were delayed at bridge whist because of an absent friend, Miss Hazel Gillen, daughter of John Gillen, prominent horseman and ice manufacturer of Fayette City, Pa., last night left her home and her guests to investigate the local Bell Telephone Exchange and learn the reason why she could not get telephone connections with a young woman she wanted to "fill in."

Trouble was found and plenty of it when Miss Gillen reached the head of the first flight of stairs at the exchange. A whirlwind in the form of the much abused "Central," Miss Lillian Usher, enveloped her and a second later both young women were rolling down the stairs and on to the sidewalk in each other's arms.

With their skirts wrapped about their shoulders the young women took a "death grip" on the sidewalk when they stopped rolling, and to the amusement of a number of men and boys proceeded to pull hair and attempt to choke each other, until one man stepped forward, righted their skirts and separated the two fighters. Hair "rats," side combs and barrettes and one switch, the ownership of which neither of the young women will acknowledge, littered the sidewalk.

In the meantime the father of Miss Gillen was entertaining the guests at the Gillen home, but within a few minutes the bridge party was broken up, when the hostess, with her hair hanging down her back, a deep scratch on one cheek, a black and blue eye and her evening costume in tatters, was assisted to the porch and into the hall, where a maid and her father took charge and carried the young woman to her room. She has not left the house since. Miss Usher was asked to resign. She escaped with a few bruises and one slight scratch. The technical charge made against Miss Usher by the telephone is leaving her switchboard while on duty.

THE GATEMAN SOME ATHLETE

American Colonel is Beaten by Canadian Student.

Windsor, Ont., Sept. 22.—Excitement reigned for a short time yesterday morning at the ferry dock when Douglas Kay, one of the best known athletes in Ontario, and winner of medals and trophies that would fill a bushel basket, gave Col. Lattimer, of Detroit, a demonstration of his pugilistic prowess.

Lattimer is one of Detroit's most prominent citizens and lives on the Canadian river-front above Walkerville. He came down to the ferry dock in his auto yesterday morning, just as the gates closed. Kay is acting as gateman at the ferry during the summer vacation. Words were exchanged between Lattimer and Kay and the former said he would thrash the young man. He received an invitation to come ahead. Lattimer jumped out of his auto and was promptly felled by a well-directed blow from Kay's fist.

Kay is a Toronto University student and holds an amateur record as shot-putter. He is also a disc thrower of renown.

CONFERENCE ON UNEMPLOYMENT

Paris, Sept. 22.—The international conference on unemployment yesterday decided upon the formation of an international association for the purpose of co-ordinating the efforts being made in different countries to combat unemployment through the establishment of separate national organizations.

Former Premier Bourgeois in closing the congress especially commended the attitude of the Labor representatives participating, and said that an opening of the whole question of unemployment would lead to a better understanding between employers and employes.

DREADFUL MURDER

Westchester, Pa., Sept. 22.—Search is being made to-day by the police of all towns in this vicinity for a man who is suspected of murdering Mrs. John Saus, her two small daughters, and a young son, at their home at Byers, Pa., 12 miles from here. The suspect formerly boarded at the Saus home, and it is believed robbery was the motive for the terrible deed, and that the four victims were killed in order to prevent an identification. The skulls of the woman and her children had been crushed in as though by an axe or heavy club.

The bodies were discovered by the husband and father upon his return from work Tuesday night.

A NOVELTY IN STRIKE

Halifax, Sept. 22.—A new phase of the strike in the Cumberland Railway & Coal Co.'s mines in Springhill, is being experienced. The men have been out for fourteen months. When the school re-opened the children of the strikers went out in a body, refusing to sit beside the children of the strikebreakers or men at work in the mines. The former were in the majority, and they not only went out, but stayed out.

The school authorities, to tide over the trouble in the meantime, have asked the non-union youngsters to stay away from school.

Boy Charged With Killing.

Gretna, Man., Sept. 22.—Diedrich Hiebert, a 13-year-old boy, has been committed for trial on a charge of having caused the death of Isaac Hiebert, who was found dead with a bullet wound in his head on Sept. 4.

Killed by Falling Gun.

Lindsay, Sept. 22.—At Lotus, a small village near Janetville, Donald Finney, went to visit a neighbor. A loaded gun fell down from a peg, went off and killed him instantly.

EIGHTEEN THOUSAND ON PARADE

Atlantic City, Sept. 22.—Eighteen thousand grizzled veterans of the civil war, with cadence that showed the weight of years they bear, marched yesterday through flag-bedecked avenues. Along the line of march arose the cheers and applause of the greatest crowd that ever saw a parade in Atlantic City.

Never before had the thinning of the ranks been so noticeable. Many of the states were represented by a mere handful of veterans. The smallest delegation was from Arizona, just an old grizzled veteran in line, who got nearly as much applause as he marched along as did the big army of Pennsylvania, which had the largest number of men in the parade.

PLOT TO KILL JAP EMPEROR

Tokio, Sept. 22.—A sensation was created by the publication yesterday afternoon of the alleged details of a plot among his own subjects to assassinate Emperor Mutsuhito.

The startling story appeared in The Hochi Shimbun, which states that the plotters, who are now under arrest, certainly will be sentenced to death, after trials before a special secret court.

This is the first time in the history of the country that the life of the sovereign has been plotted against by his own people, and the fact known. There are now in jail in this city a number of persons who are alleged to be active in the Allied Socialist movement.

Awarded $1,000 Damages.

Toronto, Sept. 22.—Henry Corby, 13 Temperance street, was awarded $1,000 in the non-jury assizes yesterday against George Bryan, 16 Temperance street, in a fight over a joist between properties which Corby claimed overcrowded on his land. Bryan has the option of paying the thousand or removing the objectionable portion of the joist.

CHAINED TO HIS CHAIR

Uniontown, Pa., Sept. 22.—The spectacle of a man charged with double murder being chained to his chair was presented here yesterday, when B. Frank Smith was brought into court in the continuance of his trial upon the charge of having killed his father and brother-in-law. Smith on Tuesday made a spectacular attack upon District Attorney Patterson during the court session, in a futile attempt to brain the public prosecutor with a heavy bottle.

FRANK JACKSON CAUGHT IN TOLEDO

Toronto, Sept. 22.—Word was received by Superintendent of Provincial Police Rogers yesterday that Frank Jackson, colored, has been arrested in Toledo, in connection with the murder of Jacob Enos at Chatham on July 18 last. Inspector Greer left last night for Toledo with the necessary papers, to apply for extradition.

The story of the affair is that Jackson, John Johnson and one Needham, were going home together about 11 o'clock on the night in question. They met Enos and a quarrel ensued. The latter was stabbed in the abdomen and Enos received a bullet in the eye, which penetrated the brain and proved fatal. Johnson has been arrested in Detroit, and if Jackson is extradited the pair will be charged with murder at the assizes in Chatham.

MURDERER A SUICIDE

Vancouver, Sept. 22.—George Reid, who murdered his wife at Clayburn two weeks ago in a fit of jealousy, committed suicide, for his body was found yesterday floating in the Fraser River. The throat was cut from ear to ear, apparently with the same razor that was used by Reid in killing his young wife. The young couple were from Midland, Ont.

No Frivolity for West Durham.

Bowmanville, Sept. 22.—West Durham fall fair yesterday was another record-breaker, for there were larger crowds than have been. This has been for years and continues to be a purely agricultural exhibition. No horse racing, midways or fake attractions. It is emphatically a live stock show, with horses far in the ascendancy.

Winnipeg, Sept. 22.—The death occurred yesterday morning of Edward Manahan, a well-known Winnipeg merchant, after an illness of about four months with Bright's disease. He came here from his birthplace, Lanark, Ont., in 1877.

SWALLOWED MERCURY PILLS

Ottawa, Sept. 22.—There was a scene of excitement in the police cells yesterday, when Rose Cyr, aged 19, who had just been sentenced to nine months with hard labor, swallowed three mercury pills in an attempt to commit suicide.

The strength of the dose probably saved her life, for in a few moments after swallowing the poison she became violently sick, and the pills were ejected before they had time to dissolve and permeate her system.

COLUMBIA'S RIGHT TO PROPERTY?

New York, Sept. 22.—The right of Columbia College to property worth approximately $1,000,000 bequeathed to it for a cancer research fund by the late George Crocker, the California millionaire, was attacked yesterday, when Crocker's stepchildren applied to the Supreme Court for an injunction to prevent the executors of the will from selling the property.

Changes In Bank of Ottawa.

Ottawa, Sept. 22.—David M. Finnie, who occupies the dual position of assistant general manager of the Bank of Ottawa and manager of the principal Ottawa branch, will from now on devote all his time to the duties of assistant general manager. F. C. Mulkins, assistant manager of the Bank of Ottawa here, has been promoted to be manager.

Ottawa Suffragist Dead.

Ottawa, Sept. 22.—Mrs. J. H. Brown, who was the leading spirit in the woman's suffrage movement in Ottawa, died yesterday afternoon. She was a daughter of Mrs. Dr. Youmans of Winnipeg. One of the deceased lady's sons is a reporter on The Montreal Witness, and another in on The Ottawa Free Press.

SIR JAMES SENT KING PEACHES

London, Sept. 22.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—The Canadian Associated Press understands Sir James Whitney sent King George a box of Canadian peaches, and received a letter from the King's secretary acknowledging the receipt of the peaches.

Wants Representation for Women.

Montreal, Sept. 22.—There are suffragettes in Montreal, and a Mrs. H. Bullock of that fraternity appeared before the Technical Commission yesterday and complained that women were not represented on the board.

THE EXPOSITION

The Toronto Star, the Brockville Times and the Hamilton Spectator are arguing. The Star thinks that Ontario should erect a building to exhibit its products at the National Exhibition. The idea is a good one The province is rich, and we see no reason why its richness in mineral, in timber, in fish and bird and animal should not be shown. Then, too, the big pumpkin should have a place. Toronto is known as hog town, but it is certainly one of the cleanest, sanest and most up-to-date cities in America. Buffalo is dirty, Detroit is showy, but Toronto is solid, Toronto is sound.

WILL COME TO LIFE

The Galt Reporter is dead. However, it will come to life. There is nothing in the world harder to kill than a newspaper. "Stop my paper." the indignant subscriber comes in and orders his name off the list. "I'll give you the worst of it," he mutters, as he goes out. But the paper goes on day in, day out, in the same way. "Take out my 'ad.'" Yet the paper goes on. The manager dies. The paper has an editorial on his good qualities. The editor goes away. The gap is filled and he is soon forgotten. no matter how good he might have been. No one is indespensable, but a newspaper is, and the Galt Reporter will come out rehabilitated, re-dressed, and go on as if nothing ever happened.

BANG

The deer-shooting season opened in New York State on the 15th, already reports of hunters shooting one another in mistake for deer have begun to come in. One case is that of a young man shooting his father, the bullet smashing both bones of the leg below the knee. There are many people who never should be allowed in the woods with a gun. — Hamilton Times.

A form moves, a rifle is raised, the trigger is pulled, bang! The dogs are giving tongue—"My God, I've shot Bill." This incident took place last fall. This incident, yes an incident—no, a tragedy—took place last fall and they wired the widow. She put on mourning and took boarders. It will be repeated this year. The season when the fool rocks the boats is over, and the season when the fool with the gun enters the woods is about to arrive.

DISMISSED

Welland, Sept. 19.—Because his solicitor, W. K. Douglass, K.C., one of the most eminent lawyers in Canada, would not ask a trifling question which he had requested him to do, Roland B. Tanner, a young and wealthy fruit farmer of Fonthill, created a scene in the court room of the court house here on Friday afternoon the like of which has never been equalled in the Canadian courts in the history of Canada. He, in open court, dismissed his lawyer.

With Mr. Douglas was associated Mr. Hugh Rose. Well why shouldn't he dismiss him. He was paying the shot. That's all right, he was paying a man to do something for him and then wanted to tell him how to do it. If John Burns asked Bill Jones to plaster his house for him and then went in and told him how to handle his trowel, Bill would tell him where he got off at. Tanner made a mistake. Others make the same mistake. The president of the railway rides in his special train. The engineer is on the job. He doesn't show the engineer how to run his engine. He trusts him to get him over the line.

This is an age of specialists—you in your corner and I in mine. However, Judge Weils said; "Tanner, you have dismissed your lawyer, but you will have to pay his fee."

A LEARNED BODY

"Upon the Function and Fate of the Cystidia of Coprinus Atramentarius." By A. H. R. Buller, D.Sc., Ph.D.

The Royal Society of Canada will meet in Ottawa on September 26th, 27th and 28th. They are a learned body of men. They look like we do, they have a head, a mouth, nose and two eyes, legs and arms, but say, in that head is enough grey matter to stock a regiment of soldiers. They all wear 7 1-4 hats. They will discuss the function and fate of the cystida of Corpinus Atramentarius—whoever he is and whatever his business, it will all be decided at this meeting. Other live matters will be looked into. A. S. Eve and D. McIntosh will talk on THE INFLUENCE OF ACIDS AND SALTS ON THE AMOUNT OF EMANATION LIBERATED FROM A SOLUTION OF RADIUM. Now, this is a live question. However, it has nothing to do with the necessity for a garbage by-law and the use of the Musca Domestica.

THE ONE WHO ERRED

Beamsville, Sept. 19.—It looks as though a young lady has been decoyed from Oakville to Beamsville by a married man of the road, who travels for a firm in the city of Hamilton who, she claims, has $5 of her money and left her.

We are sorry for this girl. We know her. She is from a good family and is unfortunate enough to possess a fine physique and a pretty face. Yes, with it goes a weak will.

We are sorry for her because we know that she has tried to live right. We are sorry for the boozer and the poker player, who are struggling to be free. We see their mistakes but the Great and Infinite Eye sees their heart. He sees their hidden agony, their tears and remorse. The world will shun that girl, but the world is wrong. The world always puts its foot on any one that falls. Why is it. That Great Man who stooped and wrote on the ground did not. Why should we?

A CONCEPTION OF RELIGION AND HAPPINESS

Dear Friend;—Do you think I can succeed at 50?

Answer;—Not unless you do.

Dear Friend;—Seriously now, has any man of note (pardon my bluntness) ever written out a prescription of happiness?

Answer;—Dr. Charles W. Eliot, of Harvard, has just published a volume in which he prescribes that "the best way to secure future happiness is to be as happy as is rightfully possible to-day."

Among the possibilities of pleasures he names eating, seeing things, fireside joys, and productive labor, whether mental or manual. To be of service in the world is the keynote of his conception of both religion and happiness.

Dear Friend;—Here I am at thirty, and getting only $15 a week. What chance is there for me?

Answer;—A chance to rise.

Dear Friend;—I am greatly troubled by a gang of boys playing in the street under my window. What is a good way to get rid of them?

Answer;—Think of something else.

Dear Friend;—What are the greatest rewards offered in this world?

Answer;—Money for criminals, and happiness for all others.

CANADA AND ARGENTINA

A bye-product of the Laurier policy is the curiously unamiable attitude which some Liberal journals find it necessary to adopt towards other countries. They are busy shouting that the Laurier Government and the Laurier Government alone has made Canada great, rich, happy and prosperous. The awkward thing about the argument is that during the period that the Laurier Government has been smiling on Canada other countries have been prospering too. Has then the Laurier Government been working for these outsiders as well as for the children of the Kingdom? Or has there been a general world-wide prosperity in which Canada has shared while the Luarier Government sat on top, smiled, and drew salaries? Perish the thought. Those outside countries simply must not be prosperous. And so it happens that it is high treason now even to suggest that other countries are doing well. It is not necessary to show pleasure in their objectionable fortune. it is sufficient to mention it.

For example, in his speech at Guysborough, Mr. Borden noted that Argentina, a country in much the same position as Canada as regards great area, virgin soil, scanty population and adaptability for raising agricultural produce, has got on just about as rapidly as Canada has, though the poor things there have not had the Laurier Government to beam upon them. Forth with a squall of rage arose from the Laurier press. "Borden is knocking the country." Has he run down Canada? No. He simply has pointed out that another country in a similar position has done just about as well. Treason, treason.

Alas, facts are facts. During the last dozen years the progress of Argentina has been quite as rapid as that of Canada. Her wheat production is increasing with great rapidity; twenty-five years ago she imported flour for her own consumption; whereas now she imports five or six million tons of flour besides enormous quantities of wheat. She has an enormous live stock and dead meat trade. Her railways are growing at the rate of about 2,000 miles a year. The immigration into her plains is enormous. Here are a few facts.

In 1895 the cultivated area of Argentina was 12,000,000 acres and it now is 47,000,000 acres, of which 14,000,000 or 15,000,000 acres are devoted to wheat. Canada last year had about 9,000,000 acres in wheat.

Canada and Argentina—Take 2

With regard to wheat production, during the past four or five years the Argentine harvest has gone as high as 200,000,000 bushels and fallen as low as 140,000,000 bushels, while the Canadian wheat harvest has gone as high as 166,000,000 and fallen as low as 90,000,000 bushels. It is to be noted that the Argentine wheat exports are far heavier than those of Canada. The United Kingdom has imported wheat and flour from the two countries as follows. The flour is expressed in terms of wheat, and the unit is the hundredweight of 112 pounds—

	Argentine.	Canada.
1904...	21,841,650	9,036,643
1905...	24,093,067	8,369,391
1906...	19,383,028	13,824,283
1907...	21,969,211	15,022,366
1908...	31,837,297	16,810,990

It is worth while to turn aside from the issue immediately in hand to interject that Argentina exports a far larger proportion of her wheat than Canada does. The reason is that Canada, thanks to the National Policy, has a larger home market, and so the Canadian farmer can sell a large part of his wheat in his own country.

Argentina always has been a ranching country, and this industry continues to flourish. In 1908 the principal live stock figures were; Cattle, 29,000,000; horses, 7,500,000; sheep, 67,000,000. In Canada in the same year there were 7,500,000 cattle, 2,100,000 horses, 2,800,000 sheep and 3,300,000 swine. The numbers decreased in 1909. The Argentine has a large dead meat trade.

The immigration figures come next. Those for Canada have been taken from the Canada Year Book—

	Argentine.	Canada.
1905...	221,622	146,266
1906...	301,249	189,064
1907...	257,924	252,038
1908...	303,112	204,071
1909...	232,458	152,071

Finally, there is the test of trade. In 1896 the Argentine had a total trade rather smaller than that of Canada. The figures were $228,900,000 for the Argentine and $231,600,000 for Canada. During the past few years the figures have been as follows. Allowance has been made for the fact that 1907 was a nine-months period in the case of Canada, the figures having been corrected accordingly. The Argentine figures have been reduced to Canadian money—

	Argentine.	Canada
1907...	$582,064,970	$612,672,568
1908...	$616,613,844	$638,435,222
1909...	$675,602,880	$559,718,116
1910...	not available	$677,142,116

For the three years, 1907, 1908 and 1909 the Argentine trade totalled $1,873,000,000 as against a Canadian aggregate of $1,810,000,000.

The whole thing amounts to this. The last dozen years have been singularly favorable to countries with large areas of virgin soil, abundant natural resources and scanty population Argentina and Canada, each in its way, is an example of the type, and each has made wonderful progress. Of the two, the Argentine has gone ahead rather more rapidly. The sensible thing for Canadians is to note their rival's progress, and still more absurd to declare that we must never mention it. The Laurier journals are led into both these absurdities by their fundamental absurdity or arguing that the Laurier Government had made the present prosperity.

SIDE LIGHTS

DEAD.

Gueiph Herald.

Breathes there a man with a soul so dead,
Who ever to himself has said,
"My trade of late is getting bad,
I'll try another ten inch ad."
If such there be, go mark him well;
For him no bank account shall swell,
No angels watch the golden stair,
To welcome home the millionaire.
The man who never asks for trade,
By local line of ad. displayed
Cares more for rest than worldly gain,
And patronage but gives him pain
Tread lightly, friends, let no rude sound
Disturb his solitude profound,
Here let him live in calm repose,
Unsought except by men he owes!
And when he dies, go plant him deep,
That naught may break his dreamless sleep;
Where no rude clamor may dispel
The quiet that he loved so well.
And that the world may know its loss,
Place on the grave a wreath of moss
And on the stone above "Here lies
A chump who wouldn't advertise."

The Round-Up

A Romance of Arizona

Novelized From Edmund Day's Melodrama

By JOHN MURRAY and MILLS MILLER

Copyright, 1908, by G. W. Dillingham Co.

"Stop it!" Mrs. Allen shouted shrilly. "Slim Hoover, if your brains was dynamite you couldn't blow the top of your head off!"

Polly was greatly amused by Slim's encounter with the cleanly Mrs. Allen. Slim stood with open mouth, watching Mrs. Allen flounce out of the room after Echo, who was trying in vain to suppress her laughter. Turning to Polly, he said, "Ain't seen you in some time."

Slim was thankful that the girl was seated at the table with her back to him. Somehow or other he found he could speak to her more freely when she was not looking at him.

"That's so?" she challenged. "Come to the birthday?"

"Not regular," he answered.

Polly glanced at him over her shoulder. The look was too much for Slim. He turned away to hide his embarrassment. Partly recovering from his bashfulness, he coughed preparatory to speaking. But Polly had vanished. As one looks sheepishly for the magician's disappearing coin, so Slim gazed at floor and ceiling as if the girl might pop up anywhere. Spying an empty chair behind him, he sank into it gingerly and awkwardly.

Meantime Polly returned with a broom and began sweeping out the evidences of Slim's visit. She spoke again.

"Get them holdups yet that killed 'Old Man' Terrill?" she asked.

"Not yet. But we had a new shootin' over'n our town yesterday."

Slime was doing his best to make conversation. Polly did not help him out very freely.

"That so?" was her reply.

"Spotted Taylor shot two Chinamen."

Polly's curiosity was aroused.

"What for?" she asked, stopping her sweeping for a moment.

"Just to give the new graveyard a start," Slim chuckled.

Polly joined in his merriment.

"Spotted Taylor was always a public spirited citizen," was her comment.

"He sure was," assented Slim.

"Get up there. I want to sweep under that chair." Polly brushed Slim's feet with the broom vigorously. With an elaborate "Excuse me!" Slim arose, but reseated himself in another chair directly in the pathway of Polly's broom.

"Get out of there, too," she cried.

"Shucks! There ain't any room for me nowhere," he muttered disgustedly.

"You shouldn't take up so much of it."

Slim attempted to take a seat on the small gilt chair which was Jack's wedding present to Echo. Polly caught sight of him in time. "Look out," she shouted. "That chair wasn't built for a full grown man like you."

Slim nervously replaced the chair before a writing desk. Polly wielded her broom about the feet of the sheriff, who danced clumsily about trying to avoid her.

"You're just tryin' to sweep me out of here," he complained.

"Well, if you will bring dust in with you, you must expect to be swept out," Polly replied, with a show of spirit.

Polly was shaking the mat vigorously at the door when Slim said:

"I see they buried Poker Bill this mornin'."

"Is he dead?" It was the first Polly had heard of the passing away of one of the characters of the territory. She had expressed her surprise in the form of an interrogation, emphasizing the "he," a colloquialism of the southwest.

Slim, however, had chosen to ignore the manner of speech and, with a grin, answered: "Ye-es. That's why they buried him."

Polly laughed in spite of herself. "What did he die of?" she asked.

As Slim was about to take a drink at the olla he failed to hear her.

"Eh?" he grunted.

"What did he die of?" she repeated.

"Five aces," was the sober reply of the sheriff before he drained the gourd.

Polly put the broom back of the door and was rearranging the articles on the table before Slim could muster up enough courage to speak on the topic which was always uppermost in his mind when in her presence.

"Say, Miss Polly"— he began.

"If you've anything to say to me, Slim Hoover, just say it. I can't be bothered today—all the fixin's an' things," saucily advised the girl.

"Well, what I want to say is"— began the sheriff.

At this moment Bud Lane, laboring under heavy excitement, burst open the door.

"Say, Slim, you're wanted down at the corral," he cried, paying no heed to Polly.

"Shucks!" exclaimed the disappointed sheriff. "What's the row?"

"I don't know. Buck McKee, he's there with some of the Lazy K outfit. They want to see you."

Slim threw himself out of the door, with the mild expletive, "Darn the luck!"

Bud turned quickly to Polly. "Did Jack pay off the mortgage last week?" he almost shouted at the girl.

Polly stamped her foot in anger at what seemed to her to be a totally irrelevant question to the lovemaking she expected. "How do I know?" she angrily replied. "If that is all you come to see me for you can go an' ask him. It makes me so doggone mad!"

"Five aces," was the sober reply of the sheriff.

Polly, with flushed face and knitted brow, left the bewildered Bud standing in the center of the room asking himself what it was all about.

The sound of the voices of disputing men floated in from the corral. Bud heard them and comprehended its significance.

"It's all up with me!" he cried in mortal terror. "Buck McKee has stirred up the suspicion against Jack Payson. Jack paid off his mortgage, and they want to know where he raised the money. Well, Jack can tell. If he can't I'll confess the whole business. I won't let him suffer for me. Buck shan't let an innocent man hang for what we've done."

The sound of footsteps on the piazza and the opening of the door drove Bud to take refuge in an adjoining room, where he could overhear all that was happening. He closed the door as the cowpunchers entered, with Slim at their head.

CHAPTER XII.

BUCK M'KEE had not been idle in the days following the slaying of "Ole Man" Terrill. Having learned that Slim and his posse had discovered only the fact that the murderer had ridden a pacing horse to the ford, McKee took full advantage of this fact. In the cow camps, the barrooms and at the railroad station he hinted at first that a certain person every one knew could tell a lot more about the death of the old man than he cared to have known. After a few days he began to bring the name of Payson into the conversation. His gossip became rumor and then common report. When it became known that Jack had paid off the mortgage on his ranch Buck came out with the accusation that Payson was the murderer. Finding that he was listened to, Buck made the direct charge that Payson had killed the station agent and with the proceeds of the robbery was paying off his old debts.

Gathering his own men about him and being joined by the idle hangers on who are to be found about every town, Buck led his party to the ranch on the Sweetwater to accuse Jack and so throw off in advance any suspicions which might attach to himself.

Fortunately Slim happened to be at Jack's ranch at the time. When he entered the corral he found Jack's accusers and defenders rapidly nearing a battle.

Jack was taking the charges coolly enough, as he did not know what support McKee had manufactured to uphold the charges he made. Slim informed McKee he would listen to what he had to say and if afterward he thought Jack guilty he would place him under arrest; for all concerned it would be better to go into the house. The Sweetwater boys surrounded Jack as they followed Slim into the living room. Lining up in opposing groups, Slim stood in the center to serve as judge and jury, with Buck and Jack at his right and left hand.

Inside the door Jack said: "Keep as quiet as you can, boys. I don't want to alarm my wife. Now, what is it?"

The punchers hushed their discussion of the charge and listened attentively to what the men most interested had to say.

"Well, darn it all," apologized the sheriff to Jack, "it's all darn fool business anyway. Buck here, he started it."

Jack smiled sarcastically and, glancing at McKee, remarked, "Buck McKee's started a good many things in his day"—

Buck began to bluster. He could not face Jack fairly. Already placed on the defense when he had considered he would be the accuser, McKee took refuge in the plea of being wronged by false suspicion.

"I hain't goin'," he whined, "to have folks suspicion me uv any such doin's as the killin' uv 'Ole Man' Terrill. I got a witness to prove I wuzn't in twenty miles uv the place."

"Who's your witness?" asked Slim in his most judicial tones.

"Bud Lane. Me an' him rode over to the weddin' together from the Lazy K, an' I wuz put out as not fittin' to be there, an' by that very man there, that did the killin'."

The punchers had to grin in spite of the seriousness of the occasion. Buck appeared to be deeply hurt at the unceremonious way he had been left out at the feast.

"What makes you point to me as the man?" asked Jack quietly.

"You wuz late gettin' to yer own weddin'."

Fresno could not repress his feelings any longer. He started angrily toward McKee, but Jack and Sagebrush held him back. The others were about to follow his lead when Slim motioned them back with the caution, "Keep out of this, boys!"

"I was late," explained Jack, "but I told you I rode around to the station to get a wedding present I ordered for my wife"—

Jim interrupted him to substantiate the statement. Pointing to a desk, he said: "That's so. There it is, too—that there desk."

The Sweetwater outfit nodded in acquiescence, but the others looked incredulous

Buck sneered at the defense which Jack made. "Nobody saw you over that way, did they?"

"I saw Terrill. It must have been just before he was killed. I didn't meet anybody else." Jack showed no trace of temper under the inquisition.

"Of course you saw him before he wuz killed—about a minute. Mebbe you didn't plug him the next minute with a 44?"

The charge roused Sagebrush's fighting blood. Drawing his gun, he attempted to get a fair shot at the accuser. Fresno and Show Low grabbed him by the arms, holding him back. The foreman shouted, "There'll be some one plugged right now if you all make another break like that!"

Slim waved his hands over his head, driving the men backward, as if he were shooing away a flock of chickens.

"Easy, now—easy," he drawled. "There ain't a-goin' to be nothin' doin' here 'cept law an' justice."

Buck laughed sneeringly at the wavering of his men. He would have to do something to put more heart into them and regain the ground he had lost by his single handed conduct of the case.

"There hain't, eh?" he asked contemptuously. "Well, it's lucky I brought some uv my own outfit with me."

"Mebbe you'll need them if you get too careless with your talk," answered the unruffled sheriff.

Turning to Jack, Slim said, "This fool thing can be settled with one word from you."

The young ranchman listened to the sheriff earnestly. He wished to clear himself forever of all suspicions. He did not want Echo ever to hear that there was a false impression abroad that she was the wife of a slayer. "What is it?" he asked simply.

"Why, you paid off a mortgage of an even three thousan' dollars last week, didn't you?"

"Yes. What has that to do with it?" he asked.

Buck broke in at this point. Here was the strongest card that he had in his hand, and the sheriff had played it to McKee's advantage.

"Plenty!" Buck shouted. "Old Terrill wuz shot an' killed an' robbed, an' the man who did it got just three thousan' dollars."

"An' you mean to say that the boss here"— began Sagebrush, in his anger making a rush at McKee. He was held back, but the disturbance attracted Echo and Mrs. Allen from the kitchen. Echo hurried to her husband's side. He slipped his arm about her waist, and together they faced his accuser.

"All you got to say is whar did you get that money!" cried Buck, who had seen Dick Lane pay it to Payson and conjectured that Payson did not dare to reveal the fact of this payment, with all the disclosure it implied.

MARLTON, N.J.—I feel that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has given me new life. I suffered for ten years with serious female troubles, inflammation, ulceration, indigestion, nervousness, and could not sleep. Doctors gave me up, as they said my troubles were chronic. I was in despair, and did not care whether I lived or died, when I read about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound; so I began to take it, and am well again and relieved of all my suffering."—Mrs. GEORGE JORDY, Box 40, Marlton, N.J.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from native roots and herbs, contains no narcotics or harmful drugs, and to-day holds the record for the largest number of actual cures of female diseases we know of, and thousands of voluntary testimonials are on file in the Pinkham laboratory at Lynn, Mass., from women who have been cured from almost every form of female complaints, inflammation, ulceration, displacements, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, indigestion and nervous prostration. Every suffering woman owes it to herself to give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial.

If you would like special advice about your case write a confidential letter to Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass. Her advice is free, and always helpful.

HOW WORDS CHANGE.

A Knave Was Once a Lad and a Villain Only a Peasant.

In the New York panic of 1857 a Frenchman declared that he should lose all his "propriety." It sounds like something to laugh at. Nevertheless "property" and "propriety" have the same French derivation. Words have a knack of shifting not only from their sources, but also out of their own original meanings.

We accept an anecdote as a short diverting story. Etymologically it means something as yet unpublished.

To prevent, which is now to hinder, meant in its Latin original to anticipate.

A girl was anciently a young person of either sex.

Mountebank was the term applied of old to the patent medicine vendor who mounted a bench to proclaim his wares. It is from the Italian.

Paradise in oriental tongues meant only a royal ark.

Astonished means literally thunder struck, coming from "attonare."

A knave was once merely a lad and a villain only a peasant.

To be silly was in its ancient sense to be blessed.

To be officious was to be courteously ready to do kindly office.

If a man was facetious, in the early English, he was but urbane.

An idiot was a private citizen as distinguished from an officeholder.

Frontispiece, if considered from its Latin source, is not a picture in the front of a book, but the front view of something. The Latin word is frontispicium.

Beldam is not an abusive term in its French source, but means a fair lady.

Shamefaced comes from a good Anglo-Saxon term which means not one exhibiting shame, but one protected by shame, being therefore innocent and modest.—New York World.

LADIES' EIGHT-GORED SKIRT.

All Seams Allowed.

A very stylish skirt in instep length is here pictured and is one that will develop in the heavy materials with excellent effect. The "banded-in" effect is made use of here, which gives the style without causing the wearer any of the discomfort of the actual fact. The model is cut in eight gores, all except the back one stopping at knee depth, where a box-plaited flounce is attached under a band. The center-back gore gives the box-plait effect and extends to the hem of the skirt. The band at the head of the flounce may be made of a contrasting material, but it must be of the same color to be in the best style. The closing is at the left side of the back. Serge, homespun, cheviot, basket weave or other semi-rough mixtures will make up best in this design. The pattern (5157) is cut in 6 sizes—22 to 32 waist. To make the medium size requires 4⅛ yards of material 44 inches wide. Width of lower edge 4½ yards.

The above pattern can be obtained by sending 10 cents to the office of this paper.

NOTED AMERICAN GRAND OPERA SINGERS COMING HERE

The Aborn English Grand Opera Company, whose operations have formerly been confined to extended runs in New York, Boston, Philadelphia, Brooklyn, Baltimore, Washington, Chicago, Milwaukee, Saint Louis, Cincinnati, Buffalo and Detroit, has arranged to present grand opera in the vernacular at the Grand Opera House, on Wednesday next, Sept. 28 This aggregation is part of an institution of wide scope, under the direction of Milton and Sargent Aborn, embracing a half dozen divisions of about one hundred persons each, appearing simultaneously in as many cities. Last season this immense system for the presentation of grand opera in English utilized over six hundred singers in the casts and choruses of the companies appearing at the same time in different cities for long runs. The greater part of these are Americans, and Messrs. Aborn have won a unique reputation for forwarding native talent. The Aborn organizations began several years ago, and since that time have constantly grown to their present large proportions, demonstrating a great and increasing interest in grand opera among the average music lovers in the larger cities, who formerly patronized only lighter compositions. Messrs. Aborn believe that this remarkable increase of interest in classical music noted in the few cities in which their companies have appeared before has spread far and wide all over the country, and this faith in the general rise of popular taste in every community has prompted them to send this company on a regular tour from coast to coast. Some twenty of the larger cities will be included in the route for a week each, and a limited number of smaller cities will be visited for shorter engagements. The Aborn English Grand Opera Company, to be seen and heard here, includes a double cast of singers, who will appear alternately, most of whom are selected from the two companies which won favor in Chicago, Milwaukee and Saint Louis last season, a chorus of sixty and a large orchestra, and carries elaborate productions for 'Il Trovatore,' 'Aida,' 'Carmen,' 'Faust,' 'Lucia di Lammermoor,' 'Cavelleria Rusticana' and 'The Bohemian Girl.' The prices will range no higher than $2, a scale designated in grand opera circles as "popular" by comparison with those companies featuring expensive foreign stars.

HARRY ADAMS

NEWS OF THE MEMBERSHIP CAMPAIGN AT THE Y.M.C.A.

The reports from the several committees engaged in securing 500 new members, were very encouraging as they were handed in last night. Yesterday was the first day of the campaign, and it was hardly to be expected that there would be a large return yesterday, nevertheless when the cards were counted it was found that there was almost one hundred who had agreed to join the Association. Many of these have paid in their fees while some have just put in their applications and will pay their fees on Friday and Saturday. This can hardly be avoided because the men whom the workers are after are men on weekly wages, and they have not the money to lay down at a moment's notice.

RENOVATIONS AND IMPROVEMENTS.

However, the workers feel very much encouraged and are hard at work, knowing as they do that the task they have is no light one. Many prospective members are visiting the building and express their pleasure at seeing the improvements that have been made in the physical department. An old member would hardly know the bath room and the bowling alleys are made to look like new in their new surroundings of painted walls and clean floors. This department will be run in altogether different and more satisfactory way this season. There will be a charge of 5 cents a string, and each man pays for his game as he plays it. Men who are interested in bowling can hardly do better than pay a visit to the Y.M.C.A. bowling room. The men who have been bowling on the green all summer can get the same exercise and enjoy a mighty fine game by joining the Y.M.C.A. and taking up work on the bowling alleys.

BOYS ARE PLUGGING.

The boys are working hard in the Collegiate under the leadership of Mr. Wallie Armstrong. Mr Armstrong says he is good for the boys' end of the campaign, and there is no doubt that there will be 150 more boy members at the close of the campaign. Fathers ought to take this matter into their serious consideration. It is much better to keep their boys from getting astray than to reclaim them after they have gone astray. A father who is not willing to pay the small sum of three dollars to keep his boy right should not be a father at all.

KNOCKED DOWN BY HORSE AND SEVERELY INJURED

While crossing the street at the corner of Aylmer and Simcoe streets late Monday night, Mr. John D. Elliott, residing at 112 McDonnel street, was knocked down by a horse and rig and was unconscious for some time.

Mr. Elliott is an elderly man, and only recently left Nicholls Hospital convalescent. It was very dark at the place where the accident occurred and Mr. Elliott, whose hearing is slightly impaired, did not hear or see the rig approaching. Just as he was in the middle of the crossing a rapidly approaching horse and rig dashed him to the road, and he became insensible.

A number of people quickly gathered and gave him all possible aid. He recovered consciousness and the occupant of the buggy had him placed in it and taken to his home.

To-day Mr. Elliott is able to be around, although badly bruised on the shoulder, wrist and both legs.

About a year ago he was struck in a similar manner at the same locality.

INDUCTION OF REV. D. T. OWEN

The Toronto Telegram said Monday in reference to the induction of Rev. Derwyn T. Owen, a former local citizen, who was identified with church work at St. John's:

Rev. Derwyn T. Owen was inducted last night as rector of Holy Trinity church in succession to Rev. Dr. Pearson, who died last spring. The church was well filled and a large vested choir took part in the service.

Bishop Sweeny's inductory sermon reviewed the history of Holy Trinity. The present occasion, he said, marked a new epoch in the history of the parish. The fourth rector in sixty-three years was taking up the work.

The speaker glanced back to 1835, when the site of the church was a swampy forest. Ten years later the Bishop of Toronto received from the old land five thousand pounds to erect this church, which was to be maintained forever free of pew rent. The church was consecrated in 1847, with Dr. Scadding as rector. He was followed by Dr. W. Stewart Darling in 1875. Then came Dr. Pearson from 1886 until 1910.

His Lordship said he believed that although the old members had nearly all moved away, yet Holy Trinity would continue to prosper under its new rector, and would benefit strangers and those employed down town.

CHIMES FUND IS MAKING

(Subscription List Now Swelled to $4,250)

ENCOURAGING PROGRESS

The Chimes Fund has been making most satisfactory progress during the last few days. While the actual cash receipts are not large, they represent many subscribers the subscriptions bechiefly small. The subject has also been been introduced to many who are giving it favorable consideration and good results may be expected soon. In several factories and offices this public cause has been taken up by the employees generally each man or girl making a small contribution.

This has been notably the case at the Review Printing Company, J. J. Turner & Sons and G. Fitzgerald's Wagon Works, while other industries will be heard from soon. Contributions continue to be received also from outside the city which are greatly appreciated. Mrs. C. H. Sheffield, Coldsprings, Ont., Mr. H. C. Rae, manager Yonge street Branch Bank of Commerce, Mrs. H. C. Rae, Toronto, being recent additions to the list. The general interest aroused is quite remarkable and the Peterborough Chimes will be an enterprise with a multitude of stock-holders among all classes of the city, who will enjoy the chimes the more from their participation in getting such a boon for the city. The subscription list now stands at about $4,250.

MEN OF ST. JOHN'S PLAN A VIGOROUS CAMPAIGN

A large and enthusiastic meeting of men was held last night at St. John's after the weekday service, with the object of meeting Rev. C. Carpenter and arranging for the winter's work.

Rev. Canon Davidson presided, and laid a scheme before the meeting for consideration, the chief features being a Sunday afternoon class and club, conducted by Rev. C. Carpenter, confirmation during the winter, several men's teas, and the necessity of pushing Brotherhood of St. Andrew work more vigorously.

Rev. C. Carpenter then addressed the meeting, especially in reference to his Sunday afternoon men's class, which would be conducted on broad lines, the teaching dealing with various subjects interesting to men in different departments of life. There would be the features of a men's club and the fellowship side would be strongly developed. He had had a large experience in this work while on the staff of the Cathedral at St. John's, Newfoundland, and was sure the project could be worked out with interest to a wider number of men than ordinary churchgoers.

A general discussion then took place joined in by all present. It was resolved to give active support to Mr. Carpenter's scheme, which, it was expected, would develop in many directions. It was determined to resuscitate the brotherhood work, and a meeting will be held next Wednesday.

A large men's tea was decided upon to be held in connection with the dedication festival to be held in November, to be probably followed by others during the winter.

The tone of the discussion was optimistic, and augured well for a vigorous autumn and winter campaign.

WATER AND WATER ONLY; NOT GAS SAYS MR. LUNDY

Mr. D. J. Lundy, president of the Peterborough Shovel and Tool Company, is considering the advisability of drilling a large well at the factory premises to supply water for the factory. At present water has to be carried some distance.

Mr. James Peat, of James Peat & Son, Petrolia, was in the city yesterday, in consultation with Mr. Lundy in connection with the proposed drilling of the well.

It was also rumored that a plan was being evolved for the drilling for gas as a means of cheaper fuel for the factory, but Mr. Lundy stated to the Review to-day that he knew nothing of this.

DROWNING OF FORMER PETERBORO YOUNG MAN

Was Nephew of Mrs. Frank Fountain 447 Rubidge St. Son of Joseph Turcott

The following clipping relating to the drowning and funeral of Wm. Turcott, of Miskoto, Mich., was received by Mrs. Frank Fountain, 477 Rubidge Street, of whom the young man was a nephew. The deceased had some nine years ago resided in this city, and his father, Joseph Turcott, was employed as a moulder, in the Wm. Hamilton Mfg. Co.

Seldom has death caused the real grief among bereft friends as has been evidenced by those who intimately knew William Turcott, who was laid to rest Wednesday afternoon in the presence of a large assembly of mourners. The bier was covered with floral tributes. His tragic end coming in the full bloom of youth made doubly sad the loss. Popular with his acquaintances, his bouyant spirit was never vicious and always wholesome. His life was exemplary and it was the lack of fear perhaps that comes from upright living which prompted him in attempting the voyage which resulted in his death and which some might have regarded as recklessness. Young Turcott had worked his way through an engineering course. His aims and efforts while he lived were worth while. His dramatic end adds to the great mystery, why he should be taken while others are left.

The body of William Turcott was found by Otto Bishee, formerly of Au Sable, a member of the Tawas point life saving crew, in about 8 feet of water on the Tawas shoals, Tuesday morning at 10 o'clock. The search had been conducted continuously during daylight hours from the time of knowledge of his dissapearance on the morning of the previous Tuesday.

Sunday morning Frederick Spencer, of Au Sible, who was aiding in the search, found Turcott's jacket sweater, indicating that he had hurriedly pulled it off so that his efforts would be less hampered in swimming for shore, after mishap had come to the boat.

Speaking of the accident this morning, Joseph Turcott, father of the drowned man, said: "I want it known that I, in no way hold the Tawas point station to blame in the matter of my son's death. He didnot leave the Holland Hotel in East Tawas until about 1 o'clock Tuesday morning and it was then too dark for the crew to observe him.

"Captain Small and his crew did more than their duty in the search for the body. They have my heartfelt thanks."

William Turcott was 24 years of age. He was born at Spring Lake, Mich. Besides his parents he leaves two brothers, Frank and Earle and a sister, Mary, all of Oscoda.

BASKET SOCIAL A BIG SUCCESS

Affair Was Held in St. Patrick's Hall Under Auspices of St. Joseph's Church Douro

The basket social held under the auspices of St. Joseph's Church, Douro, in St. Patrick's Hall, last night, was a big success, from every standpoint.

The attendance was particularly large and the number included many from this city, who awaited the event, in anticipation of having a thoroughly enjoyable evening.

The programme arranged for, was a varied one of high order and the "light fantastic" part of the evening's entertainment was indulged in, by the majority or the young people.

The disposal of the many well filled baskets, was carried out amidst much merriment.

Rev. Father Maguire and his curate Rev. Father McFadden were present.

RUGBY MEETING CALLED FOR SATURDAY NIGHT

The something doing sign has appeared.

There will be a meeting in the Armories Saturday night at eight o'clock for the purpose of having a general rugby talk. The advisability of forming a city league and the prospects for an O.R.F.U. team will be the subjects for the discussion, to which every would-be, present and ex-rugby player is invited.

Regarding a city league the Collegiates and T.A.S. are ready to enter a team, and no trouble is expected when it comes to securing a third entrant.

The prospects for an O.R.F.U. fourteen, so far as material is concerned, are just as bright as they ever were, and what the Saturday night meeting wants is an attendance that can talk business.

THE SAND BATH.

Newest Fad of the Modish Beauties of the French Capital.

The sand bath is apparently one of the newest crazes of the modish beauty of Paris. The sand bath is supposed to promote good looks, and of course it is somewhat expensive.

The sand must be brought straight from the seashore after having been freed from all impurities in the shape of shells, seaweed, etc. It must then be thoroughly heated and poured in a great pile on to a large, thick blanket placed on the floor.

In the hot sand madam moves to and fro and is vigorously rubbed with handfuls of sand by a skilled masseuse, the treatment proceeding until a rosy glow is produced. Rolling in the sand is particularly encouraged, as this exercise is said to reduce the hips. After this tiring process the sand bather lies in the sand covered with a warm blanket and rests while her attendant prepares the second part of the bath.

This at first is rather painful, for the bather stands while the sand is blown from a sprayer against the body. Then a soft brush is used to remove the sand, a soothing cream is well massaged into the skin, and the bather is left to sleep off the fatigue of her bath.

Should the satin-like skin of her face suffer from the unwonted friction she dons a mask made of chamois leather at night, first thoroughly cleansing the skin and covering it with a specially prepared cream. Great attention is paid to diet, and several hours a day must be devoted to walking, which is most healthful.—Paris Letter in Philadelphia Record.

To Oust Cavalieri.

New York, Sept. 22.—A civil suit to set aside the ante-nuptial agreement between Mme. Lina Cavalieri, the opera singer, and her husband, Robert Winthrop Chanler, was instituted late yesterday by Mrs. Julia C. Chanler, his former wife. The papers alleged that the ante-nuptial agreement was obtained by Mme. Cavalieri by fraud and undue influence.

Arrested In Calgary.

Calgary, Sept. 22.—A young man and young woman, giving their names as Roy and Margaret Marshall, and claiming to be brother and sister, were arrested here for theft. P. C. Grandstand Fell, One Killed.

Madrid, Sept. 22.—One person is known to have been killed and 20 seriously injured yesterday in the collapse of a grandstand during a bull fight at Mejoranda. A number of persons are missing, and it is feared they will be found dead in the ruins.

Cairo Street Warnings.

In oriental countries the recklessness of drivers of vehicles and their disregard for foot passengers are very marked, but in Cairo they have a series of curious cries with which they warn a footman. They specify the particular part of his anatomy which is in danger, as thus: "Look out for thy left shin, O uncle!" "Boy, have a care for the little toe on thy right foot!" "O blind beggar, look out for thy staff!" And the blind beggar, feeling his way with the staff in his right hand, at once obediently turns to the left. "O Frankish woman, look out for they left foot!" "O burden bearer, thy load is in danger!" "O water carrier, look out for the tail end of thy pigskin water bottle!"

Big Libraries.

In the matter of numbers the Bibliotheque Nationale of Paris is generally accounted the first library in the world, with over 3,000,000 volumes. The British museum stands second with 2,000,000, and the Imperial library of St. Petersburg has about 1,500,000, which also are the figures to be assigned to the library of congress at Washington. The New York Public library, according to some authorities, is in the same class as the big library at the national capital, and there are several libraries in the United States that display on their shelves more than 500,000 volumes.—Harper's.

Threw a Can of Gasoline.

Montreal, Sept. 22.—A street car conductor, a former boarder in the house, has been arrested in connection with what is reported to be a bomb throwing outrage and an attempt to fire a flat occupied by Mme. Huet, a widow, living on St. Denis street.

According to the story of the victim, a canister containing gasoline was hurled from the street through a window into her apartments.

Maxim Gives Up Aeroplanes.

London, Sept. 22.—A striking recognition of the dangers of aeroplaning was given yesterday by Sir Hiram Maxim, one of England's foremost builders of aerial craft, in his announcement that he would retire from business.

"I am too old to fly myself," Maxim said, "and I am unwilling to expose my employes to the risk of flying merely for the sake of experimenting."

MAGISTRATE CURED OF PILES & ECZEMA

One of the latest prominent gentlemen to speak highly in Zam Buk's favour is Mr. C. E. Sanford of Weston, King's Co., N.S. Mr. Sanford is a Justice of the Peace for the County, and a member of the Board of School Commissioners. He is also Deacon of the Baptist Church in Berwick. Indeed it would be difficult to find a man more widely known and more highly respected. Here is his opinion of Zam-Buk. He says:—

"I never used anything that gave me such satisfaction as Zam-Buk. I had a patch of Eczema on my ankle which had been there for over 20 years. Sometimes also the disease would break out on my shoulders. I had applied various ointments and tried all sorts of things to obtain a cure, but in vain. Zam-Buk, unlike everything else I had tried, proved highly satisfactory and cured the ailment.

"I have also used Zam-Buk for itching piles, and it has cured them completely also. I take comfort in helping my brother men, and if the publication of my opinion of the healing value of Zam-Buk will lead other sufferers to try it, I should be glad. For the relief of suffering caused by Piles or Skin Diseases I know of nothing to equal Zam-Buk."

Zam-Buk cures ulcers, abscesses, blood-poison, ring-worm, festering or running sores, bad leg, varicose ulcers, salt rheum, prairie itch, cuts, burns, bruises, baby's sores, etc. Purely herbal, 50c box, druggists and stores. Refuse imitations.

A dog belonging to one of Havelock's citizens attacked several sheep belonging to Mr. Geo. Varty, who lives on the Cordova road, and as a result the owner of the dog is sorry to the amount of the value of the sheep.

ITCHING SCALP CEASES AFTER ONE APPLICATION

Wm. Madill is Willing to Guarantee Parisian Sage Because He Knows it Gives Satisfaction to all Who Use It.

Most druggists know that there is no hair preparation that gives so much satisfaction as Parisian Sage, which is now on sale all over Canada.

Itch ?

The reasons are many.

A large, generous bottle for 50 cents.

The only hair tonic that is sure to kill the dandruff germs.

A rigid guarantee to cure dandruff, stop falling hair and itching scalp in two weeks or money back.

Keep the scalp cool in summer and free from unpleasant odors.

Will make any woman's hair bewitchingly charming in one week.

Grows hair and makes it soft, brilliant and luxurious.

And here's more proof:

"Some fourteen years ago I had typhoid fever. It caused my hair to nearly fall out. I have since used and tried several hair tonics and renewers, but nothing ever made my hair grow until I tried a bottle of Parisian Sage. The use of Parisian Sage cooled and cleansed the scalp, removed all the dandruff, and left my hair silky and glossy in appearance. To-day I have an abundance of hair, hardly any gray hairs, and no dandruff.

Is it any wonder that I praise Parisian Sage?"—Mrs. Ann E. Moody, 1906 Bainbridge St., Manchester, Va., April 2, 1909.

Leading druggists everywhere sell Parisian Sage. Wm. Madill sells it in Peterborough for 50 cents, on the money-back plan. The girl with the Auburn hair is on every package. Mail orders filled by Giroux Mfg. Co., Fort Erie, Ont., sole Canadian makers.

SOME GEOGRAPHY.

An English View of Your Uncle Sam's "Paralyzing Solitudes."

People who are acquainted with the "paralyzing solitudes" of Iowa and Nebraska, says the Chicago News, may be interested in the St. James' Budget's description of Weston's last long walk. The Budget is published in London. It says: "Imagine the awful, soul depressing solitudes through which he has passed. In vast tracts of Nevada no bird sings, no plant grows. For hundreds of miles there is not a tree or a house. The walker's only companions are skeletons of animals devoured by jackals and coyotes; 'simple immensity of reddish sand,' as Senor Scarfoglio described it. The crossing of the Rockies provides more variety, but scarcely more exhilarating conditions for the pedestrian. The road too often is a mere mule path, rough hacked and subject to cataracts of stones.

"From the Rockies Weston would descend into Nebraska and its colossal sea of grass, hypnotizing in its immensity. By and by the terrific wastes are sparsely sprinkled with windmills and herds of horses as Iowa is entered, but still there are endless, hopelessly flat, barren fields, most melancholy, most miserable.

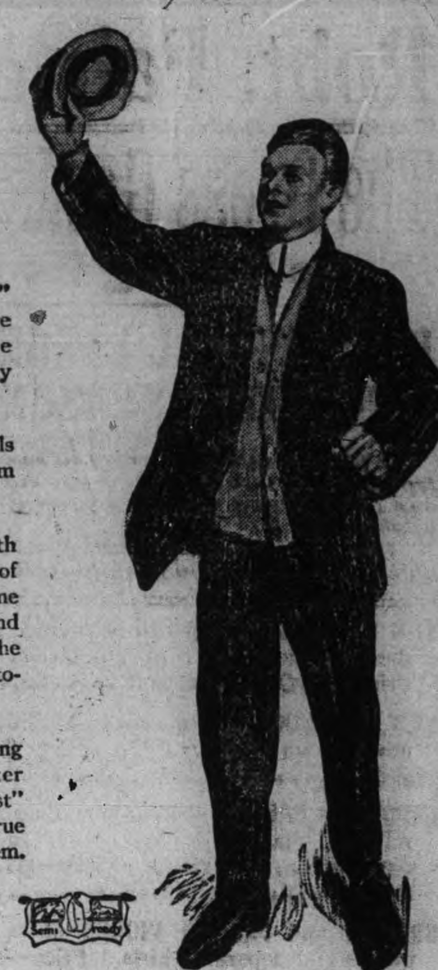
"Such are the concomitants of a walk through the western states of America. Through these paralyzing solitudes Weston kept up forty-five miles a day."

Public Opinion In China.

At the present moment there is hardly a newspaper worthy of the name in China which is not owned or subsidized by the mandarins, and the result, as shown in their columns, is that outspoken criticism of two years ago is generally replaced by a spirit of comfortable acquiescence in the established order of things. This change, slowly and secretly brought about by methods which testify to a considerable amount of intelligent organization in the official class, would not have been so readily possible were it not for the arbitrary postal and registration regulations introduced under the authority of the central government.—London Times.

Causes of Appendicitis.

An unusual number of deaths of prominent persons in England from appendicitis recently has set the London papers to discussing the causes of the disease. One surgeon, quoted by the Chronicle, says: "It has been said that appendicitis is often brought on by the use of toothbrushes, hairs from the brush lodging in the system. In the same way the pits of fruit have been spoken of as a cause of the disease. All I can say is that it is very rare to find any of these things in the appendix, and the most important factor in bringing on appendicitis is undoubtedly indigestion and certain other familiar disorders."



It's "Three and a Tiger" that we feel like when we look carefully into the perfections of Semi-ready Clothes.

This season the models will arouse your enthusiasm just as they have ours.

High-class tailoring, with the full purpose behind of satisfying you—are some of the minor causes behind the huge growth of the "Semi-ready" way of today in tailoring.

Remember—it is tailoring—and tailoring "better than the best tailor's best"—at savings which accrue to organization and system.

It was immediately shot and the head sent to Toronto for examination to ascertain as to whether the dog was suffering from rabies.

A picnic was held at Ebenezer on Wednesday last, which, owing to the rush of work which now exists and the neglect of the promoters to advertise the affair, fell rather flat, there only being a small number of people present. MISSIONARY WORK.

Divine service was conducted on Sugar Island by Rev. Mr. Jopling, of Alderville, the missionary to the Indians Sunday, September 18th. There was a good attendance, there being about a dozen gasoline yachts and about thirty or forty canoes and skiff on the island, all having brough people from various parts of the lake to attend the service. The Alderville brass band was in attendance and played sacred music during the service. A special feature of the service which interested many of the strangers who attended, was the singing of hymns by the Indians in their native language.

The annual rice gatherers' picnic will be held on Sugar Island Friday, September 23rd, and if the weather is favorable, should be a very successful affair. The Indians have arranged a series of canoe races, foot races and other sports and games. Dinner, features of which will be lunge, black bass, wild duck and black rice will be served by the Indians and the steamer Monarch has been chartered to run from the various landings in the lake to convey the crowd to and from the grounds.

It Saves You Waiting

On Saturdays we have so many persons who drive long distances or come by train, that we are unable to promise appointments for that day, but we wait upon persons in turn. Many persons call write or phone for appointment, we then reserve time for such and it saves them much waiting, as the time so given is kept open for them. We make such appointments for any day or evening other than Saturday. Evening is quite as good as day time for the eye examination, but it is necessary to arrange for this a day or two in advance.

WINDSOR WANTS 15,000 H.P. FROM THE HYDRO-ELECTRIC

All Towns Should Profit if They Export It.

Resolution is Passed by Representatives of Western Power Union Affirming That Principle.

LONDON, Sept. 22.—(Special.)—About 50 representatives of the municipalities in the Western Power Union under the hydro-electric power commission met here to-day to consider the application from Windsor for 15,000 horse power, and unanimously adopted the following resolution, on the motion of Controller Spence, Toronto, seconded by Mayor Guest, St. Thomas:

"That this meeting records its desire that the City of Windsor should be granted a supply of electric energy by the H. E. P. commission, at whatever rate the power can be equitably supplied, in view of the other service given by the transmission line serving Windsor, and that it be affirmed as a principle that any Niagara power which the commission supplies to be used outside this province should be supplied only on condition that such service should be terminable on reasonable notice, and that all profits on such service should be appropriated so as to be equitably advantageous to all Ontario municipalities supplied by the commission with Niagara Falls transmission system, and such supply to be entirely under the control of the commission."

There were present: Representing the commission, Hon. Adam Beck, chairman; P. W. Sothman, chief engineer; E. C. Bettell, secretary; and as delegates, Mayor Geary and Controller Spence, Toronto; Mayor Beatty and Ald. Chapman, Eckert, Brock, Wyatt, Underwood, Fitzgerald, Tancock, London; Mayor Hahn and Ald. Uttley of Berlin; Mayor Hanna and Ald. Sheppard, Keogh, McKay, Clinton of Windsor; Mayor Armstrong of Paris; Mayor Graybill of Waterloo; Reeve Jackson of Port Stanley; Mayor Guest and City Solicitor Doherty of St. Thomas; Mayor Scarff of Woodstock; Mayor Austen of Chatham; Mayor Dingman of Stratford; Mayor McCallum of Seaforth; Councillor Collins and G. C. Wilson, M.L.A., of Dundas; Mayor Hastings of Guelph; J. W. Purnell of Walkerville; Controller Cooper and City Solicitor Waddell of Hamilton; Reeve Hull of Weston.

Few Obstructionists.

There were also present some uncredentialed persons, and of these Ald. Bedford, who, with Ald. Porter, was the only opponents of the power scheme on the Windsor council, and John Wood, who appeared to represent himself, neither Mayor Hanna nor Ald. Sheppard having ever seen him before, made themselves prominent in an attempt to obstruct the proceedings. The chairman, Hon. Adam Beck, permitted them great latitude, until those present began to resent the intrusion, upon which the chairman called for order. Ald. Bedford frequently interrupted and wished to go into the whole question, as it appeared locally at Windsor. The chairman told him that he evidently did not understand the situation. The private views of Windsor people did not interest the meeting, which had been called to discuss the application of the council.

It became evident at an early stage that there was no disposition to accord any special favors to Windsor in admitting the city to the power union. The strict letter of the agreement was stipulated for, and Mayor Geary led the way in asking questions with a view to prevent any advantage being overlooked, which should be shared with all the other municipalities. There appeared to be a fear that Windsor might sell her surplus power at a profit for her own benefit, and the resolution was framed to block that possibility.

The effect of the resolution would naturally be, should Windsor proceed with the exploitation of power, to encourage the city in the development of local consumption of the power, and hasten its return from Detroit, where it is expected the surplus will be exported.

POSTPONE INCREASE IN TAXES

Berlin, Sept. 23.—The Government is still struggling with the problems of revenue which failed of solution through the fiscal explanation of 1909. It has been rumored for some months that the Government intended to introduce at the next session of the Reichstag a bill providing for additional taxation.

Chancellor Von Bethmann-Hollweg, however, has recently had a conference with the Cabinet, at which a decision was reached to postpone action in the matter until after the elections to the Reichstag, which it is expected will be held in the autumn of 1911. The conclusion generally accepted is that the Government is unwilling to risk the political effect of new fiscal legislation prior to the election.

Accordin gto the figures for the first five months, it appears probable that the revenue for the present fiscal year from new taxes will fall $10,750,000 short of the budget estimates, which placed the expenditure at about 30 per cent. less than they proved to be.

TONSORIAL DOCTOR NEXT

Pittsburg, Sept. 20—A movement is on foot among barbers themselves for "tipless barbersy," and the elevation of their work to the degree of "D.T." or "Tonsorial Doctor." J. C. Shannessy, general organizer of the International Barbers' Union, is here promoting the movement. He declared that in nineteen states some sort of a State board is already required of barbers, and many are accompanied, like medical men, to send in monthly or quarterly bills.

In an address to the local barbers' union, he urged that Pennsylvania adopt a license and degree plan, and announced that at the national convention of the barbers of Indianapolis on September 22 the best law now in existence would be selected as a model for nation-wide uniformity in requirements for admission to the profession.

USE HOME MARKETS

This is Admonition of Hon. Mr. Cochrane to Algoma Farmers.

Sault Ste. Marie, Sept. 23.—Before a crowd of 12,000 people, the Central Algoma Fair was opened yesterday afternoon by Hon. Frank Cochrane. He was entertained at luncheon by the ladies of the district. One hundred citizens of city and surrounding country were present, including A. C. Boyce, M.P.; W. H. Hearst, M.P.P.; T. J. Drummond, president Lake Superior Corporation; W. C. Franz, J. Taylor, Mayor T. E. Simpson, W. R. Smith, M.P., Judges Johnston and O'Connor, and members of bar, Moses McFadden, crown attorney, and others.

T. J. Drummond believed that it was about time farmers and manufacturers got together and worked out a systematic plan for the country's good. He admonished farmers to patronize the home town, saying that a home market was better than a district one.

Hon. Mr. Cochrane fell in line with the suggestion that a permanent agriculturist be sent to the Soo, who would remain there during the entire season. The agricultural college at Guelph was doing much, but the men sent out were too widely distributed to be effective. He was glad to tell the people that arrangements had been made with the Dominion Government for early completion of the Soo-Sudbury trunk road.

He then addressed 3,000 school children who had marched to the grounds.

GAUTHIER GOES TO OTTAWA

Ottawa, Sept. 23.—Archbishop Gauthier of Kingston is officially Archbishop of Ottawa in succession to the late Archbishop Duhamel.

That announcement was made at Rome Wednesday and was communicated to Monsignor Gauthier by cable yesterday. His grace at once cabled his acceptance.

Along with the appointment of Archbishop Gauthier there will be an important change in the boundaries of the archdiocese of Ottawa. The archbishopric of Kingston and the bishopric of Peterboro will be included in the archdiocese of Ottawa, and the boundary on the northeast will be the Ottawa River. Kingston will therefore be reduced to a bishopric. Hull will be cut off from the Ottawa diocese and created a diocese, under the care of a French-Canadian bishop, and within the archdiocese of Montreal.

The explanation given in the above does away with all rumors to the effect that His Lordship Bishop O'Connor will leave Peterborough. His Lordship will remain here and continue in the work that has won for him the love of his own denomination and high esteem from all other religious denominations in the city.

Chairman of standing committees: Parliamentary, Atwell Fleming, Toronto; commercial intelligence, S. L. Chapman, Toronto; reception and membership, J. A. McMahon, Hamilton; technical education, George A.

W. H. ROWLEY.

Howell, Toronto; industrial Canada, R. J. Young, Montreal; tariff, T. A. Russell, Toronto; railway transportation, Harry Bertram, Dundas; representative Eastern and Central Canada Manufacturers' Mutual Insurance Co., G. A. Murray, Toronto; auditor, Wilton G. Eddie. Chairman of insurance committee to be appointed.

The 1910 convention of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association concluded yesterday with but one session, the annual banquet last night, the delegates go to Victoria, where, during Friday and Saturday they will be the guests of the Provincial Government.

The text of the resolution on the important companies act as as follows:

"Whereas there appears to be uncertainty as to whether charters for manufacturing companies should be issued by the Federal Government at Ottawa, or the Provincial Governments of the various provinces.

"Also, that uncertainty exists as to the extent of the powers granted by the provinces and the Dominion respectively to such companies.

"And that various vexations restrictions and conditions are at present imposed upon the exercise of the powers of companies under charters both Dominion and provincial.

"Resolved, that the attention of the Federal and the Provincial Governments be drawn to the unsatisfactory state of the present law, and that a recommendation be made that steps should be taken to place the administration of the law governing the incorporation and control of companies throughout the whole Dominion upon a more uniform and reasonable basis."

Among the resolutions adopted yesterday was one declaring for a more uniform and reasonable basis throughout the Dominion for the incorporation and control of companies. Another pressed for a final decision on the question of the legality of the insurance associations. A third went strongly for reciprocal preferential trade within the Empire. Little discussion followed the reception of the resolutions.

Contrary to general expectations, there was no specific declaration on the Canadian tariff question and reciprocity with the U. S. This issue, however, was covered by the resolution on imperial preference, which, after mentioning reciprocal preferential trade within the Empire, closed with believing that thereby the bonds of union will be strengthened, and, the British Empire freed from dependence on foreign countries for food and other supplies.

Expecting probable changes in the Australian tariff, the meeting passed a resolution asking that the Dominion Government arrange for an interchange of commodities between Canada and Australia on a preferential basis of custom duties.

DEATH FROM AIR BUBBLE

Goldfield, Nev., Sept. 17.—A coroner's jury holding an inquest over the body of Mrs. Hattie Clairbourne, of this city, has determined that a bubble of air injected into her veins caused her death. It developed at the inquest that Mrs. Clairbourne was in the habit of taking hypodermic injections of morphine and the physicians performing the autopsy testified that they believe she improperly used the hypodermic aid shot a bubble of air into her blood. This bubble started on a wandering course through the woman's system and when it arrived at her heart, say the physicians, it killed her.

RECORD BREAKER WAS GUELPH FAIR

Guelph, Sept. 23.—The Guelph Central Fair, with a list of prizes amounting to nearly $5,000, and with over 7,000 exhibits, closed last night. Never in the 39 years' existence of the Guelph and Centre Wellington Agricultural Society has the fair been such a decided success. In all the departments the exhibits were so crowded that the management will not attempt to hold the fair another year unless the city assists them in the erection of a complete new set of buildings and stables about twice the size of the present ones.

The outstanding feature of the show was the poultry department, which contained about 1,500 entries. Some from Quebec were amongst the many exhibitors.

GAYNOR FOR GOVERNOR

New York, Sept. 23.—Gaynor sentiment took form and assumed direction in Democratic circles here yesterday more rapidly than at any other time since his name came to the front as a possible candidate for governor. State Chairman John A. Dix had brought word of how large the figure of the mayor bulked from a distance, but until yesterday New York had been reticent. Partly, they were distrained by the continued silence of the mayor himself, and partly by hesitation as to how they would fare with Mayor Gaynor at Albany and John Purrey Mitchell, now acting mayor, in his chair.

But yesterday there were two developments of interest. In the first place, there was much open talk for Gaynor among district leaders who gathered at Tammany Hall, and those who heard it could only account for it on the supposition that it had warrant from those higher in the councils of the society. In the second place, Charles F. Murphy, the taciturn leader of Tammany, publicly admitted the strength of the movement toward Gaynor, while carefully reserving any declaration of his attitude.

FROM ALLENTOWN TO PHILADELPHIA

Philadelphia, Sept. 23.—J. A. D. McCurdy, the daring aviator from Toronto, will to-day essay the most hazardous flight ever attempted in America. He has been substituted for the noted aviator, Glenn H. Curtiss, and will endeavor to make the round trip from Allentown to Philadelphia.

While the actual distance covered will be but 130 miles, McCurdy will have to rise to an altitude of 1,000 feet to surmount some of the low mountains he will be forced to pass in his journey.

A flight was tried yesterday to test the machine in which McCurdy will endeavor to make the trip. The crucial test will take place this morning, if weather conditions are favorable.

JOHN THE TRAPPER BLED TO DEATH

St. John, N.B., Sept. 23.—To bleed to death far from human habitation was the fate of John the trapper a few days ago. John Sims for the past seven years has lived in a small hut near Lepreaux and existed by hunting and trapping. He is said to have a wife and daughter at Liverpool, but he shunned company, and no one knew anything of his antecedents. On Wednesday a boy who sometimes took him provisions went to the hut to find him sitting bolt upright with both feet shot off and quite dead, with his long rifle across his knees. He had bled to death.

Basis of Terms Are Settled.

Conference Held by Sir Wilfrid Laurier, Hon. Mr, Graham, Hon. Pugsley, C. M. Hays, A. Smithers, S. N. Parent and Mr. McArthur.

Ottawa, Sept. 23.—Arrangements have been practically completed for the immediate use by the Grand Trunk Pacific o fthe new line of the National Transcontinental between Winnipeg and Superior Junction. The branch from Port Arthur is completed, and there is now a through grain route available from Port Arthur to Edmonton and beyond. The Winnipeg-Superior Junction section had not been taken out of the hands of Contractor McArthur, and probably will not be taken over by the National Transcontinental Commission for some months yet.

Yesterday afternoon the terms of a temporary traffic arrangement were discussed at a conference between Sir Wilfrid Laurier, Hon G. P. Graham, Hon. Wm. Pugsley, Mr. C. M. Hays, Mr. Alf. Smithers of London (chairman of the Grand Trunk Board), Mr. McArthur, the contractor, and Hon. S. N. Parent, chairman of the National Transcontinental Commission. The basis of an agreement was arrived at, and this will be completed in Montreal to-day.

OFFERED TO SELL THE PRINTS

Detroit, Sept. 23.—A new precedent in automobile law was made when Judge Donovan fined Julius Haltzenberger $2,000 for offering to sell to the Jules Motor Co. of Toronto, prints of the King car.

The judge laid particular stress on the effect of such conduct on Detroit's leading industry. Haltzenberger, made copies of the designs jointly produced by King and himself, told Attorney Atkinson that he owned them and he was advised that he had the right to sell them.

DOG DIES ON DUTY

London, Sept. 21.—A renowned St. Bernard dog, which has saved the lives of many travellers lost in the snow on the Grand St. Bernard pass during the long winter months, has been killed on duty.

The dog was named Barry III., and was a worthy successor to the famous Barry I. Hearing cries of distress on the Italian side of the pass on Sunday night, Barry gave the monks warning in the usual way by barking, and Pere Clavendier set out with the dog to the rescue. The night was very black and a violent storm was raging, rendering climbing dangerous. Barry, however, conducted the monk to the two lost travellers, and then ran off, it is thought, because he heard other cries of distress. Pere Clavandier took no notice of the matter and returned to the hospice in the early hours of the morning with the half frozen travellers.

As Barry often spent many hours on the pass watching and knew his way back no notice was taken of his absence. On Monday morning, however, as Barry did not return, the monks went out to search for him, and found him lying dead at the bottom of a prescipce several hundred feet deep.

An avalanche of stones had swept down upon him and hurled him over the prespice. He was the most powerful and well beloved dog at the hospice.

THIS ARTIST WAS VERY NAUGHTY

MONTREAL, Sept. 22.—It was reported here to-day that civil arrest and excommunication from the Roman Catholic Church will overtake A. E. Bourbee, an artist, whose name appeared upon nude posters displayed in the east end of the city during the Roman Catholic Eucharistic Congress. These posters depicted Archbishop Bruchesi, in very slight attire, bearing a mitre. The greatest indignation was felt over similar pictures depicting nuns in abbreviated raiment. It is alleged that the original intention was to have the pictures printed upon post cards.

UNION LABEL

THE Y.M.C.A.

It is gratifying to know that the Y.M.C.A. of Peterborough are adding to their membership. They should succeed. There are no mournings after if a man goes to the Y.M.C.A. This is a reason and a good reason why they should succeed. In a little booklet there are 100 reasons why a young man should join the association. But this one reason is enough.

A BIG POTATO

Leonard Minicola walked into the Review office yesterday with a potato. (Loud cheers) Again we repeat Leonard Minicola walked into the office yesterday with a potato. It weighed one and a quarter pounds. Minicoal was proud of it. He is an Italian and came to Canada and has made good. A big potato is only an incident, but an Italian rasing a big potato is more than an incident, it is significant. Canada is a great country. There is something in the air that makes us different, makes us industrious, that takes us away from our nationality that at once makes us Canadian—Italians and big potatoes—the West and Americans. Our country will some day hold the balance of power in the world.

AN INCIDENT

Not one million miles from Peterborough is a young man who owns three houses. They were not left to him. he was not blessed (or cursed) with a rich ancestory. He made them by his brain. Three houses—that's not much in this world of millionaires. but its a lot for a chap who started at 25 cents a week. This man made 25 cents a week for a year and saved on it. He paid no board simply because he was living with his boss. The habit of saving grew as his wages grew, and he has saved enough to pay for three homes in Peterborough. There is no moral in this story. This man saved his money. We waste ours! A drink and a smile with our friends, there is a quarter gone. A little of this, a little of that, and so on, and as the days pass into weeks, and the weeks into months, the months to years, the average man wastes and fritters away enough to buy himself a home and furnish it.

THOUGHTS FOR TO-DAY

If I was a street sweeper my crossings would be the cleanest in the city or I would quit the job.—Rev. Bernard Vaughan.

We cut this from the Fort William Times-Journal. The sentiments are sublime. We second them, would that we could live them. It is easy to write well, it is as easy as rolling off a log, but say, people, it is hard to live well. Yet our heart is in the right place, so is yours. We believe in the divinity of man and women and children. We have seen them in the mansion, we have seen them in the hovel. They are the same whether clothes in rags or in broadcloth. They may have a leer on the face or a look of wisdom and sorrow, but they are men. They have the immortal soul. Rev. Father Vaughan says that the Protestant religion is soulless. He didn't mean it. Religion is not soulless. It possesses the worship. We can see God in the tree, in the field, in the rivulet or mountain. We can see the Infinite in the Mansion or in the Salvation Army. Yes, and we can see the Hand of the Divine in the woman who scrubs and sings at her work, or the lady who says, "James, drive on."

ANYTHING FOR OFFICE

One effect of Sir Wilfrid Laurier's tour through the west has been to place before the country the exact position of the Liberal party on the trade issue. For a long time it has been practising protection and collecting the votes of the low tariff element. The western farmer confronted the Premier with so energetic a demand for low tariff and so rude a reminder of his former free trade promises, that several things happened. One was that Sir Wilfrid Laurier, always anxious to please his immediate audience, uttered a lot of vague free trade sentiments. Another was that he summoned up courage enough to tell the farmers that there must be careful regard for "vested interests," and that even agricultural implements cannot be admitted free of duty so long as the United States maintaine duties on any of the materials which enter into their construction. Fifteen or twenty years ago these considerations were treated by the whole Liberal party as base subterfuge. Sir Wilfrid Laurier today is speaking the language of the Conservative campaign literature of 1878, 1883, 1891 and 1896.

Yet another thing was the Prime Minister dealt with the question of reciprocity in the language of the protectionist. He said that the disposition of United States politicians is to look after number one, and that that must be the disposition of Canada. He is anxious to secure the market across the border for the Canadian people, but not at the sacrifice of Canadian industries and Canadian self-respect. This is exactly what Conservatives said in their day of power, and exactly the language at which the Liberal press used to wax satirical and angry.

A fourth consequence has been that the eastern Liberal press has been stirred up to make sundry plain statements that the present tariff will be maintained by the Liberal party for an indefinite period. The Globe, for example, explained in effect that free trade is right, that protection is wrong, but that if the Liberal party were to attempt to give lower tariff it would go out of office, and therefore it will stick to high tariff. The Evening Times, of St. John, N.B., says—"Sir Wilfrid has no quarrel with free trade, but everybody, including the grain growers, knows that free trade is at present out of the question." These are but samples of Liberal newspapers' utterances.

In short, the Liberal party has been dragged into the open. It intends to keep on practising protection because it believes that the majority of the electors are protectionist and because it wishes to remain in office. It still believes free trade to be right, but that is a small matter compared to staying in office. It has hoisted a flag inscribed "Any policy, right or wrong, that means office."

SIDE LIGHTS

THE FEMALE FAN.

Oh, why doesn't the pitcher pitch the ball?
And why are the basemen base?
Because they let the runner steal?
Why does he slide on his face?
How does a fielder muff a fly?
Is a shortstop ever tall?
Would the umpire call the catcher out,
If he didn't catch the ball?
Do they ever let the batter pitch?
Is it fair to knock a foul?
Does a home run count more than a bunt?
What makes the people howl?
Oh, isn't a pop-up simply grand—
And a squeeze-play just divine!
But why do the men have mittens on
In the hot old summer time?

W. D. Kerr, in Smart Set.

ON CHICAGO.

Dr. Heinrich C. G. Hirsch, the Viennese conductor, said recently that New York's musical taste was much better cultivated than Chicago's.

"A New York and a Chicago girl," he went on, "met at the seashore. In the twilight, while the sky flamed, pink in the sunset, and the hotel orchestra played Massenet on the terrace, the New York girl said to the Chicago girl:

"'Do you like fugues'"

"The Chicago girl sighed and answered wistfully:

"'No, but I adore clams.'"—Detroit Free Press.

REFORM THE HIGH SCHOOLS

Exchange.

A strong case for the reform of Schools and Collegiate Institutes is made by Norman Patterson in the current issue of The Canadian Courier. It is pointed out that in order to keep the boys on the farms, agricultural counties must establish agricultural High Schools which will train the farmers' sons in the principles of farming. The present High School curriculum tends to drive young men into the universities and the professions. Similarly, the Technical High School should replace the present institution in all manufacturing towns. This has already been done in Berlin and several other important industrial centres in Ontario. Here the young men are given a liberal education but in addition are taught the simpler forms of working with wood and iron as well as being given elementary training in the making of tools and the use of machinery.

In brief, a High School education should be a help to the great industries of the country, commercial, industrial and agricultural. It should not confine itself so closely to the making of teachers, doctors, lawyers and dentists. It should develop all that is in youth, without giving him false ideas as to the nobility of industrial and agricultural pursuits. It should be practical as well as theoretical.

Maunsell Bros., of Grassy Lake, Alberta, shipped 450 head of cattle from one ranch to the old country recently.

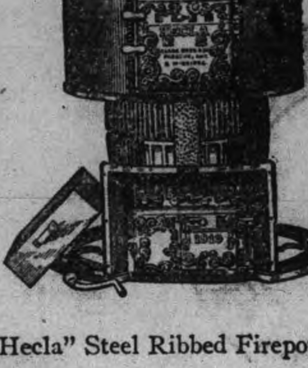
HECLA FURNACE

Has 30 Years Experience Behind It

Invaluable experience to you, who are going to buy a furnace this year.

20 years ago, we invented and patented the most important improvement made in furnace construction—our now famous FUSED JOINTS.



These joints mean an absolutely gas, dust and smoke proof furnace.

Then we adapted the FUSED JOINTS to the firepot and fused 97 steel ribs into the castiron, thus increasing the radiating surface three times that of any other firepot. An accurate three years test, proved that the "Hecla" Steel Ribbed Firepot saves one ton of coal in seven.

We learned that a steel combustion chamber was not durable. By experimenting, we found that an all-castiron chamber would last longer than a steel one.

We can help you, too, in planning the right heating for your home. Our book will tell you. Write for free copy. 103

The Round-Up

A Romance of Arizona

Novelized From Edmund Day's Melodrama

By JOHN MURRAY and MILLS MILLER

Copyright, 1908, by G. W. Dillingham Co.

"Why, it was paid to me by"— Then Jack stopped. He could not tell who gave him the money without revealing to Echo the return of Dick. The whole miserable lie would then come out. Echo noticed Jack's hesitancy.

"What is it? What's the matter?" she asked in frightened tones.

"Nothing, nothing," he answered lightly to lessen her terror.

"Hats off, everybody!" commanded Slim in deference to the presence of Echo.

"Who are these men? What's wrong?" pleaded Echo.

Buck bowed to the trembling woman, who had thrown her arms about her husband's neck.

"Nothin'," he exclaimed, "only we want to know whar yer husband got the money to pay off the mortgage on this ranch."

The request seemed a very simple one to Echo. All the talk of harming Jack, the high words, the threats, could be silenced easily by her hero. Smiling into his eyes, Echo said, "Tell them, Jack."

"I can't," he faltered.

"It was paid to him by a friend," bravely began Echo—"a friend to whom he lent it some time ago."

Buck interrupted her explanation. "Then let him tell his friend's name an' whar we can find him." Turning to Jack, he bullied: "Come on! What's his name?"

Jack closed his eyes to shut out the sight of his wife. In his agony he clinched his fists until his nails sank into the flesh. "I can't tell you that!" he cried in his misery.

"Of course he can't," sneered Buck, smiling evilly in his triumph.

"He can't account fer himself on the night uv the weddin'; he rides a pacin' horse—rode on that night; he gets three thousan' dollars paid him, an' he can't tell who paid it. What's the verdict?" Buck did not wait for an answer. Raising his voice, he shouted, "Guilty!"

"Jack, Jack! What have you to say?" begged Echo.

"Nothing," was his only answer.

"Tell him he lies!" cried Sagebrush. "Jack, we all know you. You're as white a man as ever lived, an' they ain't one of this outfit that ain't ready to die fer you right now."

"You bet!" chorused his men.

"He hain't goin' to get off like that," declared Buck. Looking confidently at his own followers, he said, "The Lazy K can take care uv him."

Buck's men moved closer to him, preparing to draw their guns if need be and open fire on Jack's defenders.

"Look out, boss!" warned Sagebrush at the hostile movement of Buck and his punchers.

"Hold on!" drawled the sheriff, who as the danger grew more real became more deliberate in his movements. "They ain't goin' to be nothin' done here unless it's done in the law. You all know me, boys. I'm the sheriff. This man's my prisoner." Pointing to Jack, he added, "There ain't nobody goin' to take him from me—an' live."

Buck saw Jack slipping from his clutches. "Yer not goin' to be bluffed by one man, are you, boys?"

"No," his punchers answered in unison, crowding toward Jack, who held up his hand and cried: "Stop! I want a fair deal, and I'll get it."

"I'll settle this thing all right. All I ask is a few words alone with my wife."

Jack clasped Echo to his breast as he begged this boon from the men who sought his life.

"No!" blustered Buck.

"Yes," ordered Slim quietly, but emphatically. "Mr. Payson, you'll give me your word you won't try to escape?"

"Yes," agreed Jack.

"His word don't go with us," shouted Buck.

Slim laid his hand on the butt of his revolver, ready to draw if necessary to enforce his command. Buck saw the movement and shouted to him: "Keep yer hand away from that gun, sheriff. You know I am quick on the draw." He significantly fingered his holster as he spoke.

"So I've heard tell," agreed Slim,

"I said gents," he repeated.

hastily withdrawing his hand from his revolver.

Slim appeared to agree to the surrender of Jack to Buck and his punchers, permitting them to deal with him as they saw fit. He fumbled in his left hand waistcoat pocket, pulling out a bag of tobacco and a package of rice paper. Ostentatiously he began to roll a cigarette. Then, with the quickness of a cat, his left hand was plunged in the inside right hand pocket of his waistcoat. Grasping a revolver by the muzzle, he deftly jerked it upward and seized the handle in its flight. He covered Buck McKee before that worthy realized what had happened. With his right hand Slim pulled the weapon which swung at his hip and aimed it at the other boys of the Lazy K. The guns moved up and down the line, backed by the sheriff's usually mild blue eyes, coldly steady now at the call to battle.

"I'll give you a lesson in pullin' guns, though," he declared, his voice as steady as his hands. "Don't move, Buck," he warned as McKee wavered, "nor any others of you. I'm playin' this hand alone. Buck McKee, you've been flirtin' with a tombstone fer some time. Hands up, gents," he ordered, raising the pistols significantly.

"I said gents," he repeated when Buck McKee did not obey him with alacrity. The balked leader of the Lazy K outfit reluctantly held his hands aloft.

"Sagebrush!" called Slim.

"Here!" answered the foreman, covering a man with his revolver.

"Parenthesis!" summoned the sheriff.

"Here!" the man of the bowlegs replied as he drew his gun.

"Me, too!" cried Fresno, while Show Low came to the front with "An' likewise here!"

When the Lazy K outfit was thoroughly under subjection Slim stepped forward and said: "Now, gentlemen, if you please, you see, this here's my party, an' I regelate it my way. Jack here gave his word to stay an' face this thing out. He's a-goin' to do it. I'm responsible fer him. Sagebrush, you will collect at the door sech articles of hardware as these gentlemen has in their belts. I deputize you. Gents, as you walk out the do' you will deposit your weapons with Mr. Sagebrush Charley, the same to be returned to you when the court sees fit an' proper."

"You hain't goin' to let him"— Buck did not finish the sentence, for Slim, thoroughly aroused, shouted: "Buck McKee, if you say another word I'm goin' to kill you. Gents, there's the door. Your hosses are in the corral. Get!"

Preceded by some of the Sweetwater boys, the Lazy K outfit filed out, Sagebrush taking their guns as they passed him. Fresno and Parenthesis brought up the rear.

"He needn't think he'll escape. We're bound to have him," declared Buck.

"Are you goin'?" demanded Slim, his voice full of menace.

"Can't you see me?" sneered Buck.

Sagebrush relieved him of his gun as he passed, handing it to Fresno. Buck paused in the doorway long enough to lament: "Talk about hospitality. I never get in but what I am put out."

Slim watched McKee from the window until he disappeared through the gate of the corral. Then, walking down to Jack, he took him by the hand.

"It'll be all right in an hour. Thank you, boys," Payson assured them.

"We all know you are the whitest man on the Sweetwater," assured Sagebrush, speaking for the punchers as they left Jack a prisoner with Slim.

Speaking in a low tone, Jim asked Jack, "Where did you get that money?"

"Don't you know?" he asked in surprise.

"From"—

Jack nodded his head.

"I'll wait fer you in the other room," said Slim.

"Maw, Polly—we all better leave 'em alone."

As the woman and the girl left the room the old ranchman paused at the doorway leading to the kitchen to advise his son-in-law earnestly: "I 'low you better tell her. It's best."

The two young people were left alone in the room in which they had passed so many happy hours to face a crisis in their lives. The day which had begun so sunnily was to end in darkest clouds. The awful accusation was incredible to Echo. Her faith in her husband was not shaken. Jack, she felt, could explain. But, no matter what the outcome might be, she would be loyal to the man she loved. On this point she felt wholly confident. Had she not pledged her faith at the marriage altar?

"Jack?" A volume of questions was in the word. Taking her hands in his and looking searchingly into her eyes, he said:

"Before I tell you what's been on my mind these many weeks I want to hold you in my arms and hear you say, 'Jack, I believe in you.'"

Echo put her arms about his neck and, nestling close to his breast, declared: "I do believe in you, no matter what circumstances may be against you. No matter if all the world calls you guilty, I believe in you and love you."

Jack seated himself at the table and drew his wife down beside him. Putting his arms about her as she knelt before him, he murmured, "You're a wife, a wife of the west, as fair as its skies and as steadfast as its hills, and I—I'm not worthy"—

"Not worthy—you haven't—it isn't"—gasped Echo, starting back from him, thinking that Jack was about to confess that under some strange stress of circumstances he had slain the express agent.

"No, it isn't that," hastily answered Jack, with a shudder at the idea. "I've lied to you," he simply confessed.

"Lied to me—you?" cried Echo in dismay.

"I've been a living lie for months," relentlessly continued Jack, nerving himself for the ordeal through which he would have to pass.

"Jack," wailed Echo, shrinking from him on her knees, covering her face with her hands.

"It's about Dick."

Echo started. Again Dick Lane had arisen as from out the grave.

"What of him?" she asked, rising to her feet and moving away from him.

"He is alive!"

Jack did not dare look at his wife. He sat with his face white and pinched with anguish.

The young wife groaned in her agony. The blow had fallen. Dick alive, and she now the wife of another man! What of her promise? What must he think of her?

"I didn't know it until after we were engaged," pursued Jack, "six months. It was the day I questioned you about whether you would keep your promise to Dick if he returned. I wanted to tell you then, but the telling meant that I should lose you. He wrote to me from Mexico, where he had been in the hospital. He was coming home. He inclosed this letter to you."

Jack drew from his pocket the letter which Dick had inclosed in the one which he had sent Jack telling him of his proposed return.

She took the missive mechanically and opened it slowly.

"I wanted to be square with him, but I loved you," pleaded Jack. "I loved you better than life, better than honor. I couldn't lose you, and so"—

His words fell on unheeding ears. She was not listening to his pleadings. Her thoughts dwelt on Dick Lane and what he must think of her. She had taken refuge at the piano, on which she bowed her head within her arms.

Slowly she arose, crushing the letter in her hand. In a low, stunned voice she cried, "You lied to me!"

GIRLS' DRESS.

All Seams Allowed.

The dress we show at this time is a very practical design, as it may be made up very simply, or trimmed and be quite a dressy garment. The waist has a vest in front, each side of which a rever is turned. The closing is down the back. The skirt is side-plaited, the plaits turning away from the center on both sides, thus giving a panel effect in the front. The sleeves are gathered into a narrow band. This dress may be made of cashmere, serge or any of the pretty plaids and checks that are to be found; it may have revers made of silk or velvet and a narrow braid trimming will greatly add to the effect. The pattern is in 4 sizes—6 to 12 years. To make the medium size will require 2⅞ yards of material 36 inches wide.

The above pattern can be obtained by sending 10 cents to the office of this paper.

CHOIR SAID GOOD-BYE TO DEPARTING LEADER

Mr. W. E. McCann, organist and choir-leader of George street Methodist church and teacher of music for the last four and a half years, is soon to leave Peterborough and take up residence in Toronto. Last night at T. Hooper's restaurant the kindly feelings of mutual regard that exist between Mr. McCann and choir had a tangible outlet, when he was the guest of the members who turned out well to bid good-bye and honor a man who has worked hard to bring this choir to high degree of efficiency and training, and also to present him with a token by which he would always remember them.

After the regular Thursday night choir practice about nine o'clock, Mr. McCann said a few words expressive of his regret at leaving the choir, and thanking them for the hearty and earnest manner in which they had rallied around him during the time of his work among them.

The members then lined up outside the church and escorted him to Hoopers restaurant, where all sat down to a splendid spread. Mr. W. Cole acted as toast-master for the occasion and the following toasts were proposed and responded to.

Mr. Walter Stocker responded to the toast to the King in a few appropriate and stirring words. Miss Maysie Armstrong proposed the toast to Rev. Mr. Couch, who replied in a short, suitable address.

The last toast was to Mr. McCann. McCann said that he was completely surprised at this unlooked for demonstration of the warm feeling which the choir must certainly feel towards him. He again assured them of his gratitude and sincere thankfulness for their kindness, and he would never forget his sojourn in Peterborough.

Mr. McCann was next presented with a beautiful black enamel clock by Mr. Melville McCarroll and Miss Higgins presented Mrs. McCann with a five o'clock tea set.

The gathering then broke up with the singing of the National Anthem.

Mr. McCann's object in moving to Toronto is to continue his studies.

Sandy Point, Pigeon Lake. The whole journey by small boat, was made without resting for sleep.

Property transfers to the value of $76,610 were made in London in August last.

SENSATIONAL STATEMENT

Mrs. Deline Didn't Want Any More Children by Her Husband Says Sister of The Dead Woman in Giving Evidence at Inquest at Havelock--May be Point in Crown's Case.

Havelock, Sept. 23.—Havelock is excited. Constable Williams has his shoes shined and his brass buttons on. The Deline trial is in the air.

The Toronto newspapers are well represented. Harry Pasmore, the old expert at executions, is here, and Arthur Webb, the well known police court writer is also in attendance.

A SENSATIONAL STATEMENT

At the opening of the inquest this afternoon into the death of Mrs. Deline, Mrs. Newell, a sister of the woman with whose murder her husband is charged, said that Mrs. Deline had said that she did not want "any more children by Deline."

This statement caused a sensation in the courtroom, and it may prove a point in the crown's case in showing that there was hostile feeling between Deline and the woman with whose murder he is charged.

DELINE CALM.

Deline is at the inquest, an interested but calm spectator. His demeanor can't be said to be one of indifference, but he apparently does not appreciate the seriousness of his position.

THINK HIM "QUEER."

The people of Havelock who know Deline, seem to think that he is a little peculiar in his actions, but they hesitate to pronounce him irresponsible.

The inquest is being held before Coroner Kindred. Mr. G. N. Gordon, of Peterborough is appearing on behalf of Deline, and County Crown Attorney Wood is conducting the prosecution's case.

was paid into the fund yesterday along with many other kind subscriptions.

This brings the paid subscription up to $2,730. The whole subscription list at noon to-day stood at $4,294.

Y. M. C. A. Features

It isn't all membership campaign at the Y.M.C.A. these days. The general work is not being neglected. A visitor to the building will find the departments working away better than usual. One of the proofs of this is found in the fact that the men's meeting next Sunday will be a good strong feature. Rev. H. J. Keith will give a special address to men that will be worth coming a long way to hear, and he will be assisted by the Park street church male quartette. This men's meeting is to be one of the popular gatherings for men this season. There will be a good orchestra to help with the music, and those who were at the meeting last Sunday can testify to the nature of the singing. The meetings will commence and close sharp on time. All welcome.

JOHNSON AND LANGFORD MEET AND HAVE A TALK

Boston, Mass., Sept. 21.—The long and fruitless "chin chatter" between Jack Johnson and Sam Langford was expected to end to-day with the meeting of the two at a local newspaper office, each with a roll of $20,000 in his pocket to bind a match for the world's heavyweight championship.

"I'll fight Johnson for $20,000 in a cellar or on an aeroplane," (the "Tar Baby" called it "earp'ane")m was the challenge issued by Langford.

"Well, I'm here to make a match with Langford," was the champion's retort.

With such expressions of good faith as the basis of their hopes, fight followers are counting on a match between the two ebony maulers at last being made.

Langford, who has camped on Johnson's trail for many moons, had his innings last night at the weekly show at the Armory Club, when he climbed through the ropes and interrupted an oration that Johnsou was making by his "cellar or ear plane" challenge. Langford's action created a storm of enthusiasm, and virtually forced the champion to say that he had come to Boston in the hope of signing up with the Hub's eminent scrapper.

Johnson and Langford shook hands on their promise.

THAT RUGBY TALK TO-MORROW

There are indications that a big attendance will be on hand for the rubby meeting to-morrow night at eight o'clock in the Armouries.

That's what is wanted. A live discussion, too, is needed and everyone interested in the fall game should be present. City League and O. R. F. U. prospects are just what the players can make them.

Peterboro' never yet had to take a back seta when it came to dispensing the goods, and if the players and their followers only do their part, the game will boom this season, as it never did before.

LOCALS FINISHED 7 UP

Peterborough Bowlers went down to Millbrook yesterdacy, to meet the players of that town in a return match, Millbrook having played here several weeks ago. On that occasion the locals ran up a big score against the visitors, but yesterday, the play was reversed somewhat.

Skip D. Belleghem's rink went down to defeat, finishing seven to the bad, but Skip R. J. Soden, pulled out a win by 14 and the two results gave Peterborough a 7 shot victory.

The local rinks were;

HOW BASEBALL APPEALS TO AN ENGLISH VISITOR

(Detroit News.)

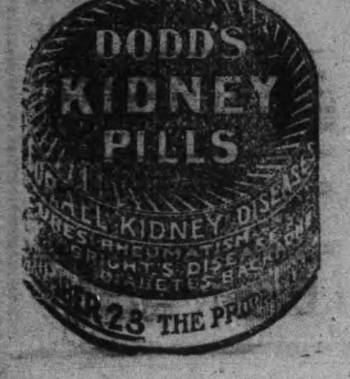
What Americans think of cricket is well known, but what follows will present the other side of the case:

(Intercepted letter from the Hon. Claude Fitzelegant to his brother Adolphus.)

Dear Old Dolly—I am in for a ripping time old man—I am, by jove Not a bad country at all; pretty fair on the whole—that is, in patches. When the guvnor sent me off he said "Keep your eyes open," and, by jove I I have done so. I find in my peregrinations that there are two games of sport here—lacrosse, that is a Canadian game, and a ripper, too, and another, an imported one, I believe, called base-ball. From what I can gather from the johnies here, the only thing Canadian about baseball is the money taken at the gate. The rest, I understand from careful inquiries, is brought under special cover from the United States. I met an awfully decent Canadian chap at the hotel, and he insisted upon my seeing what he styled "the ball game." So we went. But for heaven's sake, Dolly, don't tell the mater because it was on a sunday afternoon. I cannot really tell you what it was all about, but I know that after three hours' play there was only one run scored. I was told that the Royals won, and, consequently, as a matter of sequence, the "Skeeters" (awful name, isn't it?) had lost. I do not know if I can make you understand it myself, but I will try. There are nine men on each side, all dressed like little boys, in short trousers. They have peak caps, something like a jockey's. There are two referees, but I see by the newspapers they are called "umps." The wicket-keeper covers his face with iron bars (awfully funny isn't it?); so does the referee. The wicket-keeper also puts something on his chest, just like the man who carries a big drum. Only one man goes to the wicket at a time—you see, they only play at one end. As a game begins the spectators start to howl. Now, Dolly as you know, I have listened to the gentle Afghan dancing his "tom-tom," but I never heard such howling in my life. From the time that the bowler—or, to be correct, the thrower—sends down the first over to the batsman, behind whom sits the gentleman with the lion's cage on his face and boxing gloves on his hands, the howling begins, and pandemonium reigns supreme. I will try, as far as my memory serves me, to write down some of the remarkable sayings of the crowd and the players. "You've got 'em going, Freddie." "Easy menen, boy, easy money." "Watch him, watch him." (just like we used to say to poor old Towser.) Then, after the bowler, who has been trying to blow the brains out of the batsman, hit the latter on the elbow, a person near me jumped up and shouted, "You big a 'f!'" I don't know what on earth meant, but it was not a compliment, I am quite sure of that. When three men were out the other side went in. (awfully silly, isn't it?). As the game was being played, the players danced, I think it must have been the "war-whoop." By jove, the rummicst thing I ever seen. Listen to this Dolly: "Get the hook," "Give him a lemon." Mind you, they were eating nuts at the time, and the place looked like a monkey house, it did, upon my honour. You remember that old saying, "An Englishman takes his pleasure sadly." That may be so, Dolly; it is as others see us, you know. But these baseball fans (yes. that's the word I have been trying to think of)—a fan is called a rooter, not rotter, Dolly, though he is sometimes. But as I was saying, the baseball fan reminds me of a bull fight crowd at Madrid. Personally I think they have takne the fashion from the Indians, who, emit similar sounds when on the war path. Cricket is styled here as something like a serial story—to be continued in our next. But that is because the people understand as much about it as I do of baseball. But as baseball gives one the impression of sitting in a barrel of gunpowder, surrounded by fire-crackers, give me the serial story as an aid to sportsmanship qualities and long life. My Canadian friend as we returned asked me how I liked it. I answered, "Sliced."

Yours till the next handshake,

CLAUDE.



SOME PITCHING BY DOC. BURTON

Fanned Twenty-nine Men in Two Games Played in the Silver Country

New Liskeard, Ont., Sept. 21.—The finals in the baseball tournament at the Cobalt Athletic Park took place yesterday, when New Liskeard defeated the combined Haileybury ball team by the score of 11 to 0. On the preceding day New Liskeard defeated Haileybury 7—4. Archie Burton pitched for New Liskeard, while Oswald, the former Cincinnati star, pitched for the combined team.

Burton fanned fifteen men in a seven inning game, while on the previous day he fanned fourteen men. During yesterday's game the defeated team did not bat the ball out of the diamond, while on the other hand, the Liskeard boys had an easy time hitting Oswald.

A Brilliant Footrace

A big crowd of spectators witnessed a handicap foot race to-day on Hunter street, between Mr. Geo. N. Graham, proprietor of the Oriental, and Mr. Kent Throope, of Jimmy Lewis' staff of throat cutters.

The barber lathered "Mine Host," who had a ten yard handicap.

The deceased had no statement to make as to why he didn't win, but those on the inside say it was because the other man was too fast.

Y.W.C.A. Opening To-night — Program and Refreshments

Taken to Havelock

Handcuffed and in charge of High County Constable Cochrane, Hugh Deline was taken from the county gaol, in an open cab this morning to the C. P. R. station, where the 11.28 train for Havelock was boarded.

BY THE WAY

O Mabel, pretty Mabel,
With hand against the pain,
Looks out to view the weather,
And sees the pelting rain.

But Mabel, pretty Mabel,
Is not kept in by rain,
She's in the blues—the date's called off
The old man used the cane.

The melancholy days are here
The saddest of the year,
The sights the new fall hats afford
Knock cold, our smiles or cheer.

The man that waits the longest
Is the man that gets the fish,
And the man that hustles daily
Always gets the second dish.

And the man that rings the lassie,
Is the man who shows most pluck
But the man who does less banging,
Is the man who gets the duck.

"John," said wifie, "Do you remember the night you proposed—the moon was full,——."

"Yes," replied hubbby, "and so was I."

Mary had a little cat,
With coat, white as the snow,
And every place that Mary went,
The cat would also go.

One summer day, to school went she,
The cat, was also there,
And as dear Mary took her seat,
It jumped up on her hair.

What makes the cat love Mary so
The teacher asked — the brats
Replied that Mary's little cat
Was chasing after rats.

LARGE SIGN FOR REGINA

J. J. Turner & Sons Turn out a Display Sign for Thos. Barrie's Branch Store

J. J. Turner & Sons have turned out a large illuminated sign which is about to be shipped to Regina to be erected outside the new store of Mr. Thos. Barrie, who has opened a branch at that thriving city.

"Barrie's Furs," are worked out in the form and each letter contains sufficient number of small lights. The total number of lights is 158.

The sign is a particularly attractive one, and as usual the firms reputation along this line is reflected in the work.

CLEANED UP ORILLIA SCANDAL

(HAS NO TRUTH IN IT)

Particulars of the Orillia Asylum laundry "scandal" were forthcoming at the parliamentary buildings yesterday. Hon. W. J. Hanna, provincial secretary, returned to his desk after an absence of about two weeks; and inquired into the conduct of Inspector E. Rogers.

The following extract from a letter written by Mr. Rogers to the provincial secretary, explains his side of the affair.

"While holidaying at our cottage at Orillia, during the latter part of August, our washing accumulated owing to failure of our domestic help. The matron of the institution, learning this, arranged to help Mrs. Rogers out of the difficulty, and did so, but with no thought that the work should not be paid for. Immediately upon the matter coming to my notice, I gave instructions that it should not be repeated, and at once sent my personal cheque to the institution for $10, to cover the account, I may say that I am assured that this amount would considerably more than cover the same work done in any city laundry.

"All this, including payment, took place before there was any objection to the transaction by The Toronto Globe. The payment by cheque was made on Sept. 7, and the Globe attack on the transaction was not made until some three days afterward."

When asked for a statement by The World, Mr. Hanna paused smiled and said: "Really it is too trifling to discuss, and had you not asked me about it I would have made no reference to the matter at all. It is more amusing than serious."

Opening of Y.W.C.A.

The Y.C.A. season opens to-night with the rally. The association members are prepared to welcome all their freinds.

Miss Addison Dean, of Annesley Hall, Toronto, will speak. There will be musical numbers and a social half hour with refreshments. The evening is open and free to all.

Among the exhibits loaned by the King to the Japan-British Exhibition is the actual bullet that killed Nelons at Trafalgar. The bullet is a circular musket ball of lead. On one side of it are embedded portions of the gold lace from the admiral's uniform, which together with other fragments of the uniform were forced into the wound. The bullet is suspended in a plate glass casket which at night is lowered in a pedestal lined with the finest steel.

There's a Great Difference

The difference between hand-made Semi-ready Tailoring and machine-made clothing is not merely that one is made and designed individually and the other is cut, designed and made in the cheapest possible way by machinery. The big difference is one of quality.

Ready-made clothing is generally made with the one consideration throughout the entire process of making—saving expense—"cheap, cheaper, cheapest"—in work and in material.

In Semi-ready Tailoring all other considerations are subordinated to quality. In this way has Semi-ready attained to the ideal and prestige of a well-nigh perfect product. "How good" and "how much better" can we make the clothes—are daily themes of study

FELL FROM LOAD OF HAY AND HAD HIS LEG BROKEN

Mr. Joseph Crowley fell from a load of hay at the market square yesterday and had his leg broken near the ankle.

He was driving onto the weigh scales at the market, and one of the wheels of the wagon went down in a ditch, upsetting the load and throwing Mr. Crowley to the pavement. His leg struck heavily, resulting in a fracture. He was taken to Dr. McGraths and from there to St. Joseph's To-day he is doing as well as possible.

BUSINESS MAN'S GENEROUS GIFT

The men who are out on the fighting line in the big campaign for 500 new members for the local Y.M.C.A. are meeting with the greatest success on all hands, sometimes in the most unlikely places they receive the great-unlikely places they receive the greatest encouragement. This campaign is proving again that the Young Men's Christian Association is a popular and necessary organization in the city life.

One of the most popular young business men in Peterborough was asked yesterday to join, and his answer was;—"Yes, I will. I wish I could get out with you and get members, but I am too busy just now. However, I will pay for eight boys who cannot afford to pay for their own membership in the Y.M.C.A., and I will also take a list of men whom I will try to influence to join." That is the spirit that helps a community. There are many boys in this city who would appreciate the privilege of membership in the Y.M.C.A., and there are men in this city who have no boys, who could pay for such. The man quoted above is one of the good contributors to the association, because he knows that the Y.M.C.A. cannot be financed by the monies received from the fees of members.

To-night will see a big addition to the list of new members, for a great many of the men who have been approached have signified their intention of joining on Friday and Saturday night.

The campaigners spent a social hour at the building last evening. This had been prepared for them by the Reception Committee, and they complained that they had no time to be eating and drinking when there were men to be seen. One man confessed that he was glad to get something to eat, for he had not taken time to eat any supper. The meal hour is often the best hour to see men.

"Sandy" Hall is making the best showing in returns so far. Dr. Middleton is a close second, but after to-night the C.G.E., under the leadership of Messrs. Johnston and Taylor, will have something to show.

Mr. Sisson is proving himself an inspiring leader, and is also down in the thick of the fight getting members.

POPULAR YOUNG MAN LEAVING FOR TORONTO

A number of the friends of Mr. Arthur Rosborough sprang a surprise on him at his home, about four miles west of the city, last evening, and made him the recipient of a handsome and serviceable suit-case. Mr. Rosborough graduated from the Peterborough Collegiate Institute this summer, taking the scholarship, and leaves for Toronto University on Monday morning, and the fellow members of his league and Sunday school class chose the opportunity of exhibiting their feelings of regret at his departure, and also to show the high esteem in which he was held by them.

Mr. Rosborough has been an energetic and active worker in church matters, and has always been willing to lend a hand in any good cause. He carries with him to Toronto the heartiest wishes for a successful college career and a prosperous future.

Mr. Rosborough was greatly surprised, but expressed his gratefulness and appreciation of the kindly thoughts that influenced the donors of the gift.

IS SUSPENDED

McKenzies Bowell's Son is Out of a Job— Irregularities in His Department is the Charge-- Chinese Get in by a Slick Game

(Special to the Review)

Ottawa, Sept. 23—J. Moore Bowell, son of Sir MacKenzie Bowell, a former Premier of Canada, has been suspended by the Department of Trade and Commerce. He is controller of Chinese immigration and collector of customs at Vancouver, and as a result of enquiries conducted by Detective Foster of the Dominion police force, in connection with irregularities regarding Chinese evading the $500 head tax and getting into Canada he has been suspended.

Yippon, a Chinese interpreter, was suspended, but without the order of the Government was re-instated by Mr. Bowell

Now. Mr. Bowell has been suspended. This is to-day confirmed by Deputy Minister of Trade and Commerce O'Hara. Bowell still retains his position as Collector of Customs. The alleged irregularities will be thoroughly sifted. It is said the wily Chinese have been using the formal entry sheet they get, and them mailing them back to China, where some one else, of about their description, has made use of it. This doubling up game has been going on for some time.

LAID AT REST.

The funeral of Mr. Francis Brenton, who passed away on Tuesday evening at the age of 87 years and five months, took place from the family residence on Concession street, on Thursday afternoon at 2.03 o'clock, services being held at the house at 2 o'clock. The late Mr. Brenton had been a resident of Havelock for twenty years, and was caretaker of the school for fourteen years. He leaves a widow and two daughters to mourn his loss. They are Mrs. Wm. Chambers, of Parry Sound; and Mrs. Jno. Brown, of Roseneath.

THE CAR TO BUY

Russell-Knight

The Car Noted for its Great Power, Flexibility, Quietness and Endurance

Russell-Knight 1911 Models: 22, 26 and 38 H.P.

CRITICS CONFOUNDED

Interested critics said a year ago: "Do not buy a Knight motor, it is an experiment—in a year or two it may be all right."

Partly this is true—the Knight engine will be improved. Quite frankly we venture to hope that each Knight engine and each Russell car we make will be better than the one before. We believe that our 1914 cars will be better than those of to-day.

But this is the fact that must be borne in mind :—

The Knight engine built in its first year, by the first firm building it in a commercial way, under official observation, put up a performance which no valve motor made by any firm after years of experience has been able to equal.

Is not this conclusive proof of Knight superiority?

Then consider that since that time the engineering skill of five of the leading engineering firms of the world have worked for the improvement of the motor, and have been aided by the experience of over 2,000 users.

To-day the Knight motor stands on its record in all quarters of the globe as a tested, tried-out product of superlative excellence.

In the 1911 Russell "38" you get the culmination of this work in engine design.

Send your name to receive new catalogue of Russell 1911 models with prices.

CORN ROAST LAST NIGHT WAS A BIG SUCCESS

The choir of Charlotte street church had a jolly time on the banks of the Otonabee last night, when a large number of members were present at a highly successful corn roast. The party left the Wolfe street wharf about eight o'clock in the steam launch "Tootsie" and went down the river about five miles, where they landed.

A big blazing bonfire soon was built and the corn roasters got busy. All seated themselves around the merry blaze.

Jokes and songs were soon the order of the evening. The return trip was reluctantly commenced after a couple of hours spent in solid enjoyment. The party reached home about eleven o'clock.

BEAUTIFUL SIGNIFICIANCE OF THE MASTER'S MIRACLES

An Inspiring Study on the Miracle of the Loaves by Rev. Dr. Macklem—Harvest Time Decorations and Grateful Hymns on Occassion of Harvest Festival at St. Luke's

That we should be faithful harvesters in the harvest fields that Christ has told us to labor in, the wheat of which is human souls, is the beautiful lesson taught us by the bountiful harvest season. This was the theme of an eloquent sermon at St. Luke's Harvest Festival last night. Rev. Dr Macklem, Provost of Trinity University, was tne preacher, and he dwelt upon the boundless love and Rev. Dr Macklem, Provost of Trinity benevolence of the Master of this harvest and the great and certain reward that awaited the faithful servant.

The choir was augmented by several choristers of St. John's, and the anthem, "While the Earth Remaineth" was most effectively sung, Miss Ruby Quartermaine acceptably taking the solo.

Provost Macklem's text was taken from St. Matthew, 14th chapter, 19-20: "And he commanded the multitude to sit down on the grass and took the five loaves and the two fishes, and looking up to heaven, he blessed, and broke, and gave the loaves to his disciples, and the disciples to the multitude.

And they did all eat and were filled."

Our Blessed Lord's miracles were not merely wonders, but were what St. John had always called them—signs. Our Lord's teachings were ful of doctrinal meaning. One divine, recalling the fact that the Lord wrought miracles before His teachings, spoke of them as the great bell before the sermon. But they were more than that; they were part of the sermon itself.

In the miracle of the feeding of the multitude as described in the text, it was shown that Christ, instead of sending the people away to neighboring towns and villages, blessed the bread and fishes, and the hunger of the multitude was appeased, and there were twelve baskets left over. over.

The harvest fields and vineyards represented a miracle year by year and fed Canada's millions.

THE LESSON OF THE MIRACLES.

But aside from the material wonders of the miracles there was the spiritual teaching. One thing that impressed us in reading the sober and beautiful pages of the New Testament was the restraint of power exercised by our Lord in performing His moracles.

In false faiths there were great demonstrations that astounded and confused. But in the Saviour's miracles there was restraint of power—no demonstration or display.

In the miracle of the loaves and fishes the occasion was not sought for by the Lord. There was no blowing of trumpets or display, and it was not incompatible to suggest that the multitude did not know what they were being fed by miraculous means. And He bade the disciples gather up the fragments that were left over. There was no waste.

God used men as His co-workers for the salvation of the world. If we had five loaves we were to bring them to Christ. As agents in Christ's great plan of the redemption of mankind we were to do what we could ourselves, and when there was something in the Master's service we could not accomplish if we came to Him. He would supply the supernatural aid required.

THE DIVINE PLAN.

Christ manifested Himself to a chosen few, and directed them to carry His word to the uttermost ends of the earth. He entrusted the salvation of the world to those of that elect body He called His church. This truth was one of great practical power. The miracle of the loaves demonstrated it. Jesus blessed the loaves and gave them to His disciples, and they gave them to the multitude, or outer circle. The church is called upon to do the same work in the spread of God's word.

The question has been asked "Why did Christ not reveal Himself to all men at once. When He came only a small company of men recognized God in Jesus Christ."

The only answer we could give was that God had chosen to act through us—His church—in making known to all the world that which He did for all the world.

We might think we were insufficiently equipped for such a task as the evangelization of the world, and say "Master, the multitude has nothing to eat, send them away. It is beyond our power to feed them." But Christ would have us take to Him the twelve loaves and two small fishes, and in bringing to the Lord of life the best we had, no matter how poor a best that might be, the problem was solved.

To-day we looked upon half a world in ignorance of the light of the gospel, after two thousand years of Christian teaching. And we were appalled by the magnitude of the task before us. We would say that in the best of us there is so little of the redeeming love, and that we had such a feeble hold on the cardinal truths that we were incapable of converting the indifferent and the skeptic.

But our natural powers were rendered supernatural in the consecration of them to Christ's work, and the multitude need not go away hungry.

THE SOCIAL REFORM BOARD COMMENDS ONTARIO POLICING

Marked Improvement is Shown Throughout Province, Say Members in Session at Toronto—After Aylesworth Again on Obscene Literature Cases.

Toronto, Sept. 24.—The interdenominational general board of moral and social reform had its annual meeting here yesterday, Rev. Dr. Carman presiding. Several matters of public interest received attention, and Supt. Rogers of the provincial police department was honored with the praise and support of the board, which was "delighted to be able to say" that law enforcement in New Ontario was considerably better under the new police system, and that the superintendent had "shown a determination to have these laws thoroughly enforced, and to insist upon incorruptibility and competency on the part of the members of his force." The resolution continues: "Your executive regrets to have to report an exception to this satisfactory condition of things in law enforcement in Ontario in the case of the City of Windsor and adjacent communities. The Lord's Day Act has been enforced so as to prevent the importation, sale, and distribution of American Sunday papers on Sunday, the Attorney-General having formally refused consent when application was made by the Lord's Day Alliance for the enforcement of the act against this glaring infraction. And we regret to observe that prominent citizens of Windsor are at present taking action which, if effective, must inevitably result in weakening the discipline of the provincial force.

"Your executive would, therefore, recommend the council to take such action as it deems wise to support the Government in maintaining thorough discipline in this force, and a thorough enforcement of the laws in which we have special interest."

The King-Skill release was the subject of a memorial to the Prime Minister "in the hope that he will take such action as will avert as far as possible serious evils likely to result from the public utterances of the minister of justice in regard to the matter reported upon."

Dr. A. D. Watson suggested an application of the "recall" system in relation to certain public offices out of sympathy with popular sentiment. He mentioned license inspector, crown attorney, attorney-general or even occasionally to a minister of the crown.

The executive made a number of recommendations in regard to the Indians, among which was a clause condemning the exploiting of Indians at exhibitions, and one asking for an investigation into the conditions of Indian marriage. The executive recommendation also made references to the lands of the Indians. Hon. George E. Foster, however, claimed that this matter was outside the jurisdiction of the council.

"The law at present is a farce," said Rev. Mr. Burke of Kingston, in stating that most of the boats running down the St. Lawrence had open bars, and at the end of the season were fined $150, which simply amounted to purchasing a license.

The executive of the council were requested to prepare a new course in social science. It was stated that several of the books being used at the present time by the different denominations were opposed to prohibition, and the Presbyterian book was submitted as an example. Dr. Shearer, however, considered that the ministers should be able to read up both sides.

The following officers were elected: Hon. president, Most Rev. S. P. Matheson, B.D., LLD., primate of the Church of England in Canada; president of the Trades and Labor Congress; secretary, Rev. J. D. Shearer; treasurer, Rev. Dr. W. T. Graham; other members of the executive, Dr. T. A. Moore, representing the Methodist Church; Archdeacon Inglis, Anglican Church; W. E. Raney, K.C., Presbyterian; Prof. E. M. Kierstead, D.D., Baptist; Charles J. Copp, M.D., Congregational; J. G. O'Donoghue, Trades and Labor Congress; Ernest Durie, Dominion Grange and Farmers' Association; Col. Mapp, Salvation Army; Dr. Watson, Canadian Purity Association.

POWER FOR NIAGARA FALLS

Niagara Falls, Sept. 24.—Gen. F. V. Greene, president of the Ontario Power Co., met the City Council yesterday and the aldermen wanted the power company president to fix the price of power to the city after an agreement, which has about thirty months to run, expires. Under the terms of the agreement the power company enjoys exemption from taxation, and the city buys power at $10. It is understood that negotiotions will at once be opened between the hydro electric commission and the city for power supply after the expiration of the agreement.

SHIPWRECKED SAILORS HOME

Halifax, N. S., Sept. 42.—The Allan line steamer Siberian, from Liverpool, brought yesterday three shipwrecked seamen, Jos Devlin, J. Christmas, and John Joe, who had shipped on the barquentine Harvest Queen at Dalhousie, N.B., bound for Buenos Ayres, lumber laden. They left Dalhousie on Aug. 10, and a few days afterward the ship sprang a leak and became waterlogged. The deckload was thrown off, and the pumps were worked day and night. The pumps became choked, and the vessel was almost awash, when the German mail boat Koenigin Louise came along and took off the crew, nineteen all told. This was on Aug. 24. Captain Alex. Foryth, of Windsor, N.S., was in command of the Harvest Queen. The ship was set on fire, so as to prevent her being a dangerous derelict. The rescuing steamer was bound from New York to Genoa, and landed the shipwrecked crew at Gibraltar. The captain and mate went home via New York, and the three seamen were sent home on the Siberian.

CHLOROFORM FOR PASSENGERS

Regina, Sask., Sept. 24.—Charged with attempting to chloroform a lady passenger on a C.P.R. eastbound train, No. 2, on Aug. 8 last, William Patrick Lynn, a C.P.R. brakeman, was yesterday committed to stand his trial by Magistrate Hefferan at the barracks of the mounted police. Bail was fixed at $10,000.

The victim, Mrs. Blanchflower, was traveling with her husband, Assistant Paymaster Blanchflower of the British navy, from Vancouver to Montreal.

Giving evidence yesterday, Mrs Blanchflower stated that she woke with a choking sensation, just in time to see an arm withdrawn from the curtains. She caught sight of a trainman's lantern and a uniform. The smell of the chloroform was around her.

THE STORY IS NOT CORRECT

Ottawa, Sept. 24.—The story of a Canadian representative at Washington is not correct.

JOSEPH MOIR THROWN FROM RIG AND KILLED

Wingham, Sept. 24.—A serious runaway accident occurred near here yesterday, resulting in the death of Mr. Joseph Moir, ex-reeve of the township, of Culross. Mr. Moir, who lived about five miles out in the country, was driving into town, when his horse took fright at an automobile some little distance ahead. The horse turned suddenly in the road, throwing Mr. Moir from the buggy. When picked up Mr. Moir was found to be very seriously injured, and was removed to the hospital here, where he died shortly after his arrival. He leaves a family of several sons and daughters. Coroner Dr. Kennedy opened an inquest, a jury being sworn in and a post-mortem held.

CHAMBERLAIN'S TOLD-YOU-SO

London, Sept. 4.—Austen Chamberlain, speaking at Birmingham, declared that what he prophesied had happened with the Canadian Government, and that none could blame or criticize them. They had negotiated and were still negotiating those commercial treaties with foreign countries which they would have made with Great Britain if she had been ready to grasp the outstretched hand.

MUST HAVE MORE CARS

Or Head of Rat Portage Lumber Co. Says He Will Have to Close.

Winnipeg, Sept. 24.—The feature of the Railway Commission sitting yesterday was the outspoken charge made by D. C. Cameron, president of the Rat Portage Lumber Co., that Mackenzie and Mann were engaged in a deliberate attempt to put his company and himself out of business by their manipulations of traffic on the Canadian Northern Railway.

He stated that he could easily double his plant here, but he is dependent on the Canadian Northern for a supply of cars to carry his logs, and the plant is unable to run more than 125 days in a year now owing to the cold-blooded refusal, he says, of the railway to furnish him with sufficient cars.

He had complained many times to both Mackenzie and Mann. The former had tried to put him off with promises, while the latter had bluntly informed him that he could not have any better service than he had had in the past six years.

He appealed strongly to the Railway Commission for relief, and said if it were not given he would be forced out of business. The statement came out in his application for lower rates on the C.N.R. between Western Ontario points and Winnipeg.

Intermediate rates, it seems, are higher than through rates from Rainy River, and Chairman Mabee expressed himself as antagonistic to such discrimination.

She claimed she had trouble with her husband.

CAT WITH HUMAN DISEASE

Toronto, Sept. 24.—There's a case of infantile paralysis at Dr. Morphy's dog and cat hospital on VanKoughnet avenue. The patient is an infant, but not human—a kitten.

The kitten, owned in Toronto, was taken to the hospital with one hind leg paralyzed. Then the other hind leg became affected. The paralysis crept up the body, and to-day a front leg and the muscles of the neck are showing symptoms of the disease.

Dr. Morphy has diagnosed the case as one of infantile paralysis, and it's a "beautiful case" from a medical standpoint. According to Dr. Morphy, this kitten's case is almost identical with infantile paralysis in children. To Dr. Morphy, this is an important fact.

BAD GANG IS BEING BROKEN UP

Regina, Sask., Sept. 24.—It is said that the energy with which the charge of chloroforming a woman passenger is being pushed again C.P.R. Brakeman Lynn, is due to the fact that several complaints of similar character had been made during the present season, and the company has, therefore, decided to break up what appears to be a gang operating on lady passengers in sleepers of transcontinental trains.

On the very train on which Mrs. Blanchflower claims an attempt was made to chloroform her, two other similar complaints were alleged to have been made, the object of which was undoubtedly robbery.

FOUGHT FOR WOMAN'S BODY

Montreal, Sept. 24.—There was a bitter fight yesterday over the body of Mrs. K. B. Mumford, who hanged herself in the Corona Hotel Thursday morning. The rivals were S. C. Bolgett, a partner of Mumford's in their Boston drygoods house, and Mrs. Mary Smith, 2623A Mance street, Montreal, who claimed that the dead woman was her long-lost sister. In proof she produced a photo. The coroner decided that the husband had first claim.

AVIATOR FLIES OVER THE ALPS, BUT IS BADLY HURT

George Chavez, a Peruvian Bird-Man, in an Attempt to Win $20,000 Offered by Italian Society, Almost Fulfils the Conditions.

Domodossola, Italy, Sept. 24.—To George Chavez, the Peruvian aviator belongs the honor of being the first to fly across the Alps.

The daring feat was accomplished yesterday in an attempt to win the prize of $20,000 offered by the Italian Aviation Society, Milan, for a flight from Brig, Switzerland, to Milan.

Chavez, however, was unable to complete the trip, having sustained painful injuries when he alighted here. His machine was overturned and he was buried in the wreckage, both legs were broken and the left thigh fractured. Other parts of the body have bad contusions. The general condition of the airman, however, is not considered to be grave.

The cheering crowd had caught sight of the monoplane when it appeared as a mere speck in the sky far up the valley, and watched it with thrilling interest as it grew larger and larger, approaching at a tremendous speed.

When he was within about three-quarters of a mile of the aerodrome, Chavez cut the ignition, and was gliding earthwards when suddenly, as he was preparing to alight, a wing of the machine lifted as if caught by a gust of wind and the monoplane tumbled to the ground.

Henry Weyman, the American eviator, set out twice to follow Chavez. The first flight lasted four minutes, and on his second attempt he failed to reach the summit of the pass and turned back.

Chavez determined at noon to make his attempt and rose to a height estimated at nearly 7,000 feet. It was known that it would be necessary for him to attain nearly this altitude to clear the Simplon Pass, the summit of which rises 6,592 feet. He maintained apparently this altitude for at least a half hour, and followed over the road built by Napoleon in 1800 over the Simplon Pass. He accomplished the eight miles that brought him over the top of Simplon Pass and then sailed gracefully over the 18 miles down to Domodossola.

Arriving there, he had left the hardest part of his journey behind him, having escaped the high peaks and the jumble of rocky gorges on this side of the summit. The remaining distance to this city offers less difficulty but takes the aviator over Lake Maggiore, and a succession of plains to the goal.

The distance from Brig, Switzerland, to Milan, is 75 miles, and the prize was for the aviator who should make the first flight, starting from a table land 900 feet above sea level at the head of the Rhone Valley near Brig, Switzerland. In addition to reaching a height that would bring him over the Simplon summit, and in doing which he must suffer severely from the cold, the aviator was required to guide his frail craft over wide chasms, notably the Gorge of Ysette, where a safe descent would be quite impossible and an accident must mean almost certain death. Strong winds are the rule along the entire route.

Aviation experts had predicted freely that the only alternative to a successful flight across the Alps was the death of the aviator. Signal fires along the Napoleon road marked the way as far as Domodossola, and the rest of the course was indicated by flags and buoys anchored on Lake Maggiore. The summit of the pass at Moscera was illuminated with oxhydrique lights, and a captive balloon showed the finish line at the aerodrome here.

Chavez's most notable feat up to yesterday was in establishing a new altitude record. On September 3 he rose to a height of 8,271 feet.

THE DREAD OF PROTECTIONISTS

London, Sept. 24.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—The Chronicle says the protectionists are in dread of Canada's nationhood, especially as regards treaty-making, and claims that this bias is perceptible in the language of such a careful speaker as Austen Chamberlain. The Chronicle points out the futility of expecting Canadians, whatever feeling there may be in Canada in favor of inter-imperial preference, to sacrifice one iota of this power for it.

The Bristol Cruisers.

London, Sept. 24.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—Gerard Fiennes, in a criticism of the Canadian naval plans, says that Bristol cruisers are not effective for commerce protection. Canada, he says, is too anxious to stand alone, and has failed to realize that the safety of each part of the Empire can only be secured by the combined force of the whole nation.

RAILWAY COMING HERE

A Long List of Miscellaneous Matters Considered by the Board of Works Meeting Last Evening—Flooding Will be Relieved on Low Places.

Oil, pavements and sewers were among the big list of things considered by the Board of Works last night.

Ald. Hicks presided, and there were also present Mayor Morrow, Ald. Phelan, Duffus, Bradburn, Graham, Metheral and Gillespie.

A letter was read from W. W. Cole containg a request for a small bridge over a ditch in front of his house on Downie street. On motion of Ald Phelan and Graham the matter was left with the engineer.

T. Bradburn Estate said they were making improvements to their property, 96-98 Hunter street, and wanted permission to erect cement steps encroaching 30 inches on the street line. On motion of Ald Metheral and Phelan the permission was granted for the work to be done under the supervision of the city engineer.

The Peterborough Canoe Company asked permission to use for a short time the portable boiler of the old crusher formerly used by the city. The engineer was authorized to make arrangements.

City Engineer Hay wrote to the Board advising them to keep well within their appropriation and render accounts promptly.

J. M. Greene, who is building on Charlotte street, asked the Board to place tile in a gully in front of the building. The engineer will report.

The agreement, as prepared by the city solicitor, giving the C.G.E. authority to place pipes on Albert street was approved of.

A diagram of the property owned by Mr. Henry Best, and which the city is considering purchasing for a park in the south end, was submitted by Mr. Best. The Parks Committee will report. The plot is 3 1-5 acres and Mr. Best wants $6,000 for it.

The Board of Health recommended the construction of a sewer on Smith street from a point 160 feet west of George to Benson street.

Notice was received that the application of the Toronto and Eastern railway to extend a line to Peterborough would come before the Dominion Railway Board next month. The city solicitor was instructed to look into the matter.

Steps will be taken to relieve the flooding of certain points of the city which are troubled in this respect in the spring and by heavy rainfalls.

"Salvador" BEER

THE FAMOUS NATIONAL DRINK

There's a story behind "Salvador" beer —Canada's most famous brew—that carries us back to the year 1651

The Grand Duke Ferdinand, the Bavarian monarch of that period, established the now famous cloister brewery on the Nockerberg Mountain, near Munich, and appointed Father Sale the chief brewmaster.

The product of the royal brewery was first known as "Father Sale's Beer," until the more convenient title of "Salvador" was adopted, about a century later.

For over 150 years "Salvador" was brewed under the patronage of the Bavarian royal family. In 1806, Franz X. Zacherl acquired control of the cloister brewery and purchased the secret formula of the royal brew.

From that day to this the formula and sole European rights have been the most jealously guarded inheritance of the famous brewer's family.

The rich, mellow flavor of "Salvador" is only attained by a special aging process, and if the output of the cloister brewery was great enough the people of Bavaria would drink no other beer.

Mr. Lothar Reinhardt completed his extensive studies of German brewing in this famous cloister brewery, where he secured the secret formula and process for brewing "Salvador." He has the sole right under the Canadian Government Copyright and Letters Patent to manufacture this famous brew.

Reinhardts' "Salvador" has become "The National Drink by a rigorous adherence to every detail of the original process devised by Father Sale in 1651.

Compared with all other brews, "Salvador" beer is worth a dollar a drop, yet it costs no more than just ordinary beer.

Every pint of "Salvador" is matured in wood for at least six months before bottling.

"Salvador" is not only a pure, sparkling and refreshing brew; it also possesses tonic qualities which make it the beer par excellence for family use.

Always order "Salvador" if you want the best beer brewed.

The Daily Review

SATURDAY, SEPT. 24, 1910.

SHALL WE OIL OUR STREETS

The much debated plan of oiling the roadways, is before our ratepayers. So far it is conceded that where applied it is satisfactory. The oil was put on George street three weeks ago, and the dust has been laid effectively. Of course, the application was made not very heavy and with the idea that it should be put on at intervals. It is not likely that more will be applied to George street this year. The oil costs 4 1-4 cent sper gallon laid down in the city. It requires about 800 gallons to a mile of street, say $35 for George street from Smith to Lake, and repeated three or four times during the season. Rubidge street has had an application and has aroused some opposition. Hunter street east, from the bridge to Rogers street has been dressed up, and the people are well pleased. On the whole the cost is cheaper than watering, and as well, helps to keep the roadway in repair.

A well known authority on the matter puts the whole thing pro and con as follows;

Watering the roads keeps down the dust so long as the moisture remains, but the constant application of water washes away the valuable binding material, thus destroying the road and making repairs necessary.

Oiling the road eliminates the dust, hardens and makes th eroad practically waterproof ,retaining the precious binding material on the road, where it belongs, thus extending the life of the road and cutting out largely the cost of repairs.

Watering the road means, in any case, that all night long and all day Sunday the disease-laden dust is blown about, causing eye, throat and tubercular troubles, as well as destroying lawns, shrubbery, fruit, furnishings, mercandise, etc.

Oiling the road means that there is no dust to blow at any time. The original dust is disinfected by the oil and worked into the road, thus making it wholesome and sanitary to live or travel upon a properly oiled road.

Watering the road means expending large sums of money without receiving permanent benefit.

Oiling the roads means that it actually costs 25 per cent. less than watering, according to the experience in Toronto ,and every gallon of oil used makes the road permanently better. It is like "having your cake and eating it."

Watering the road attracts flies and mosquitoes.

Oiling the road, with road oil, drives away all insects and makes life worth living for man and beast.

STANDING ON GUARD

The Halifax Herald, commenting on the proposed negotiations for better trade arrangements between Canada and the States, says:—

It is now recognized South of the International Boundary that the attempts of coercion have failed, and the new scheme is to appear to drop coercion and to turn to cajolement—to come talking reciprocity—to appear to bring gifts.

Now come the days of Canada's real danger. Our neighbors are not coming with gifts for our benefit, but for their own. They are seeking to get by palver what they failed to get by coercion and threats. Canada is commercially quite independent of the United States and does not need their reciprocity offers. Canada cannot afford to lower her tariff against our neighbors. She cannot do so without sacrificing her own industries. She cannot afford to place in control of her neighbors her great natural resources which they want. She cannot afford to place her whole industrial system at the mercy of the Washington Senate. She cannot afford to jeopardize her fiscal autonomy as part of the British Empire. If our neighbors have experienced a change of heart, let them bring forth fruits meet for repentance; let them reduce their tariff against Canada to the general level of the Canadian tariff against them, that is, let them reduce their tariff against Canada by about 40 per cent. Until that is done, any other reciprocity talk is simply absurd.

Canada's real danger to-day consists not only in the changed tactics of our neighbors, but also in the unbritish character of the Laurier Government as exhibited in recent negotiations and treaties.

RIGHT AND WRONG

Alas! how easily things go wrong!
A sigh too much or a kiss too long.
And there follows a mist and a weeping rain,
And life is never the same again.
Alas! how hardly things go right!
Tis hard to watch on a summer's night,
For the sigh will come and the kiss will stay,
And the summer's night is a winter day.
Yet things can never go badly wrong
If the heart be true and the love be strong.
For the mist, if it comes, and the shine again;
Will be changed by the love into sunsleeping rain.

The Round-Up
A Romance of Arizona
Novelized From Edmund Day's Melodrama
By JOHN MURRAY and MILLS MILLER

Copyright, 1908, by G. W. Dillingham Co.

Jack buried his face in his hands. "Yes," he confessed. "He came the night we were married. I met him in the garden. He paid that money he had borrowed from me when he went away."

Horror struck, Echo turned to him. "He was there that night?" she gasped. "Oh, Jack! You knew and you never told me. I had given my word to marry him. You, knowing that, have done this thing to me?" Her deep emotion showed itself in her voice. The more Jack told her the worse became her plight.

"Whar did you get that money?"

"I loved you." Jack was defending himself now, fighting for his love.

"Did Dick believe I knew he was living?" continued the girl mercilessly.

"He must have done so."

"Jack, Jack!" sobbed Echo, tears streaming down her face.

"What could I do? I was almost mad with fear of losing you. I was tempted to kill him then and there. I left your father to guard the door—to keep him out until after the ceremony."

Jack could scarcely control his voice. The sight of Echo's suffering unmanned him.

"My father, too!" wailed Echo.

"He thought only of your happiness," Jack exclaimed.

"What of my promise—my promise to marry Dick? Where is he?" moaned the girl.

"He's gone back to the desert. He is gone out of our lives forever," cried Jack, facing her, with arms outstretched.

"And you let him go away in the belief that I knew him to be living?" accused the wife.

"What will not a man do to keep the woman he loves? Dick Lane has gone from our lives. He will never return," argued Jack.

"He must!" screamed Echo. "There is a crime charged against you. He must return to prove that your story as to the money— He must know through your own lips the lie that separated us."

"You love him—you love him!" Jack kept repeating the words, aghast at the knowledge that Echo seemed to be forcing upon him.

"Bring him back to me." Firmly she spoke.

Jack gazed at her in fear. Chokingly he cried again, "You love him!"

"I don't know. All I know is that he has suffered, is suffering now, through your treachery. Bring him back to me that I may stand face to face with him and say: 'I have not lied to you. I have not betrayed your trust.'"

Deep sobs shook her shoulders.

"You love him," he repeated.

"Find him—bring him back."

Jack was helpless, speechless. Echo's attitude overpowered him.

The wife staggered again to the piano, slowly sinking to the seat. She had turned her back on him. This action hurt him more than any word she had spoken. Her face was buried in her hands. Deep sobs shook her shoulders.

Jack followed her to take her again in his arms, but she made no sign of forgiveness. Turning, he strode to the rack and took down his hat and cartridge belt. Picking up his rifle, he firmly declared: "I will go. I'll search the plains, the mountains and the deserts to find this man. I will offer my life if it will serve to place the life you love beside you. Goodby."

The sound of the closing of the door roused Echo to a full realization of what she had done. She had driven the one man she really loved out of her life, sent him forth to wander over the face of the earth in search of Dick Lane, for whom she no longer cared. She must bring her husband back. She must tell him that he alone had her heart in his keeping.

"No, no, Jack! Come back!" she called. "I love you and you alone! Come back! Come back!"

Before she could throw open the door and summon him back to happiness and trust Bud, who had heard the full confession from the room in which he had taken refuge when he thought Buck would throw the blame on Jack, caught her by the arm.

"Stop!" he commanded.

"Bud Lane!" exclaimed Echo. "You have heard"—

"I've heard—my brother—he is alive!"

Bud spoke rapidly. His belief was confirmed. He would have full revenge for what his brother had suffered at Payson's hands.

To Echo's plea of "Don't stop me!" he shouted "No!" and caught the young wife and pulled her back from the doorway. Echo struggled to free herself, but the young man was too strong.

"He had ruined Dick's life, stolen from him the woman he loved!" he hissed in her ear.

"Jack! Jack!" was her only answer.

"No; he shan't come back! Let him go as he let my brother go—out of your life forever!"

"I can't, I can't! I love him!"

Throwing Bud off, she ran to the door. Bud pulled his revolver and cried, "If he enters that door I'll kill him!"

Outside Echo heard Jack inquiring, "Echo, Echo, you called me?"

Echo laid her hand on the knob to open the door when she heard the click of the pistol's hammer as Bud raised it.

With a prayer in her eyes she looked at the young man. He was obdurate. Nothing could move him.

Turning, she shrieked: "No; I did not call! Go! In God's name, go!"

"Goodby," was Jack's farewell. The rapid beat of horse's hoofs told of his mounting and riding away.

"He is alive!"

"Gone! Oh, Bud, Bud, what have you done?"

"I should have killed him," was Bud's answer as he gazed after the retreating form galloping down the trail.

Mrs. Allen, hearing Echo's calls, hastened in from the kitchen. She found her daughter sobbing at the table. "What is the matter, child?"

Then, turning to Bud, she fiercely demanded of him, "What have you been sayin' to her?"

"Nothin'," he replied as he left the house.

"Oh, mother, mother!" wailed Echo. "Jack—I have sent him away."

"Sent him away?" repeated the startled Mrs. Allen.

"Yes," assured Echo.

"You don't mean to say he is guilty—you don't mean"—

"No, no!" interrupted Echo. "Oh, I never thought of that! He must come back. Call dad, call Slim."

Echo had forgotten Jack's promise to Slim. He, too, in his period of stress had overlooked the fact that he was a suspected murderer. Now he had fled. He must be brought back to clear his good name.

Mrs. Allen called her husband and the sheriff into the room.

"What's the row?" shouted the sheriff.

"Jack's gone!" cried Mrs. Allen.

In amazement the two men could only repeat the news "Gone!"

"Gone where?" crisply demanded the sheriff.

"Don't stand there starin'; do somethin'," scolded Mrs. Allen.

"He gave me his word to stay an' face this thing out," shouted the bewildered Slim.

"It's all my fault. I sent him away." Echo seized Slim's hand as she spoke.

"You sent him away?"

She fell on her knees before him. Lifting her hands as in prayer, she implored: "I never thought of his promise to you. He never thought of it. Go find him—bring him back to me!"

"Bring him back?" howled the excited sheriff, his eyes bulging, his cheeks swelling, his red hair bristling and his voice ringing in its highest key. "Bring him back? You just bet I will. That's why I'm sheriff of Pinal county."

Slim whirled out of the door as if propelled by a gigantic blast. Echo fell fainting at her mother's feet.

CHAPTER XIII.

FORTH to the land of dead things, through cities that are forgotten, fared Dick Lane. Tricked by his friend, with the woman he loved lost to him, he wandered onward.

Automatically he took up again his quest for buried treasure. That which in the flush of youthful enthusiasm and roseate prospects of life and love had seized him as a passion was now a settled habit, and fortunately so, for it kept him from going mad. He had no thought of gain, only the achievement of a fixed purpose, a monomania.

With this impulse was conjoined a more volitional motive—he wished to revenge himself upon the Apaches and chiefly upon the renegade McKee, whom he supposed still to be with them. Somehow he blamed him rather than Jack Payson as being the chief cause of his miseries. "If he had not stolen the buried gold I would have returned in time," he muttered. "He is at the bottom of all this. As I walked away from Jack in the garden I felt as if it was McKee that was following me with his black, snaky eyes."

Accordingly Dick directed his way to a region reputed to be both rich in buried treasure and infested by hostile Indians. He wandered westward to Tularosa, then down to Fort Grant and toward the lava beds of southwestern Arizona. In all that arid land there was nothing so withered as his soul.

LADIES' SHIRTWAIST.

All Seams Allowed.

The waist illustrated is one which will make up well in flannel because of the little fullness and the long tucks. The tucks each side of the center front extend from shoulder to waist line, and the closing, which is in the nature of a tuck, gives a graceful line to the figure, while a little extra fullness is obtained by the short tuck at the shoulders. A tuck at each side of the center-back gives a box-plait effect. The sleeves are the regulation shirt style, finished with cuffs, which are fastened with links. French and Scotch flannels, percale, madras, linen or taffeta silk will develop a most stylish waist. The pattern (5161) is cut in sizes 32 to 41 bust. To make the garment in the medium size will require 3 yards of material 27 inches wide, 2¼ yards 36 inches wide, or 1⅝ yards 44 inches wide.

The above pattern can be obtained by sending 10 cents to the office of this paper.

THE DELINES UNFRIENDLY

Domestic Harmony Didn't Reign in Household, It Was Stated at Inquest at Havelock---Crown's Machinery Set Moving in Belmont Township Murder Mystery.

From Our Own Correspondent.

Havelock, Sept. 23.—"We, the jury appointed to enquire into the cause of the death of Mrs. Hugh Deline, conclude that she came to her death by foul play. We consider the evidence points strongly toward her husband, Hugh Deline, having committed the foul play, and we consider the evidence warrants him to be sent up for trial for having been the cause of her death."

This was the verdict given after twenty minutes' consideration of the evidence taken at the inquest into the death of "Chrissy" Deline, who was murdered at her home in Northern Belmont on Thursday, September 15th, which was started before Coroner Kindred, of town, at 10 o'clock Friday.

Hugh Deline, husband of the deceased, who was arrested on Tuesday night, was brought down on the noon train by County Constable Cochrane.

Crown Attorney Wood, of Peterborough, conducted the prosecution, while G. N. Gordon, of Peterborough, was present in Deline's interest.

The coroner's jury was Fred Bennet, foreman; M. Lytle, Geo. Newton, Sr.; A. Buchanan, Jr.; Geo. Newton, Jr.; Robt. Buchanan, Sr.; Jno. Buchanan, Sr.; Jno. Buchanan, Jr.; E. Curtis, Jos. Doughty, Wm. McMullen, W. Newton, Thos. Buchanan.

THE EVIDENCE.

Mrs. Newel, wife of Samuel Newel, was first examined. She lives about a half a mile from the Deline home. Deline appeared at her home on Thursday night, after she had retired. It was twenty minutes to ten when she retired. She went to Mr. M. Lytle when Deline alarmed her, and got Mr. and Mrs. Lytle to go to the Deline home with her. Deline was there when they arrived. They went to the back kitchen and saw Mrs. Deline lying on the floor. They did not examine the body. Deline and Lytle went to inform some neighbors of the affair, and several came back with them, but the body was not examined, though it was seen lying at the east side of the back door. Mrs. Newel had known Mrs. Deline a little before.

Mrs. Deline had said to her that she did not want to have any more children, and would not yield to Deline any more. She wondered if all men were like Deline.

After he had given the alarm, Deline went to bed and slept, but none of the rest did. Deline had never examined the body up to Friday evening, although he had been asked to.

MRS. LYTLE.

Mrs. Lytle, who went with Mrs. Newel to the Deline home, was next examined. She corroborated the evidence of Mrs. Newel in regard to the finding of the body. They did not examine the body, but thought by its appearance that she was dead. Witness said Deline went to bed at about 12 o'clock, and had to be awakened in the morning at daylight. Next morning the body was examined. When the body was washed Friday evening the dress was found torn at the neck and human faeces matter was found inside dress under body.

PAINS IN THE HEAD.

Mrs. McMullen was next examined, and said that the body was left in original position until after coroner's jury had examined it. Deline made no explanation of how death came to his wife. Witness had said to the others that some one must have killed her, on account of the marks on the body. She had heard Deline say that his wife had had pains in her head for three or four years. Deline did not examine the body until after it was laid out. He did not want to see it, but on being prompted, looked at it. She had never seen Mrs. Deline before, until that night.

HELPED CLEAN BODY

Mrs. McCuaig, when examined, said that she arrived at the Deline home on Friday at noon. She helped to wash the body, which was very dirty. Body was stained and wrapper covered with human faeces matter. Her legs were bare up to the knee. She had never been acquainted with the deceased.

POST-MORTEM.

Dr. Holdcroft, who performed the post-mortem, was next heard. He performed the post-mortem at Havelock in the town hall, on Saturday, where the body was brought.

The body was apparently well nourished. There were marks on cords around wrist, bruise on shoulder, several ebrasions on face, and cut on inside of right ear.

He had come to the conclusion that death was due to shock. The injuries on the body would not cause death. Marks on body would show that there had been a struggle. The human faeces would indicate fright, and there must have been some floundering around of the body to have stains about the body.

Dr. Ford, of Norwood, who assisted in the post-mortem, agreed with Dr. Holdcroft, and said that the condition of the heart would show that she had died suddenly, but that neither internal or external injuries would cause death.

DECEASED'S MOTHER

Mrs. Parks, mother of the deceased "Chrissy" Deline, when called, said that she arrived at the Deline house on Sunday. She took charge of the clothing which her daughter had worn at death, and gave them to Constable Williams. Her daughter had said, "Oh, mother, you don't know the life I lead," last fall while on a visit. She did not want her daughter to marry Deline, and had never given her consent. She knew nothing of pains in her daughter's head.

DELINE'S STATEMENT

Samuel Buchanan, son of Jas. Buchanan, said he knew Deline, who worked for his father on the day of the tragedy. He had left his place at about dark. It is about one mile to the Deline home. On Monday morning before, Deline had said he didn't know what to think about his wife. That she had pains in her head, and he would not be surprised to go any time and find her dead.

Wm. J. Doughty said that he had also heard Deline say that he would not be surprised to go home and find his wife dead. He said he had doctored with two physicians where he came from and also with Dr. Holdcroft, Havelock.

Robt. Buchanan had also heard Deline say that his wife had pains in her head. He said that he expected to go home some night and find her dead. He did not know what he would do with the children if she died. Deline also said that his wife did not want him to go to the doctor.

Ethel Buchanan, when sworn, said that she had seen Mrs. Deline between five and six o'clock on Wednesday. Mrs. Deline said she was feeling some better, and that the pain in her head was bad at times, and then it would get better. Mrs. Deline said she had been taking medicine and that it did her no good. Deline got a bottle of patent medicine on the day of the tragedy. He said it was for his wife. Deline left her place a little after dark on Thursday. She thought it was about seven o'clock.

GOT NEW TROUSERS

Wm. McMullen said that Deline lived a little over half a mile from his home. When he arrived at Delines Deline sent him in to get a pair of trousers. Deline said that he had torn his pants getting over the fence. Deline rolled the old trousers up and placed them in the cellar window. When McMullen next saw them they were in the cellar between some barrels. He did not see anything wrong with the trousers only a tear in them. He said that he had told Deline to go to bed.

Matthew Lytle had also seen the discarded trousers. There was nothing wrong with them any more than that they were torn. Deline, after giving the alarm, was asked by Lytle what was the matter with his wife, and he said she had a bad pain in her head.

County Constable Williams had taken Mrs. Deline's clothes to Toronto, to the public analyst. He also got Deline's trousers. The trousers smelled very bad. Traces of human faeces matter were evident from the knee down on trousers. On Monday he asked Deline what clothes he had on on the night of the tragedy. He said he had on the same clothes, only he had changed his shirt. He then said, when further questioned, that he did not have on the same pants, and said his other trousers were in the cellar. In regard to the stain on pants, Deline had said his young boy had caused it some time before, he did not know exactly when.

Dr. Holdcroft was sure that the matter on the trousers which Mr. Williams had shown him, was human excretion.

The evidence was completed at 3.45 and the jury retired. At four minutes after four o'clock they returned with the above verdict.

Deline was remanded to appear at the court house at Peterborough.

He was taken back to Peterborough on the evening train by County Constable Cochrane.

Deline, although in no way excited at the inquest, kept a keen eye and ear during the taking of evidence.

The pants discarded by Deline on the night of the tragedy, as well as the wrapper worn by his wife, have been sent to the Dominion analyst at Toronto for examination of the matter on both garments, to see if they are similar.

In Little Things As Well As Big

For example, let us take the OVEN.

The oven bottom of all sizes is 20 inches deep. This is the actual depth of the oven floor, the part of the oven that is of the most value to you. We do not include an inch or two in the bottom of the oven door.

Measure the oven bottom of other ranges—especially those with swing doors—and see if the ovens come up to this specification

"Peerless Peninsular" is a big, honestly built range—full size—with all the new conveniences of the most expensive steel ranges—and with the durability of cast-iron which is superior to steel in lasting qualities.

"HARMONY", "CONSTANT" and "ADANAC" have the same quality, workmanship and construction as the "Peerless", the difference is only in the outer appearance.

OIL ON THE STREETS NOT AS BAD AS IT SMELLED

Keeps Down the Dust Effectively and Those Who Complained About it Approve of it Now—Ald. Phelan Favors a Second Coat for George Street—Not Rubidge Street—He Lives There.

While the city fathers will frankly admit that the man who wrote the "Garden of Roses" wasn't inspired by the smell of the oiled streets of Peterborough, nevertheless, they think that the oiling of the roads as a good thing.

There were some objections to the odor of the oil that was placed on the streets, but Mayor Morrow stated at the Board of Works meeting last night that a prominent merchant told him that the oiling of the streets was a most satisfactory procedure—and from the way the board congratulated themselves all round, it may be taken for granted that they consider the experiment a success.

Later in the evening Ald. Graham suggested that a second oiling be given Rubidge street. The city engineer thought that the objections of the residents in that vicinity against another sprinkling of the oil were as strong as the odor of the oil itself. However, the motion was seconded by Ald. Metheral and carried FAVORED GEORGE STREET.

Ald. Phelan lives on the oiled section of the street. He coyly ventured the opinion that George street should be given another coat in preference to Rubidge street, as the main avenue was the most generally used.

Was it to avoid the smell or a sense of civic duty that prompted Ald. Phelan's suggestion?

OILING WILL BE COMMON.

Ald. Hicks thought that oiling the streets could be adopted on a comprehensive scale next year, and suggested that the city take steps to make provision about the supply of oil.

"Don't you think that the disagreeable smell would leave the oil if it were kept over and not put on too fresh?" asked Ald. Graham

"Well, we might get a barrel of rosewater and put it in every tank," replied Ald. Hicks

But seriously the aldermen think street oiling is a capital thing, and admit that, while it was really disagreeable while the odor lasted, say that it is giving every satisfaction now as a dust allayer.

On suggestion of Mayor Morrow, men will clean off the crossings where the caked oiled earth has dropped off from the vehicle tires.

Ald. Phelan thought the gutters on George street street should be raked up, and the committee seconded his idea.

RALLY SERVICES AT KNOX CHURCH

Afternoon Service for Sunday School and Special Rally of Men at Night

Knox church will hold rally services to-morrow, and special preparation has been made. The Sabbath school rally, at which all the old scholars are looked for, will be held at 3 p.m. A printed order of service will be used. The offering will be given to assist scholars in the mission stations of Northern Ontario. Rev. J. A. Stewart, of Hespeler, will give an interesting address.

In the evening the annual rally of men will be held. Rev. Mr. Stewart is coming from Hespeler for this service, and will address the men. A male choir will assist in the service. A helpful and interesting day is looked for.

A MESSAGE TO PROTESTANTS

Will be the Subject on Which Rev. J. R. Webb Will Preach Sunday Evening

It is not often that the Review has the privilege of announcing the subjects of the sermons at Murray street Baptist church, but it learned that to-morrow the pastor, Rev. J. R. Webb will preach on the topic "A Message to Protestants."

The subject of the sermon implies a great deal and the preacher will doubtless give an interesting discourse on this particularly timely topic.

TO-MORROW AT ST. PAUL'S CHURCH

Services of a special character will be held in St. Paul's church to-morrow in connection with the annual "Rally Day" of the Sabbath school. In the morning the pastor will preach a special sermon to parents on "The Religious Education of the Young." In the afternoon the "Rally Day" services themselves will be held, when addresses will be given by Sheriff Hall and Mr. George McKay, of Philadelphia. At four o'clock there will be a meeting of the boys of the congregation, which will be addressed by Rev. J. A. Stewart, of Hespeler. In the evening the pastor will preach a special sermon to young men, and at the close of the service, a meeting for men only will be held by the Brotherhood of St. Paul, when Mr. McKay will give an address.

CHIMES FUND

Complying with the idea as suggested by "Citizen," the staff of the Review to a man subscribed to the chimes fund, the amount being acknowledged in another column. The idea, it is hoped, will be taken up by all the workshops and factories of our city, so that when the bells ring out in future days all will feel that they helped. A fixed sum, say of 10, 15 or 25 cents each, helps along the idea and does not prevent any more deeply interested giving outside the workroom collection. It has also been suggested that the labor unions will be approached as well as the secret and friendly societies, so that the interest will be general to a degree. We all want those chimes, that's certain, and when on the "day that was made for man," also the days, there is something to celebrate, we'll hear the bells and all will feel a long felt want is gratified.

A PRODUCTION OF DISTINCTION

At the Grand Opera House, one of the most important events so far announced is the coming of the Aborn English Grand Opera Company, now making its initial tour in America, whose engagement here will be for one performance on Wednesday night, September 28th, when they will present Balfe's most melodious and most popular opera, "The Bohemian Girl."

This aggregation has never before visited any but the very large cities where it was possible for them to remain for continuous runs of five, ten or fifteen weeks. The seat sale opens Monday morning.

An Appreciation

To the Editor of the Review.

Peterborough, Sept. 24th.

Sir,—As a visitor to the Brinton Carpet Works yesterday, I was greatly surprised at the size and importance of this industry, and the splendid work which is being turned out there. The appearance of the buildings is perhaps misleading, and I feel sure that people who view them from the street car receive no idea of what is going on inside.

One hundred and fifty persons are busily employed, and the industry is certainly a valuable asset and a credit to Peterborough.

Peterborough citizens should, it seems to me, ask for and give the preference to Brinton carpets when buying.

Indeed, it is to their interest in every way to do so, for they will not probably secure a better article.

Yours, etc.,
VISITOR.

The Unseen Parts of a Coat

We would like to give a photographic reproduction of the unseen parts of a Semi-ready Coat—with the tailoring made as only we make them. Newspaper photos do not permit it.

The inside, the vital parts of tailoring—canvas, linen, haircloth, and even the stay tape, are all English shrunk—the cold water process. The result is a permanent non-cockling, unbreakable front.

Semi-ready Trousers and Vests are made equally as well as the coats—the $15 Suits have all the superior points of workmanship that are in the $20, $25 and $30 Semi-ready Garments.

ACCIDENTAL DISCHARGE OF GUN KILLED CHILD

Eighteen Months' Old Child Found Hidden Away Shot-gun—Shot in the Head.

Cavan, Sept. 24.—The 18 months' old child of Mr. and Mrs Wm. Finley Lotus was shot and instantly killed by the discharge of a shotgun with which he was playing, on Tuesday morning. Just how the accident happened is not known as there was no eye witnesses to the affair. The child had gone over to a neighbor's to spend the day, and it was during the momentary absence of the people of the house that the tragedy took place, it being supposed that the child had found out the whereabouts of the loaded gun kept behind the door and while handling it in a careless manner it went off. The charge entered at the front of the head and came out at the back, death being instantaneous. The parents are prostrated with grief, it being their only child. The funeral took place on Wednesday. The child was a grandson of Mr. Ephriam White, of Cavan.

PLAN WIDESPREAD WAR IN INTERESTS OF REFORM

Temperance and Moral Reform League Will be Particularly Active -- A Censor Committee for Five Cent Vaudeville May be Appointed.

The Temperance and Moral Reform League met last evening in the Y.M.C.A. parlors. Mr. F. R. Hassard, the newly-appointed president, was in charge. From the discussion last night it is the intention of the league to wage a more vigorous campaign than ever.

THING EIGHT HOTELS ENOUGH.

At last evening's meeting the plans for the next campaign were discussed, and for the reduction of licenses in the city. The league still maintains that eight hotels would comply with the requirements of the city. The prevention of slum tendencies was also brought up.

It was thought that a city by-law should be passed prohibiting buildings being used as residences where there is no public street frontage. It was a well-known fact that buildings used as residences near the back of lots and in the rear of lanes have a tendency to become haunts of vice eventually. It is also known that there are a few cases of it already in the city. Now is the time for a by-law to be passed.

SADIE SALOME GO HOME.

Another thing discussed was the complaints that arise regarding the general tendencies for evil of the vaudeville at some of the moving picture shows. It was held out that while clean cheap amusements are desirable, as long as they are clean, in some cases the moving picture show is being used as a means to introduce low-class vaudeville. A committee may be appointed to investigate them and see if anything can be done to prevent it.

The league proposed to consult with the Board of Education and Ministerial Association with the intention of joining forces in the efforts to promote morality and work jointly for the elimination of evil forces from the city.

They would also appreciate any information that would be of material service to them in checking the violations of law-breakers in this connection..

AN UNUSUALLY GOOD PROGRAM

Will be Given at the Opening Popular Concert by the 57th Regimental Band at Armouries on Friday — Miss Hallihan and Ark Quartette Will Contribute.

The first of the series of popular "R" month concerts to be given by the 57th Regimental Band will be held at the armories next Friday night, when the band will be heard in a very excellent programme, and will be assisted by Miss L. Hallihan, who will sing "The Holy City" and "Killarney," and the Ark Quartette will also be heard in humorous numbers.

Among the band numbers will be a grand pastoral and hunting scene "La Fremersberg," and a descriptive idyll "The Mill in the Black Forest." The latter selection was one of the feature numbers of the Grenadier Guards Band at its recent visit to the Toronto Exhibition. The selection of Harry Lauder's songs, which have attained such sweeping popularity in Canada. The arrangement includes "I Love a Lassie," "I Loved Her Ever Since She Was a Baby," "Annie, My Scotch Bluebell," and other Lauder gems.

Seating capacity for five or six hundred will be provided, and there will also be standing capacity for five or six thousand.

WAS WARMLY WELCOMED REV. E. A. PEARSON BY NEW CONGREGATION

Hamilton Spectator.

The congregation of Central Methodist church last evening taxed the capacity of the lecture room to its utmost to extend a welcome to Rev. E. A. Pearson, the new pastor, who since his induction into the Central church pastorate, has established warm friendships with the members and all others with whom he has come in contact. The ushers were kept busy trying to seat the people, and many could not get into the large Sunday school building.

W. J. Waugh occupied the chair and opened the meeting with a brief address of welcome on behalf of the congregation. He referred to the strides the church had made since Rev. Mr. Pearson had assumed the pastorate, and said that church could not have done better in a long search than to get Mr. Pearson. The prayer meetings held every week were far more successful than they had been since the amalgamation of Gore and Wesley churches. The Sunday congregations were also growing larger every Sunday, and the church was being established on a firmer basis every week. The interest in the different church societies and organizations was enhanced also.

Other officials of the church also spoke.

In reply to the warm words of welcome tendered him the pastor stated he was greatly pleased with the warmth of his official welcome. The beginning of his pastorate was even more than could be desired, and he hoped it would continue to be as happy and satisfactory to himself as it had been so far. The warm welcomes tendered him in every home he had visited had helped him greatly in the beginning ,and he was sure he would continue to receive the hearty support already accorded him. He thanked the members heartily for the pleasent opening of his pastorate, and the many kindnesses extended him on every occasion.

PROGRESS OF THE CAMPAIGN

The office of the General Secretary was the scene of great excitement last evening. Each of the Committeemen were anxious to be first in getting in their new members, and it kept the office staff busy taking in applications and making out receipts. That the men are working is very evident. All over town the talk is about joining and wherever the Campaign is mentioned it is with the kindliest sympathy.

One of the encouraging features about the Campaign, and one that is quite logical, is to be found in the fact that as soon as a young man joins he brings in a few more. This makes it difficult to tell just where the increase is going to stop. One young man who had to be coaxed to join on the first day of the Campaign has induced three of his friends to join since. Another boy who was presented with a ticket by his employer is bringing in two of his chums. Like an avalanche, it grows as it progresses.

Don't let anybody think that there are no discouraging features about this Campaign. It would be a strange Campaign if that was the case. One of these is found in the fact that some who were counted on to be leaders have not raised a finger so far to help. It is still expected, however, that these are just waiting until they see the need of re-enforcements and then they will add strength to the work.

Two of the Clergymen of the city have joined and one of them in joining said: "I consider it a great priviledge to become a member of the Young Men's Christian Association and to pay my fee like the rest. You are doing a good work and this is one way in which I can show my appreciation." Just in this connection it might not be out of place to say that the Y. M. C. A. rests it's claim for a place among the agencies of the Christian Church upon two truths! the power of enviroment to mould character and the adaption of religion to redeem man. Many a young man who could not be induced to go to Church, has joined the Y. M. C. A. for the use of it's many priviledges and has been led to serve in the Church through friends made there. Sixty years of existance has amply proved this. The leaders of the Church have been among the foremost to pay tribute to the efficiency of the Association to accomplish the task of reaching and holding young men for the Church.

The Canadian Government regulation, regarding the brewing of lager, is probably the most exacting in the world.

SAFES NOW DEFY BOLD BURGLAR

A war that has been going on for a century with much loss of money and some loss of life seems to have been ended, with the victors holding what they have and the losers in full retreat. This is the war between the safe makers and the safe blowers, in which the latter have been defeated. The struggle between them has been much like that between the big guns and the protective armor of the men-o'-war, although in this case the competitors were much more fairly matched than the safe makers and the burglars. From the beginning odds were always strongly against the latter. The only point in which they might be supposed to have an advantage was in their far greater incentive. While a safe maker might get $1,000 for a good safe, a bank robber might get $100,000 by breaking it. Of course, the penalty for failure to make a thoroughly good safe was a bagatelle compared with the penalty for failing to burst it open and being caught. So the advantage of the burglar was more than balanced by this compensation, and he may be said to have played the game out with every point against him.

CHISEL AND DRILL.

Unequal though the conflict was, it has gone on with varying fortunes for many years. The first iron safes served to keep out burglars who came empty handed to the job. As soon as one got a good chisel, a file, and a "jimmy," he pried them open with little difficulty. Then when there was an improvement made on the iron box, and the first of the modern safes were put on the market, the crowbar and the file were baffled for the moment. These safes were usually exposed on all sides and presently the burglars introduced their steel drills, bored holes in the side of the safe, and through them manipulated the locks. The makers retorted by hardening the steel so that no drill operated by hand power could pierce the sides in any limited time. So the burglars turned their attention to the doors.

ATTACKING THE DOORS

They found very few safes with perfectly fitting doors, so they were enabled to make many a rich haul by driving a wedge into the crack and forcing the door. Another method was to use a very fine steel saw, and working through the crack, cut the bolts in two. Whereupon the safe manufacturers turned out a safe with overlapping flanges and interlocking joints. The next move was to concentrate on the spindles, which was then the weaker part of the safe. They were often drilled, driven in or pulled out, and an opening made, through which the locks could be reached. A new method of construction blocked this lead. Then came the era of nitro-glycerine. The burglar got out his old drill again, and, armed with it and a bottle of his "soup," he left a trail of wrecked safes behind him.

THE ERA OF NITRO-GLYCERINE.

When he struck a safe where the drill would make no impression, he attacked the door. The liquid would seep through cracks that the point of a knife would hardly enter, and thus they blew the safe open. Even where the doors made a water tight compartment, the burglar merely had to scrape a little paint off the edge of the door. Then he had a crack ready for his nitro-glycerine. There are thousands of these painted safes in use now, all of them easy enough prey for the "yeggman" who handles nitro-glycerine. The big modern safes, however, are as secure against the "soup" as against the crowbar. They are made without paint, their whole outer surface being of polished steel, with no cracks or crannies anywhere. The door is so hung that it fits parallel with the jambs. It is made to fit so closely that a closed door that admits water after being immersed in a vat for a week is condemned and is ground once more.

BURGLAR PROOF.

A modern improvement is a round door, which can be made to fit more tightly than a rectangular door. The safe door is a very complex piece of mechanism, often composed of thousands of pieces, each of which is made accurate to the thousandth part of an inch. Frequently it is two feet thick and weighs 20 tons. The body of the vault is usually built up of steel plates, screwed together from the inside, a hard and a softer steel being used alternately, one having greater resisting power to drills, and the other to explosives. A short while ago a safe of this kind went wrong in a Province bank, and could not be opened. The makers were notified and sent a force of experts to work on it. These men had complete working drawings of the safe, and were supplied with every took they required. It took them just twelve days to force their way into the safe. Imagine how long it would have taken a gang of yeggmen, who would have to work in silence! The electric arc, with its terrific heat wave, is the latest tool a burglar has attempted to use; but the safe makers have prepared an insulation proof against electricity, and now claims to have finally won the battle.

THE CAR TO BUY

Russell-Knight

The Car Noted for its Great Power, Flexibility, Quietness and Endurance

Russell-Knight 1911 Models: 22, 26 and 38 H.P.

CRITICS CONFOUNDED

Interested critics said a year ago: "Do not buy a Knight motor, it is an experiment—in a year or two it may be all right."

Partly this is true—the Knight engine will be improved. Quite frankly we venture to hope that each Knight engine and each Russell car we make will be better than the one before. We believe that our 1914 cars will be better than those of to-day.

But this is the fact that must be borne in mind:—

The Knight engine built in its first year, by the first firm building it in a commercial way, under official observation, put up a performance which no valve motor made by any firm after years of experience has been able to equal.

Is not this conclusive proof of Knight superiority?

Then consider that since that time the engineering skill of five of the leading engineering firms of the world have worked for the improvement of the motor, and have been aided by the experience of over 2,000 users.

To-day the Knight motor stands on its record in all quarters of the globe as a tested, tried-out product of superlative excellence.

In the 1911 Russell "38" you get the culmination of this work in engine design.

Do your baking with flour made exclusively of the HIGH-GRADE constituents of the HARD-WHEAT berry

Have you ever baked with flour made exclusively of the high-grade constituents of the hard wheat berry? If you haven't, now is the time to try PURITY Flour.

Only the cream of the Manitoba hard wheat—the best wheat in the world—is used for PURITY Flour. More than that, only a portion of the flour milled from this wheat goes into the sacks and barrels branded PURITY.

PURITY Flour consists exclusively of the high-grade constituents or portions of the Manitoba hard wheat berry.

Every wheat berry has both low-grade and high-grade constituents which are separated during our process of milling. So exact is our process that it entirely eliminates all the low-grade portions from the flour which is finally branded PURITY.

The greater strength of PURITY Flour makes it go farther in the baking. With it you can make more loaves to the sack or barrel than you have ever succeeded in doing before. The loaves will be more nutritious, too, because they contain the high-quality gluten, starch, phosphates and other muscle-building and blood-enriching elements of the hard wheat berry.

Naturally flour that consists exclusively of the high-grade constituents of the best hard wheat has greater strength and nutriment, superior color, more delicate flavor.

If you'll just try to realize fully what it means to your cooking-reputation you'll soon be using PURITY Flour.

Of course, PURITY Flour will cost you a few cents more than lower-grade hard wheat flour or soft wheat flour.

But PURITY is very economical because it makes "More bread and better bread." The cost per loaf is no more than when using weaker flour, and the food value is much greater.

Tell your grocer you are in a hurry to try PURITY Flour. He will supply you promptly.

When you see the batch of beautiful snow-white loaves, with their soft, evenly-textured crumb and dainty golden-brown crust, you'll be proud of your success with PURITY Flour. When you taste and enjoy the superb flavor of such high-class bread you'll be prouder still.

If you don't want to buy a large sack or barrel, you can get a small bag. PURITY is packed in 7, 14, 24, 49 and 98 pound sacks. Also in barrels and half-barrels.

Make certain the PURITY trademark is on the sack or barrel you buy, for that is your guide to the strong, reliable, high-quality flour that makes

PURITY FLOUR

PURITY PROBLEM IS DISCUSSED

Following Rev. H. R. Trumpour's sermon of Sunday evening on "Purity," the Review publishes to-day, the results of two interviews in connection with the reverend gentleman's remarks. Others are forthcoming, very shortly. The various phases of the sermon are such that different prominent citizens, whose work brings them into contact with these matters, felt that when approached they did not have the necessary time to deal with the matter as it should be treated. Their observations and opinions will be published just as soon as they can be obtained by th eReview.

TRUANCY A CAUSE.

Chief of Police Thompson summed up the various points brought out in the sermon, and gave truancy from school as the root from which springs much of the present day evils existing in the lives of young boys and girls, and their elder brothers and sisters.

He held that the matter of truancy was a very important one, and one that should be dealt with as such. To have this work done properly, each school should be visited twice a day. Then the officer would become thoroughly acquainted with the pupils and this acquaintance would add greatly to the results.

"The boy who roams the street at day and night never amounts to much. I have noticed," said the chief, "and he can, and no doubt does, bring about the downfall of others. In my experience I have found that this truant can be reclaimed by a broad-minded treatment of his case. Speak with him firmly, but kindly. Show him the folly of his conduct. Start him to school again and make him feel that the officers of the law are his friends and not his enemies; and above all, let the boy know that you trust to his honor. I have yet to find the boy in whom the last spark of goodness has fled.

"In one case which came under my notice several boys who were habitual truants, after being dealt with in this manner turned out to be, according to the teacher, the brightest pupils in the class."

Regarding steps to be taken for the education of the boy or girl to supply them with that knowledge which would open their eyes to the pitfalls before them, and thus influence them to live a clean and pure life, Chief Thompson was of the opinion that the boy and girl should be taught separately, and by a capable teacher at school. He held, too, that the Young Men's Christian Association had a work to do along these lines. Lectures and short talks would be an education of untold value.

As to the general behavior of young children and their elders on the streets, the chief opined that Peterborough did not on the whole set a very bad example, but at that, he would continue to exert his authority in an endeavor to elevate the present standing.

An Exchange says;—The worst habit that boys can fall into is that of loafing around the streets at night. It is then that they cast their lot in slippery places and at any moment they are likely to fall from grace. All good and noble lessons taught them by their mothers are counteracted and nullified. They learn nothing good but everything bad. The boys who spend their evenings in the sacred precincts of home, with good books for their companions are the future hope of this country; they will fill our legislative and congression halls and sit in judgment upon men and measures, while the boys who run the streets will fill our penitentiaries, almshouses and lunatic asylums. Parents who are responsible for these broken laws of decency will have broken hearts and bowed down heads in the awakening years that will inevitably follow.

POLICE MAGISTRATE DUMBLE.

In reference to the sermon of the Rev. Mr Trumpour, as reported in the Peterborough Review of the 19th September, on the subject of purity, I think the language of the reverend gentleman rather brusque and a little exaggerated, but in the main, sad to say, too true.

As to the language of the original Shakespeare being too vile for perusal by people of this age, the Rev. gentleman forgets that the language of Shakespeare's day was coarse and vile, even by the cultured and in the highest society. To call a woman the vilest name possible was their only sportive badinage, and there was no legal remedy, for there was no offence. Not till Oliver Mowat passed an act making such language an offence and actionable was there any legal remedy in the country. In Shakespeare's day the language, habits and life were coarse and vile, but impurity was not peculiar to that day nor to this, for the preacher goes back to Genesis for his illustrations.

It is true that one's ears are often offended on our public streets by the foul language of boys and men, but that such language shocks and is punished in our courts under our laws, shows that the age does not tolerate it, and as a fact, we older men know that there is a vast improvement over the habits of the former generation.

The evils of vicious habits amongst the young are well known to all educationists. One bad leader will corrupt and taint a whole school, and vice at times runs through them. Medical men and those in charge of lunatic asylums and prisons clearly state the evil results of vice amongst the young. It stunts growth of body, of intellectual development, causes loss of memory, loss of will power, and is a prolific source of insanity.

It is a sad fact that parents, instead of instructing their children on these important matters, leave them severely alone; the result is disastrous—evil habits and pernicious minds and morals.

The subject should be dealt with by parents and teachers. There is a mawkish and inexcusable neglect. In Collegiate Institutes and other schools for the adolescent lectures should be delivered every session by a male doctor to the boys. This would prove of infinite value and save many a one from infinite woe.

I know of no more hellish crime than the circulation of impure literature and impure pictures. The evil impression is burned in—it is indelible and will not wash out, and will come up to the mind or mind's eye, even at most sacred moments, even as one kneels. Surely the devil has no more faithful servant than the one who for money thus pollutes the mind of the young.

Mr. Trumpour's sermon was timely and not too strong, considering the magnitude of the evil referred to, and his works should be taken to heart for most people know the evil is there, but they are too mawkish, or too cowardly to act on their best judgment regarding it. If parents and teachers did their duty it would not be necessary to make it a subject for the pulpit.

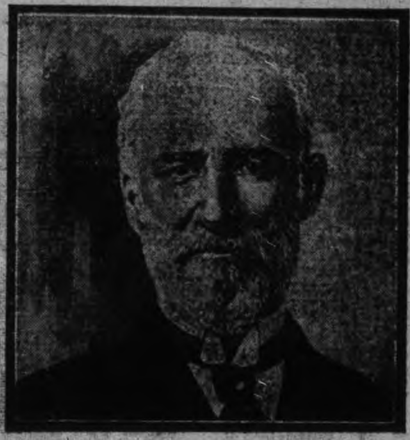
"I FEEL IT MY DUTY To Give You a Statement In Regard To 'Fruit-a-tives'"

HARDWICKE, MIRAMICHI, N.B., Jan. 17th. 1910.

"I feel it my duty to give to you and the world an unsolicited statement in respect to the wonderful cure I received by taking 'Fruit-a-tives.' Chronic Constipation was the complaint I suffered with for years. My general health was miserable as a result of this disease, and I became depressed and alarmed. I was treated by physicians without the slightest permanent benefit, and I tried all kinds of pills and tablets but nothing did me any good.



I saw the strong testimonial in favor of 'Fruit-a-tives' by New Brunswick's 'Grand Old Man', the Hon. John Costigan, and I knew that anything he stated was honest and true and given only to help his fellow-men. I tried 'Fruit-a-tives' and the effects were most marvellous, and now I am entirely well from all my Chronic Constipation that I suffered from for so many years. My general health is once more excellent and I cannot say too much to express my thanks for the great benefits derived from taking 'Fruit-a-tives.'"

A. G. WILLISTON.

"Fruit-a-tives" is not gotten up by druggists or expert chemists—who know nothing about disease and the needs of the human body—but is the scientific discovery of a well known physician, and is the only medicine in the world made of fruit juices.

POTATO CROP IS HEAVY, BUT MURPHYS ARE MUSTY

Unfortunately the potato crop this year is not up to the high standard of previous years. The Review when in conversation with a couple of well-known farmers to-day learned that the wet weather is the cause of the trouble. After the potatoes have been dug up and let stand a while large numbers of them turn soft and mushy. This is not noticeable when they are first taken from the ground. Mr. Robert Pimmet, of Otonabee, near Lang, had over a bag turn bad on him out of five rows. Mr. Harmer, who resides on the gravel road, also reports the same condition throughout his section of the country.

The heavy rainfall during the past summer is given as the only cause of the failure of the potatoes. The crop this year is a particularly heavy one.

ASSOCIATED CHARITIES ADVOCATED BY WOMEN

A Movement of Local Importance—Representatives of the Various Charities Discussed Matter—Ask Mayor to Call Public Meeting.

A large and enthusiastic meeting of ladies was held in the Y.W.C.A. building on Friday morning, September 23rd, for the purpose of discussing the formation of an association of charities, comprising all the charities in the city. Representatives were present from the Protestant Home, King's Daughters, Dorcas Society, St. John's, St. Paul's, Charlotte Street, Knox, St. Andrew's, Mark Street, St. James', Murray Street and George Street.

It was unanimously decided to ask the mayor to call a public meeting at once, with this object in view.

The Associated Charities would be religious in spirit, but not sectarian; not relief giving, but relief getting, making alms a part only of constructive. The Associated Charities would not dictate, interfere with or duplicate the work of established charities, but to fill in some of the gaps between. It is to be a great movement, but in the Biblical sense that "Whosoever will be great among you, let him be the servant of all."

The Associated Charities would be a federation of the charitable societies and institutions of the city.

ITS OBJECTS.

1. To make employment the basis of relief.
2. To prevent indiscriminate and duplicate giving.
3. To protect the community against imposition.
4. To reduce vagrancy and pauperism and ascertain their true causes.
5. To prevent children growing up as paupers.
6. To secure for all deserving cases of destitution prompt and adequate relief.
7. To elevate the home life, health and habits of the poor.

OBJECTS TO BE ATTAINED.

1. By bringing about co-operation among all charitable agencies and persons.
2. By a system of registration to prevent imposition.
3. By ascertaining, through investigation, the most suitable action in each and every case.
4. By obtaining from existing charities the precise help needed.
5. By giving temporary relief in cases of extreme emergency, and when all other sources fail.
6. By careful study of the causes of pauperism and of the best methods of dealing with destitution and degradation.
7. By furnishing the needy with a friend who will counsel them, safeguard their self-respect and inspire thrift and better living.

PUBLIC IS TIRING OF TRASH

The drmaatic and musical tastes of the public are inproving.

This is the opinion of Mr. F. Williams, the business manager of the English comedy "Mr. Preedy and the Countess," which will appear at the Grand shortly. Mr. Williams says the stage has been swamped with inferior musical and farce comedies and dramas of questionable value for such a long time that they are decaying in their own prosperity and there is every reason to believe that the stage is on the ever of a sweeping change for the better.

Both metropolitan and provincial audiences are becoming rapidly educated in the value of things theatrical, Mr. Williams states, and says that theatre managers and producers are beginning to realize that it is a paying proposition to present healthy and artistic offerings.

ALL SAINTS' ANNUAL HARVEST THANKSGIVING

The annual Harvest Thanksgiving services of All Saints' church will be held next Thursday evening, Sept. 29th, at eight o'clock. The church will be decorated and special music rendered. The Rev. W. L. Armitage, Vicar of Picton, will be the preacher. This will (D.V.), be the last harvest service in the old church, of which Mr. Armitage, who is so well and favorably known in Peterborough, was first rector, the building of which Mr. Armitage completed by the addition of the chancel.

The new church will (D.V.) be opened on Sunday, Oct. 23rd. The opening services will be extended over four Sundays. Two bishops have already promised to preach, and arrangements are being made for two more of the leading clergymen of the Church to be heard in Peterborough. A men's mass meeting will be held on the after noon of one of the opening Sundays, to be addressed by one of the leading laymen of the Anglican Church.

AN AUSPICIOUS OPENING

Roseate Prospects for a Splendid Term at the Y.W.C.A.—Visitors Charmed With Attractiveness of the Building—Wholesome Address by Dean of Annesly Hall

The fall and winter season's work in the Young Women's Christian Association building, was formally opened last evening under the most favorable and promising circumstances. The interest displayed, and satisfactory attendance at the rally in the rooms of this home-like and capacious institution last night, looked as if this season's plans would be fully realized.

ATTRACTIVE APPEARANCE

The building was thrown open to everybody for inspection, and the bright scrupulously neat appearance of things came in for considerable commendation from visitors. The Y. W. C. A. certainly possesses everything that tends to make a cosey and comfortable iviting surroundings for its members.

Several classes will be conducted this year, including a class for the study of medicine, domestic science, literature, etc.

ADVICE TO YOUNG WOMEN

The programme for the evening was held in the gymnasium, which was filled to the limit. Mrs. Roger occupied the chair. The principal speaker of the evening was Miss Addison, the Dean of Annesley Hall, Toronto. Miss Addison has had large opportunities for the study of the needs of young women, and out of her many experiences was able to relate interesting experiences and gave much wholesome advice to her audience.

ADMONITION TO LIVE RATIONALLY

"Don't eat too many sweetmeats girls" she remarked, or any unnutritious food. It will assuredly spoil that beauty which is your priviledge to have if you live sensibly.

"Do not wear stove pipehats." Make your minds useful, not useless. Inactivity is the cause of useless minds. Study whatever you want to. No matter how irksome study may be to you, stick at it. It is worthy the tears that might be shed over the difficulties of the German, to be able to read Faust.

DISCRIMINATE IN READING

If at home know the quickest way of doing things. Some branches of knowledge may not seem acceptable, English literature is always acceptable, and no book is more suited to everybody's needs than the Bible. It contains history, poetry, biography, and stories. It contains everything that a literary taste could desire.

DON'T WALK THE STREETS

Then be courageous. It is the heritagge of youth to be courageous. If you keep your minds stored with the best thoughts of all people, it will make you ready to enter the new field of thought that will be open to you. Then also, and more important than all others, set a good example. In this country, immorality is on the increase. No girl can have a good character who persists in walking the streets. Some girls think it a necessity to do so. Although good homes are needed in Canada, they can never be secured by the girls who walk the streets. Instead they will reap misery. There is no convention of society that has not a reason for it, and the same is true in this case. If because you think you are strong and fail to set a good example to other girls, God will surely hold you guilty of sin. Don't let your own pleasure stand between you and good. Don't, because it is so easy to forget the duty you owe to society."

Miss McCalla next made a few remarks, telling of the different classes which will be open to the young ladies of the Y. W. C. A. this winter.

Mr. Trumpour will take up the study of Dante at the Y. W. C. A. this winter, Miss McCrae, the study of drawing, Miss Steinhoff, domestic science, and Dr. McCullough of exercise. The latter spoke on the value of exercise for the human body, and urged all the girls to take advantage of the gymnasium.

At the conclusion of the programme a social time was spent by all present after which the gathering dispersed. With such an auspicious and greatly enjoyed opening, the season of the Y. W. C. A. cannot help but be a success.

A piano solo by Miss Gumphriet was much enjoyed during the evening's proceedings.

THE OPERATIONS ON SOUTH END SEWAGE SYSTEM WILL BE COMMENCED TO-DAY

Mr. Chipman, consulting engineer in charge, waited on the Board of Works last evening in regard to some details of the sewage construction work in connection with the south end system.

Ald. Hicks called attention to the fact that the tenders for the pumping station machinery had expired, and suggested that they be opened for the convenience of Mr. Chipman. The latter stated, however, that he had taken the responsibility upon himself of granting an extension of the time of the tenders, as very few had been submitted.

Several companies wished to sell parts of the apparatus, he explained, but the difficulty was to get any that wanted to take the whole contract. He thought that possibly the tenders would have to be subdivided.

He also stated that he had taken on himself the responsibility of ordering one carload of pipes, as they were very difficult to get, and he thought it wise to secure them while the opportunity might be taken advantage of. Mr. Chipman said the work of construction would start to-morrow, the 24th. It will be taken up first on Rink street and later on Romaine.

He asked permission to purchase valves and piping. On motion of the Mayor and Ald. Metheral, the power of granting this was left in the hands of the chairman.

ALD. BRADBURN SUGGESTS PAVING LOUIS STREET

"If the people don't want street paving it is not the intention of the board to force it upon them," said Ald. Hicks at the Board of Works meeting last night, when the question of dealing with the petitions was brought up. The matter of doing so was deferred.

The chairman stated that the cost of the proposed paving on George and Charlotte streets would amount to about $75,000.

"I think it's a great mistake to not have the work done," said Ald. Duffus.

"There are a great many people opposed to it," said Ald. Graham. "They think the taxes are high enough now."

The Mayor suggested that the motion be made to the effect that the pavements would be laid on the streets the first street that a petiion asking for it was received from.

The Bradburn Estate is a heavy owner of property on Louis street, and the suggestion from the Mayor gave Ald. Bradburn the cue to suggest that the street be paved from George street south 192 feet as an experiment. He would get a petition signed if the Mayor's motion were carried. The Chamberlain Estate won't consent to the widening of the street from the point 192 feet south of George to King street, so the section referred to would be the only one meriting pavement.

His Worship thought Louis street too narrow and too little used to furnish a desirable demonstration of the value of pavement.

The whole matter of pavement will be comprehensively discussed at a meeting of the committee of the whole council.

The three public utilities of Fort William showed losses for the three months ending June 30. Electric light lost $389, water $5,754, and telephones $2,203.

KNOCKED DOWN BY BICYCLIST

A bicyclist, Cress. Billings, collided with an elderly lady at the corner of George and Hunter streets to-day shortly after twelve o'clock, with the result that both fell to the ground. The lady was assisted into Macdonald's drug store and later taken to her home.

WHISKEY SEIZURE

Stirling village is supposed to be a dry place as it is under the ban of local option, but judging from the quantity of whiskey which was confiscated on Tuesday it was intended to make it a wet place. The Intelligencer is informed that the proper authorities were advised by some means that liquor was brought into the villagge to be used during the fair. On Tuesday afternoon a building in rear of the Kirby House was raided and some 30 bottles of whiskey were seized. Some trouble, it is said, ensued between the parties making the seizure and others who were about the premises. The matter will no doubt be ventilated in the court. It is alleged that two horsemen who refused to grant the officer permission to search their stalls were arrested yesterday.—Belleville Intelligencer.

CREW RESCUED FROM DERELICT IN MIDOCEAN

Wireless Means of Saving 19 Lives.

The Marconi Machine on Board the Koenigen Luise Gets Message That Steamer is Sinking.

New York, Sept. 26.—Wireless saved nineteen more lives on the last trip of the Koenigen Luise of the North German Lloyd Line to the Mediterranean and back, being those of the crew of an old-fashioned, full-rigged ship, the Harvest Queen, built a score of years before wireless communication was used, which, leaking, half sunk with water, drifting five days helplessly in the sunny seas 1,000 miles off the nearest land—the Azores—with three flags of distress hoisted on the mizzenmast, was surprised when these signals had carried beyond the horizons and brought succor.

One steamer, an unknown Italian, described the signals and made them out "Ship full of water, in instant need of help, high danger," and then flashed over the surrounding seas by her wireless apparatus: "Ship 1,000 miles due south Azores sinking; we are too far away to assist in time."

That message, cast upon the air about the waters caught at the wireless instruments on board the steamship Koenigen Luise at about two o'clock in the morning of Aug. 24. The captain gave orders to change the course to the point indicated. So well was it calculated that in four hours, when day had nearly broken, the disabled old ship was sighted.

She was "swimming," as the sailors put it. A few steadying sails were spread, but she rolled in the swell like a log in a swift river. There were the flags crying for aid. Lumber was scattered over the face of the sea—her deckload of timber could see her going lower and lower into the water.

According to the maritime register the Harvest Queen was of 2,544 tons. She had been captained by E. A. Forsyth for twenty years and was owned by him and his wife. Other records aboard the Koenigen Luise showed that she had sailed from Windsor, Nova Scotia, for Buenos Ayres with a cargo of cut lumber.

Boats were lowered and sent off. The first to return brought ten men, all the belongings they could carry and word that there was a rip in the Harvest Queen's bottom as wide as a sea chest and that all that was keeping her afloat was the lumber with which she was laden. One of her own boats was used for the last transfer of the crew.

MUCH LIKE THE CRIPPEN CASE

San Francisco, Sept. 26.—A murder mystery paralleling in some respects the supposed murder of Belle Elmore in London by her husband, Dr. H. H. Crippen, confronts the police here in the discovery of the body of Miss Eva Swan, 26 years old, a school teacher of Paso Robles, buried under a vacant house in Eureka street. Dr. Jas Grant and Miss Marie Messerschmidt, a nurse, are under arrest in connection with the case.

The police believe the girl was murdered to shield someone else, and they are searching for a ranchman of Paso Robles, who was on intimate terms with the dead girl, who had been missing since April 20. The body was wrapped in a sheet over which nitric acid had been poured.

THE STATUES TO BE DRAPED

Harrisburg, Pa., Sept. 26.—In a letter from Paris, George Gray Barnard, the sculptor, who made the marble groups for the front of the capitol, says that the nude statues will be so draped with marble as to give no offence.

The state meeting of the Ancient Order of Hibernians some time ago protested against the placing of the Barnard groups because of their nudity, and other organizations were about to follow suit.

Barnard says these groups will arrive here some time in October. He is particularly anxious to impress upon the people the fact that the statues will be draped.

Countess Wachtmeister Dead.

Los Angeles, Sept. 26.—Countess Constance Wachtmeister, a writer and lecturer on psychical subjects, and for many years closely associated with the late Mme. Blavatsky, died here Saturday night, aged 73. She had been ill about three weeks. Her son, Count Axel Raoul Wachtmeister, arrived in New York Saturday on the steamer Corona.

Had Leg Severed by Train.

Tweed, Sept. 26.—Thomas Wheeler, the nine-year-old son of Geo. Wheeler of this place, had his leg taken off while trying to jump on a C.P.R. freight train in the yards here yesterday. He will live.

DIES IN ENGLAND

Roy Gzowski, Q.O.R., Passes Away at Aldershot From Pneumonia.

London, Sept. 26.—Roy Gzowski of the Queen's Own Rifles, died at Cambridge Hospital, Aldershot, Saturday morning, pneumonia supervening upon typhoid fever. He was one of seven officers of the regiment who were taken ill with fever. An aunt was the only relative at the bedside, but a brother from Toronto is expected to arrive at Southampton to-day.

The homeward voyage of the Q.O.R. Regiment promises to be a glorious one. The sea is smooth. The sky is bright. The steamer is crowded with passengers. King George has wished the regiment bon voyage in a farewell telegram.

The soldiers left camp near Salisbury Saturday morning and entrained at Denton. The Buffs' band played them to the station and crowds accompanied them. After a comfortable journey they reached Liverpool, where they were given a tremendous ovation both before and after embarking on the Canada. The Lord Mayor of the city came down to the boat bearing a farewell message.

Toronto, Sept. 26.—The death of Lieut. Gzowski will cast a gloom on the home-coming of the Toronto rifle regiment, which sailed Saturday from Liverpool.

The young officer had been with the Q.O.R. only since the first of the year, and was attached to Company C. He graduated from Upper Canada College last year and since that time had been connected with the Toronto General Trusts Corporation. He was a member of the Lambton Golf Club and of the Royal Canadian Yacht Club. As an enthusiastic runner, he was well known in the Aura Lee and Central Y.M.C.A. circles.

LIEUT. ROY M. GZOWSKI.

In response to a cable message, his brother, Norman, left Toronto on Tuesday last for Aldershot. Deceased was a son of C. S. Gzowski, and a grandson of the late Sir Casimir Gzowski.

PRINCE OF WALES TO TOUR WORLD

New York, Sept. 26.—It is now reported that the Prince of Wales will leave England a few months after the investiture at Cardiff for a voyage around the world, and will enter the army for nominal service after his return. He will be accompanied on the voyage by Prince Albert, who will remain permanently in the navy. The King's third son, whose health is not robust, may go with them.

The rumor of the impending betrothal of the King of Portugal and Princess Alexander of Fife has been revived, apparently because the Marquis de Soveral has been visiting at Balmoral.

POSTOFFICE SAFE WAS BLOWN OPEN

Regina, Sept. 26.—The blowing up of the safe in the postoffice store at Balgonie at an early hour yesterday morning and the theft of $60 in cash, indicates that the band of yegmen who have been a source of worry to citizens and police of western Canada for some months, are drawing nearer to Regina. The men have worked backwards and forward on the main line of the C.P.R. for some weeks, but for a short time have been quiet.

TELEGRRAPH INQUIRY TO BE RESUMED IN TORONTO

Winnipeg Session of Railway Board Ends Abruptly When Chairman Mabee Announces That the Matter Will Have to be Gone Into Exhaustively.

Winnipeg, Sept. 26.—The investigation in Winnipeg into the question of telegraph tolls in and out of the city came to an abrupt conclusion on Saturday afternoon. Isaac Pitblado, who was acting for the Board of Trade and the Grain Exchange in the matter, concluded his examination of S. B. McMichael, assistant to the general manager of the G.N.W., and Judge Mabee then stated that he thought the time opportune for a consideration of the question of the general scope of the investigation, and the circumstances under which it was to be continued. He did not think it possible to complete the investigation in Winnipeg even if the commission were to sit all next week. He was of the opinion that the investigation might be confined to one of the telegraph companies, say the G.N.W., and that the sitting might be held in Toronto.

Mr. Pitblado then intimated that he had been advised by his clients that they could not be responsible for the costs of maintaining counsel in Toronto, and if the investigation was to be continued there, this part of the country would not be represented. To this Judge Mabee replied that he had always been opposed to the appointment of counsel by the Government to represent the people in these cases. His brother commissioners had, however, strongly favored this course, and, under the circumstances, he would withdraw his opposition, and would advise the Minister of Justice to name counsel to represent the people in the investigation, which would be continued in Toronto.

C. N. Bell of the Board of Trade made a very vigorous statement during the afternoon of the situation as it is viewed by the men whom he specially represents. W. J. Camp, the expert of C.P.R. telegraphs, had stated that it would take 50 clerks three years to secure one item of information for which the Winnipeg Board of Trade had asked. If this were true said Mr. Bell, what hope was there that any single patron of the telegraph company, or such organization as the Winnipeg Board of Trade could ever hope to obtain such information as would convince the board that the rates of the telegraph companies were too high. The time had passed when the people of Canada were willing to accept without question the slight concessions which the telegraph companies were willing to grant. There ought to be some authority in the Dominion which would intervene and determine what rates were equitable. It appeared to the Board of Trade that this was the function of the Railway Commission, and the appeal had therefore been made to it.

S. B. McMichael, assistant to the general manager of the G.N.W., who had urged in the forenoon that the rates of the company were so low that it had paid no dividends in 23 years, explained in the afternoon to Mr. Pitblado that the G.N.W. was the result of an amalgamation of the old Montreal and the Dominion companies, and that the shareholders of the Montreal had been paid eight per cent. and the shareholders of the Dominion had been paid six per cent. He also stated that if there were deficits in the operation of the G.N.W., the money due to the shareholders of the old Montreal and Dominion companies was paid by the Western Union, showing that the G.N.W. was but another name for the Western Union.

Judge Mabee expressed the conviction that in the investigation of telegraph rates the commission was going to be involved in as great an undertaking as in the matter of the express rates.

C. N. Bell of the Board of Trade maintained that the matter of telegraph rates would prove much less complex, as the number of schedules was very much less.

STEPPED IN FRONT OF TRAIN

St. Catharines, Sept. 26.—Mrs. Ross, an elderly lady from Cypress River, Manitoba, met a very sad death in front of the Niagara, St. Catharines and Toronto Railway station at Merriton, shortly after seven o'clock on Saturday night. She had lately been visiting at the home of her brother-in-law, and left in the evening to go to the station to board the Niagara Falls trolley leaving this city at seven o'clock. When she arrived at the crossing, a freight train, attached to an electric motor, approached. The woman must have seen it, for she stopped for a moment. Then, evidently thinking she could pass in front without injury, made somewhat of a jump, but landed directly in front of the motor. Her body was frightfully mangled, death being practically instantaneous.

MAY USE THE FINGER PRINT

Vancouver, Sept. 26.—The difficulties in connection with the regulation of Chinese immigration into Canada via Vancouver, as evidenced by the holding of 38 immigrants who came on the Empress of China last Saturday, on the charge that they were using fraudulent passports, are not nearing solution. It has been proposed that by the introduction of the finger print system of identification the problem of identifying immigrants and the persons for whom the passports were originally issued in China, will be made easy.

POINT GREY IS CHOSEN AS SITE

Victoria, B.C., Sept. 26.—The report of the university commission appointed during the summer to select a site for the British Columbia University was made public Saturday, having, although dated June 28 last, been received only last Monday. The commission have decided upon Point Grey, a seaside suburb of Vancouver, as the site.

The university site commission are strongly of the opinion that the university should not be placed on the site which may in time be completely surrounded by the city. They suggest that not less than 250 acres be set apart for a university campus, and 700 acres for experimental purposes in agriculture and forestry. This is exclusive of the forest reserve for forestry operations on a large scale. Already two million acres have been set aside by the Provincial Government as an endowment fund for the university.

SMUGGLING BY AEROPLANE

Paris, Sept. 26.—The first case of smuggling by aeroplane was recorded on Thursday when Nieuport won a cross-country race at the Maubeuge flying meet near the Belgian frontier. He landed at Grandreng and returned with flowers and cigars with which he had been presented by young Belgian women.

The aviator distributed the cigars among the notables present, who included a French customs officer from the head office. The latter automobiled to Maubeuge later in order to satisfy himself that Nieuport's aeroplane was not prepared for contraband work.

Tactless and Indiscreet.

Vienna, Sept. 26.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—Consul Schwegel's speech, delivered at Winnipeg, on Emperor Frances Josef's birthday, eulogizing the Slav peoples, is characterized on all hands here as tactless and indiscreet.

PARIS AGENCY AN IMPORTANT POST

Montreal, Sept. 26.—Hon. Senator Dandurand, who is out in favor of dividing the Ottawa from the Quebec agency in Paris, says that a good man, socially and financially, should be appointed in the capital of the richest and one of the greatest loaning countries in the world. He says that the sincerity of the entente cordiale in France was manifested plainly at the unveiling of the monument to Champlain at Beauvert, where the founder of Quebec was born. The Minister of Foreign Affairs, presiding, proposed the health of the King of England, when everyone present, and there were no Englishmen, except a few Canadians, rose and cheered, while Sir Wilfrid's health was also splendidly received.

SIX WERE HURT IN COLLISION

Toronto, Sept. 26.—Six persons were injured, two of them getting ribs broken, in a rear end street car collision at College and Huron streets at 8.40 Saturday night.

A College car, west bound, stopped at Huron street, to let off passengers, and Bloor car No. 693, going in the same direction, crashed into it.

One of the injured persons, John Weatherburn, says the motorman on the Bloor car misjudged the distance and did not set his brakes soon enough. Claims Agent Jas. Forrest of the Toronto Street Railway says it was simply a case of "greasy rails."

Auto Plunged Into Canal.

New Orleans, Sept. 26.—Six persons were drowned here when an automobile early yesterday morning plunged into the canal. They were chorus girls with the Moulin Rouge burlesquers.

ACCIDENT TO THE CORUNNA

Big Freighter on Which Jack Laing is Purser Had Narrow Escape From Sinking

The Canadian freighter "Corunna" which was damaged through a collision in Lake St. Clair Friday, is the boat on which Mr. Jack Laing, of this city, is purser.

The Corunna narrowly escaped sinking, as when she reached her port she had settled so far that the ten foot hole, torn in her port bow side, was but a few inches above water.

The steering gear of the barge John Smeaton went wrong and the boat bumped into the Corunna, with the above disastrous results.

WILL ASK FOR CHANGE IN ACT

Montreal, Sept. 26.—It looks very much as if the three maritime provinces were about to approach the Federal authorities with a view to secure a modification of the British North America Act at the hands of the Imperial Government.

This, in fact, was intimated yesterday at the Windsor by Hon. W. H. C. Grimer, surveyor general of New Brunswick, who stated that although he was not a participant in the recent conference in St. John between Attorney-General Maclean of Nova Scotia, Premier Hazen of New Brunswick, and Premier Haszard of Prince Edward Island, he believed that a common basis would be reached by which united action would be taken by the local authorities of the three lower provinces to ensure against a further diminution of the Federal representation in the House of Commons from the lower provinces. If something, he said, is not done in this direction, the representation following the census of Nova Scotia, will be cut down to 13; that of New Brunswick to 11, and Prince Edward Island to two or three.

Being asked if a modification of the B.N.A. Act in such a sense as he had indicated would not open the door to a like demand on the part of Quebec, the surveyor general of New Brunswick admitted that it would. He said, in fact, that it was a very serious problem, and would have to be handled with very great prudence and care by the local and Federal statesmen.

The Italian Aviation Society will present Chavez, who crossed the Alps, with $10,000.

The steamers Montcalm and Crown Prince Olaf were in collision a short distance below Quebec, and both were damaged.

The cottage women of England are sending a petition to the Queen, asking that automobiles be forced to go slowly through villages.

Vigorous preparations are being made in New York State for the Republican and Democratic conventions at Saratoga and Rochester this week.

Premier Scott of Saskatchewan on Saturday denied that he was in conference with the C.N.R., as to the Hudson Bay line. He believes in Government ownership.

A London cable to a New York paper says the generalship dispayed in the British army manoeuvres was such that in actual warfare would have meant complete destruction to the army engaged.

Bourassa's Montreal paper, Le Devon, again assails Bishop Fallon of London for antagonism to bi-lingual teaching, and deplores Archbishop Gauthier's acceptance of the Ottawa See as tending to "split" the two provinces.

WERE BLOWN OUT TO SEA

Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., Sept. 26.—Sam Hogarth and W. V. Van Sycle, mining prospectors, returning Saturday from the district 50 miles north of Michipicoten, relate a terrible experience. Leaving Red Sucker Cove in a flat-bottomed boat Saturday night, intending to coast to Michipicoten River, they were caught in a 50-mile gale and blown out to sea. The boat overturned, and for five hours they clung to their craft, as it was tossed about Lake Superior.

Just as the sun rose Sunday morning they were washed by the waves upon the sands of Michipicoten Island, where they lay for an hour, unable to move, and where they were found by inhabitants, utterly exhausted. The men lost their personal property to the amount of $200, and all of the mineral specimens secured from a three months' prospecting trip.

GODERICH HAS TERRIBLE TALE OF MURDER AND MUTILATION

HOWITT IS NOMINATED

Young Lawyer is Conservative Candidate for Downey's Seat.

Guelph, Sept. 26.—Mr. J. Ransom Howitt, a young lawyer of this city, was given the Conservative nomination to contest the seat vacated in South Wellington by the retirement of Mr. J. P. Downey, by a plurality of 58 votes over the other nominees, Mr. J. J. Drew, K.C., and Mr. H. C. Scholfield, retired banker.

Mr. Drew felt the blow keenly, saying that after his work in the cause for years he felt the iron of ingratitude thrust deeply into his heart, but there it would remain, for he would never address another Conservative gathering.

The only promise of the successful candidate, who is a son of Dr. Henry Howitt, and thirty-two years of age, was that he would endeavor to get more stringent assignment laws, so that the workingmen would not have to wait until affairs were wholly wound up, referring especially to two local factories, Morlock's and Clemens'.

On Wednesday next the Liberals will hold their nomination meeting.

INTERNATIONAL CEMENT COMPANY

Spokane, Wash., Sept. 26.—The International Portland Cement Co., Ltd., with a stated capitalization of $3,000,000, half of which is in preferred stock, has been incorporated under the laws of the State of Washington, to erect an extensive plant near Spokane. The company has options on two mill sites east of here, where raw materials are abundant, and it is officially announced that a duplicate of the Irvin works at Ottawa, Ont., will be built there.

J. S. Irvin of Ottawa is to be president of the new corporation and among its permanent directors will be Rudolph Forget, M.P., C. A. Barnard, K.C., and W. Grant Morden of Montreal; John P. Hartman of Seattle, C. A. Irvin, secretary, Ottawa; D. P. McKinnon, Calgary, Alta.; S. G. Near of Toronto, and H. D. McKinnon of Spokane.

Will Tempt Rapids Friday.

Niagara Falls, Ont., Sept. 26.—Because his barrel could not be brought from the whirlpool, Bobby Leach did not repeat his trip through the whirlpool rapids yesterday. He will make another trip through on Friday.

STEAMER SUNK IN ST. CLAIR RIVER

Port Huron, Mich., Sept. 26.—The 7,000-ton steamer Dan H. Hanna, owned by the Pioneer Steamship Co. of Cleveland, was sunk in the St. Clair River in the Canadian channel opposite this city Saturday night. The Hanna, upbound with coal, collided with the Harvey H. Brown, and went to the bottom in shallow water. The Brown was badly damaged, but succeeded in docking.

Fly From Chicago to Springfield.

Chicago, Sept. 26.—Walter R. Brookins will attempt a flight with a Wright aeroplane from Chicago to Springfield, Ills., next Thursday, in an effort to win $10,000 offered by The Chicago Record-Herald for such a feat. The distance is 190 miles.

A Young Girl Brutally Slain.

Body of Elizabeth Anderson, Aged 16, is Found in Cellar of Deserted House.

Goderich, Sept. 26.—On Tuesday last, Eliabeth Anderson, a 16-year-old girl, disappeared from her home. Yesterday afternoon her mutilated body was found in the cellar of a deserted house on the outskirts of the town. Wesley Anderson, her father, was one of the party who discovered the body. They have been searching for her continuously since her disappearance.

Just who is the perpetrator of the dastardly deed is a mystery, the only clue being that it is remembered that on the day of her disappearance, she was seen in conversation with a strange man.

It was a gruesome sight which greeted the party of searchers, when they entered the open door of the cellar of the deserted house. In one corner lay the nude body of the girl, with the exception of shoes and stockings and one glove. Hat and clothing were scattered about the floor. The body was a terrible sight to look at. The throat was cut from ear to ear, the wound having the appearance of being done with an axe or similar instrument.

The provincial police have been notified and will help the local police in an effort to locate the murderer. They consider the chances of bringing the guilty person to justice very slim.

One story states that she was last seen in company with an Italian that works on the Ontario West Shore Railway. Her father lives in the old Lasham Hotel at Saltford, and a number of Italians occupy part of the hotel as a boarding house.

An inquest will be held to-day.

THROUGH THE LOWER RAPIDS

Niagara Falls, Ont., Sept. 26.—William Hill last night navigated the lower rapids in the barrel in which Bobby Leach went through the whirlpool rapids Saturday, to win a small wager. Hill was badly bruised, but not seriously injured.

This is the first time that the lower rapids have been navigated in a barrel. Nissen made the trip in the Foolkiller, Larsen did in the motor boat Ferro.

After securely tying Leach's barrel at the whirlpool, so that it might be brought back up the river, Hill was offered a two-dollar bet by a bystander that he could not make the trip through the lower rapids to Lewiston in the barrel. He took up the offer and made the trip successfully in an hour and seven minutes. For twenty-five minutes Hill was held in an eddy, less than a half mile below the whirlpool.

The distance between the pool and Lewiston is over four miles. It was dark when Hill was picked up at Lewiston by a motor boat.

Band at Armouries

The band of the 57th Regiment will parade at the armories to-night at 7.45.

MICHAEL WAS A YOUNG LADY

New York, Sept. 26.—Early every morning for six months past the industrious young assistant whom Undertaker Ciangrasso employed at work in his office and the stables in the rear at 169 Sullivan street, has answered the telephones and received the weeping Italians who needed Ciangrasso's services at their homes. When there wasn't office work to do the assistant, good looking and slight of figure, washed the hearse and carriages and lent a small hand at hitching up the horses.

Therefore, Saturday night, when the undertaker learned that his man of all work, "Michele Desposito," as Ciangrasso knew his good-looking helper in the dark trousers, negligee shirt and dark soft hat with a red band, wasn't a man at all, but an Italian girl, Maria Carpita, the undertaker received the news with eyes opened wide with amazement.

A FINISHED CORNETIST

Last night the evensong in St. John's church was fully choral. The large choir sang the service splendidly. Mr James F. Knox, who spent Sunday in the city, played the cornet throughout, and with Mr. R. J. Devey on the organ, performed Rubenstein's "Melody in F" during the offertory, also several selections at the end of the service. Mr. Knox is the New York representative of the famous English firm of band instrument makers, Boosey & Co., and his playing was much enjoyed, the great features of which were the purity of tone and delicate shading.

GUESSING AT THE COST

At the Board of Works meeting on Friday night there was considerable discussion with regard to the proposition of street paving, and it was pointed out that no municipality that had introduced paving would willingly go back to the condition that prevailed before. That is quite true No place using electric light for public lightning would care to resume use of gas.

While there was discussion as to the advisability of paving, there was no definite statement of the cost to the ratepayer as an individual. The bulk sum of $75,000 was mentioned as required to cover the outlay. This it was proposed—as is done in other places—to pay off in ten years, raising the money in the first instance by debentures, these to be retired by a rate on the properties benefitted, and by a general rate in the proportion of 60 per cent. and 40 per cent. In Lindsay the pavement is costing about $2.50 cents per square yard. Assuming that the excavation of the street in Peterborough would be more laborious than at Lindsay, and possibly more of it, put the cost at $3.00 per yard. The average George street frontage may be taken as 24 feet for a double window store. Of the width of the street—66 ft.—20 ft. is already served by the pavement already laid. Of the balance, 46 ft., roughly speaking, one-third would be paid for by the street railway and two-thirds by the property interested and by a general rate proportioned as noted above. It is understood that the railway will double track George street, and as it pays for the pavement between the rails, a space of about 14 ft. will be covered. From the sidewalks to the rails on each side of the street will fall to the property. In the case of the average frontage referred to the area of pavement to be paid for will be about 43 square yards, which at $3.00 per yard amounts to $129.00. Of this sum three-fifths will fall on the property and two-fifths on the general rate. The assessment on the property would be about $8.00 per store for 10 years, and also a share of the general rate.

It will be recollected that of the distance proposed to be paved—McDonnel to the C.P.R. track, and along Charlotte from George to Bethune, ten crossings of streets will be charged up to the general rate, less the proportion assumed by the Street Railway—double track on George street, single track on Charlotte, amounting to about 2,600 square yards, and as well the frontage along Central Park and any public buildings. So that a proportion of this will fall to the property benefitted, as well as the responsibility for the special rate. It is probable that the yearly cost to property will average, in the case of a 24 ft. frontage, about $10.00 per year for ten years.

No doubt the Board of Works will lay before the ratepayers a detailed estimate. It should be done as speedily as possible. In the absence of information a prejudice against the scheme will grow and widen. There is one item that might be credited as an asset, and is worth being considered. The streets will have to be excavated for the depth of at least one foot below the present grade to allow of the concrete base, or foundation being laid. This will uncover a large quantity of broken stone, which could be freed from fine dirt and soil and used to advantage in making and repairing other streets. At present prices for broken stone a considerable sum, running into some thousands of dollars, could be saved to the city.

THAT CAMPAIGN

The Y.M.C.A. campaign is booming More power to it. Anything worth while costs effort, and the effort put forth by the Y.M.C.A. is much worth while.

A MONOCLE

There's a man in town wearing a monocle!

A monocle is such a rarity in these parts that it's a real curiosity and in fact a great many fairly intelligent people probably never heard of a monocle before.

No he's not appearing in vaudeville.

LOOKED FUNNY

At the Havelock inquest some of the spectators, and those who went down on the train with Sheriff Hall, commented on the fact that Hugh Deline had little to say, and remarked that he looked funny. Any man looks funny with handcuffs on, and take an angel from heaven and arrest him and he would look stranger. This is without prejudice.

THE GARBAGE—THE BALD MAN—THE FLY

"Oh, for the Good Old Summer Days," sang a fly, as he tickled the bald man's head. "Hear, hear," said the Bluebottle, as he sat in the sugar bowl. "The Board of Health have been good to us," said the maggot. "The Board of Health have been good to us," sang they all. And who can deny!

THAT HATELOCK MURDER

In Havelock there are the usual number of people who know all about the murder. They know the motive, the reason why Deline was so long in giving warning. They know it all However, they are not lonely, there is always the man who knows it all and the person who says, "I told you so." There is probably just one person in the world who knows it all in regard to this murder case—that is the murderer. There is another one that did know about it. That person is dead—she is the murdered one.

A NEW MAGAZINE

There is a new magazine. A new book comes out somewhere in the world about once a day, but when a magazine starts that is something worth while to notice. It may or not be called for, it may or may not fill the long felt want. It is called The Dominion, and volume one, number one, announces that it will be a monthly compendium of Canadian progress. The color of the publication is canary yellow, but it cannot be noticed that any of the contents are. The publication is for the purpose of boosting the West and Winnipeg. It is published in Winnipeg.

THE CALL

Melba, the song queen, was paid $12,000 for one concert in Sydney Australia, which shows the wonderful ease with which she can take the high notes.—Vancouver Province.

This is one of the good things in the paragraph line that are daily being turned out by W. C. Nichol, editor of the Vancouver Province. The Province of Tuesday comes to this office with fifty-six pages. It is one of the best papers in the west. We pat Mr. Nichol on his dome of thought for his foresight in going to Vancouver when the prospects were not pleasing and man was vile. "Go west, young man." Mr. Nichol heard the call. It was his opportunity. Opportunity is calling in many a man's ear in Peterborough. Listen, take the stuffing out of your ears, and you will hear it.

MONEY AND MAN

Midland, Ont., Sept. 24.—To-day Dr. Arthur G. Johnson and Dr. J. M. Cotton arrived here from Toronto and will visit the home of Michael Fraser for the purpose of again examining him as to his sanity, a step preliminary to the trial at Barrie next week, in which a cousin, Catharine McCormack, seeks to have him declared insane, an echo of proceedings taken some months ago to annul his marriage to Hannah Robertson, of Dundas. The medical experts were met by W. H. Bennett, K.C., and will take a stenographer along with them, though it is doubtful if the scribes will be admitted.

Michael Fraser is worth $80,000. He is an old man over 80. If he was poor his relatives would be glad to get rid of him. He is rich and they love him and take an interest in him and his money. However, there have been married men who have been married men who have been fathers at 80, 90 and 95 years. Give him a chance to be happy in his old age.

IMPROVEMENT

Many a man has been deterred from making an improvement to his premises for fear that the local assessor would at once call around and add something to the assessed value. He generally does this to stave off criticism, should he not do it.

A Lindsay hardwareman solicited an order for paint from a local manufacturer to be used in painting his tannery.

"Not a dollar will I spend on paint until I am given assurance that my assessment will not be increased as a result of the improvement. There should be no tax on industry," replied the manufacturer, who is a man of ideas and determination.

And while the manufacturer undoubtedly took an extreme view of the matter there can be no doubt of the logic of his position.

A tax on improvements retards progress and hardwaremen, whose business depends upon the progress and development of the community in which they are located, should take the leadership in the advocacy of a revision of the laws governing taxation.

ABOUT WINDSOR

Any who hold to the belief — and there be such—that power is not a vital factor in the location of new industries may pay attention to Windsor, Ont. Now that it is settled that the city may be served with Hydro-Electric current, in a block of 15,000 h.p. at $28 per h.p., the city papers are jubilant, and anticipate for Windsor a boom in manufacturing. Windsor was one place that stood aloof from the rest, but had to come to it. It is understood that an amount of power, unused in Windsor, will be sold to users in Detroit, but it is provided that the profit on the transaction will revent to the hydro-electric scheme interests, and eventually lessen the cost to places using it along the line. In Windsor's congratulations at getting the power, and possible extension there is no thought of transportation—said to be the largest factor in locating industries. Power is what the city is building on.

SIDE LIGHTS

IT TAKES SO LITTLE.

Sault Ste. Marie Express.

It takes so little to make us sad,
Just a slighting word or a doubting
Just a scornful smile on some lips held dear;
And our footsteps lag, though the goal seemed near,
And we lost the courage and hope we had—
So little it takes to make us sad.

It takes so little to make us glad,
Just a cheering clasp of a friendly hand,
Just a word from one who can understand;
And we finish the task we long had planned,
And we lost the doubt and the fear we had—
So little it takes to make us glad.

TYPHOID AND VACCINATION

New York Tribune: The month of September is the worst in the year for typhoid. Just now there are twice as many cases of it in all the cities as at any other season. This is because the summer vacationists have returned from the country, have brought the rural disease with them, and have spread it to others. It is ever so in the fall, and every health department knows whence the disease comes.

In the last eighteen months twelve thousand men of Uncle Sam's army have been vaccinated for typhoid fever. Of those twelve thousand, only three men have since been attacked by the dreaded scourge, and these slightly. There has not bee na death from the disease in the whole number. In every other block of the army containing twelve thousand men there have been seventy-two cases of typhoid in the same time, and seven deaths. In the fifty thousand unvaccinate there have been three hundred cases and thirty deaths.

YOUTH AND BEAUTY

Women and Men are Anxious to Keep Young

Nothing so detracts from the attractiveness of woman as dull faded, lusterless hair.

There is no excuse for this condition nowadays, because notice is hereby given to the readers of the Review, that Parisian Sage, the quick acting hair restorer, is now on sale in Peterborough, at the drug store of Wm. Madill, and sold with a guarantee at 50 cents a large bottle.

Since its introduction into Canada, Parisian Sage has had an immense sale, and here are the reasons:

It is safe and harmless.

It removes dandruff in two weeks, by killing the dandruff germ

It stops falling hair.

It promptly stops itching of the scalp.

It makes the hair soft, glossy, and luxuriant.

It gives life and beauty to the hair.

It is not sticky or greasy.

It is the daintiest perfumed hair tonic made.

It is the best, the most pleasant and invigorating hair dressing made.

Fight shy of the druggist who offers you a subtitute, he is unworthy of your confidence.

Made only in Canada by Giroux Mfg. Co., Fort Erie, Ont. The girl with the Auburn hair is on every bottle.

The Round-Up

A Romance of Arizona

Novelized From Edmund Day's Melodrama

By JOHN MURRAY and MILLS MILLER

Copyright, 1908, by G. W. Dillingham Co.

Jack, well mounted, with a pack mule carrying supplies, had picked up Dick's trail after it left Tularosa from a scout out of Fort Grant.

Slim Hoover headed for Fort Grant in his search for Jack. Although the ranchman had only a brief start of him, Slim lost the track at the river ford. Knowing Dick had gone into the desert, Jack headed eastward, while Slim, supposing that Jack was breaking for the border to escape into a foreign country, turned southward.

From the scout who had met Jack and Dick the sheriff learned that the two men were headed for the lava beds, which were occupied by hostile Apaches.

Detachments of the Third cavalry were stationed at the fort, with Colonel Hardie in command of the famous F troop, a band of Indian fighters never equaled.

In turn they chased Cochise, Victoria and Geronimo with their Apache warriors up and down and across the Rio Grande. Hard pressed, each chieftain in turn would flee with his band first to the lava beds and then across the border into Mexico, where the United States soldiers could not follow. Hardie fooled Victoria, however. Texas rangers had met the Apache chief in an engagement on the banks of the Rio Grande. Only eight Americans returned from the encounter. Hardie took up his pursuit and followed Victoria across the river. The Indians had relaxed their vigilance, not expecting pursuit and despising the Mexican rurales. Troop F caught them off guard in the mountains. The fight was one to extermination. Victoria and his entire band were slain.

This was the troop which was awaiting orders to go after the Apaches.

Colonel Hardie told Slim that the Indians were bound to head for the lava beds. If the men for whom he was looking were in the desert the troop would find them more quickly than Slim and his posse.

Slim waited at Fort Grant for orders, writing back to Sagebrush telling him of his plans.

Fort Grant followed the usual plan of all frontier posts. A row of officers' houses faced the parade grounds. Directly opposite were the cavalry barracks fort. On one side of the quadrangle were the stables, and the fourth line consisted of the quartermaster's buildings and the post trader's store. Small ranchmen had gathered near the fort for protection and because of the desire of the white man for company. In days of peace garrison life was monotonous. But the Apaches needed constant watching.

As a soldier the Apache was cruel and cowardly. He fought dismounted, never making an attack unless at his own advantage. As infantryman he was unequaled. Veteran army officers adopted the Apache tactics and installed in the army the plan of mounted infantry, soldiers who move on horseback, but fight on foot, detailing one man of every four to guard the horses.

Mounted on wiry ponies inured to hardships, to picking up a living on the scanty herbage of the plains, riding without saddles and carrying no equipment, the Indians had little trouble in avoiding the soldiers. Leaving the reservation, the Apaches would commit some outrage and then, swinging on the arc of a great circle, would be back to camp and settled long before the soldiers could overtake them. Hampered by orders from the war department, which in turn was molested by the sentimental friends of the Indians, the soldiers never succeeded in taming the Apache until Crook cut off communications and thrashed them so thoroughly in these same lava beds that they never recovered.

In Slim's absence Buck McKee and his gang had taken possession of Pinal county. Rustlers and bad men were coming in from Texas and the strip. Slim's election for another term was by no means certain. He did not know this, but if he had it would not have made any difference to him. He was after Jack and at any cost would bring him back to face trial. The rogues of Pinal county seized upon the flight of Jack as a good excuse to down Slim. The sheriff was more eager to find Jack and learn from him that Buck's charge was false than to take him prisoner. He knew the accusation would not stand full investigation.

Slowly the hours passed until the order for "boots and saddles" was sounded and the troops trotted out of the fort gate. Scouts soon picked up their trail, but that was different from finding the Indians. Ofttimes the troopers would ride into a hastily abandoned camp with the ashes still warm, but never a sight of a warrior could be had. Over broad mesas, down narrow mountain trails and up canyons so deep that the sun never fully penetrated them the soldiers followed the renegades.

For a day the trail was lost. Then it was picked up by the print of a pony's hoof beside a water hole. But always the line of flight led toward an Apache spring in the lava beds.

Slim and his posse took their commands from the officers of the pursuers. The cowpunchers gave them much assistance as scouts, knowing the country through which the Indians fled. Keeping in touch with the main command, they rode ahead to protect it from any surprise. The chief Indian scout got so far ahead at one time in the chase that he was not seen for two days. Once, by lying flat on his belly, shading his eyes with his hands and gazing intently at a mountain side so far ahead that the soldiers could scarcely discern it, he declared he had seen the fugitives climb the trail. The feat seemed impossible until the second morning after, when the scout pointed out to the colonel the pony tracks up the mountain side. The Apache scouts kept track of the soldiers' movements, communicating with the main body with blanket signals and smoke columns.

Blanket signals.

The sign language of the Indians of the southwest is an interesting field of study. On the occasion of a raid like the one described the warriors who were to participate would gather at one point and construct a mound with as many stones in it as there were warriors. Then they would scatter into small bands. When any band returned to the mound after losing a fight and the others were not there the leader would take from the mound as many stones as he had lost warriors. Thus the other bands, on returning, could tell just how many men had fallen.

LADIES' WAIST.

All Seams Allowed.

The waist pictured above is one of our newest models, and a very pretty one it is. The effect over the shoulder is that of body and sleeve cut in one, but it is only a small portion of the body that is cut with the sleeve. The waist closes in the back, and the backs are perfectly plain, the sleeve section and the lower part of the front lapping on the backs, and the upper part of the front lapping on the yoke. The fullness is gathered into a peplum. The lower part of the sleeves has two tucks, and sewed to the upper one is an undersleeve of allover tucking. The waist is made without collar, which is a very popular style. This waist may be made of silk or satin, or velveteen would make up splendidly with the yoke of allover lace or braided with soutache; also the space between the tucks on the upper sleeve portion may be braided to match. The pattern (5159) is cut in sizes 32 to 42 inches bust measure. To make the waist in medium size will require 2¾ yards of material 24 inches wide, 2 yards 36 inches wide, or 1⅝ yards 44 inches wide, with ⅞ yard of allover tucking 18 inches wide.

The above pattern can be obtained by sending 10 cents to the office of this paper.

The Beatrice, B.C, silver-lead mine, one of the leading mines of the Lardeau district, will resume work on a large scale recently.

The Grand River Country Club, at Bridgeport, Ont., will be opened shortly. It cost $13,000.

RACES AT LINDSAY FAIR

The following are Friday's races:

The feature of the afternoon was the excellent racing events pulled off. Two excellent races, the green race, and 2.22 were on the card, and they afforded plenty of excitement. Dr. Gilchrist, of Cannington, was the starter, and he handled the events in a capable manner, although he had some trouble in getting the horses off in the 2.22 event. The first race pulled off was the green race, and this attracted a quartette of fast ones. The race wsa a contest between Curtis' Sadie Mac, and McGee's Teeney C. In the first two heats, Sadie Mac won out in both by a close margin. In the final heat Sadie crossed the wire first and Norma Lee, of Toronto, came second. The summary is as follows:—

GREEN RACE

Red Wing, Leith, Millbrook	4	4	3
Sadie Mac, Curtis, Lindsay	1	1	1
Teeney C., McGee, Omemee	2	2	4
Norma Lee, Hazelwood, Toronto	3	3	2

A SPLENDID RACE

The starter had some difficulty in getting the sextette entered for this event off to a good start. However, when the word was given to "go" the crowd witnessed a pretty speeding contest in which McDowell's Planet Jones' Patterson and Ashmore's Lou Keswick scintillated. The heat was won in fine style by Planet.

In the next heat the horses got off to a fairly good start, but when rounding the first turn on the track Broad's Dr. Mac and Lou Keswick both went down, Charlie O'Neil driver of Keswick, was slightly injured, and finished in fifth place. Dr. Mac was taken out for the race for the day. This was Planet's heat, with Furioso, of Toronto, second. The third heat was a sight to behold. The horses raced magnificently all through, but Planet had the heat well in hand and crossed the wire with Furioso in second place. The summary was as follows:

Lou Keswick, Ashmore, Lindsay	3	5	4
Planet, McDowell, Toronto	1	1	1
Patterson, Jones, Peterboro	2	3	3
Furioso, Parks, Sutton	6	2	2
Dr. Mac, Broad, Lindsay	5	x	x
Ned Wilkes, Fanning, Lindsay	4	4	5

Time—2.24 1-4, 2.24 1-2, 2.24 1-4.—Lindsay Post.

BRIEF AND BREEZY

Fielder Jones who piloted the Chicago White Sox to the world's championship in 1906, will be seen in a Chicago uniform again next year. Jones has received the offer from Owner Comiskey which the great centre fielder could hardly refuse. The White Sox's poor showing this year led Comiskey to offer Jones the enormous salary of $20,000 and also 10 per cent of the club's profits to become playing manager. This, the fielder figures, will net him the round sum of $35,000. This is probably the biggest price ever offered to a playing manager.

Bourbon Brook won the free-for-all at the Stirling Fair on Friday in three straight heats. Tom Tariff was third.

The Toronto and Buffalo Eastern League teams disbanded at Toronto, Saturday. The double-header called for the afternoon was called off as a result of the rain.

Alex. Cameron, Central Y. M. C. A., Toronto, won the pole vault event in the championship games at Montreal, Saturday. The Canadian record is 12ft. 5in. Cameron went 11ft. 9in.

Two thousand spectators watched Abbie Wood, defeat Fred. Cameron in a ten mile race at Montreal, Saturday.

Westminster scored eleven goals and Nationals one in the second and last game of the Minto Cup series. Newsy Lalonde did not play for the challengers, he being in the hospital suffering from blood poisoning.

Manager Dunn, of the Baltimore Ball Club has been presented with a $500 silver service.

Date—Saturday, Sept. 24, 1910.
Business—Rugby meeting.
Present—Sporting editors, Review and Examiner; Ford Turner, Garnet Rankin.
Result— ....

Ken Crane, Hugh Burritt and Fred. Denison, gone. Those prospects for a winning Junior O. H. A. team are due for a change. Tough luck!

The first team of the Collegiate Institute will play the T. C. S. of Port Hope, here, Saturday afternoon.

RUGBY

Whither are we drifting.

The rugby meeting called for Saturday night at the Armouries did not pan out the success as was hoped for. The attendance reached the high mark of four and by an unanimous vote, it was decided that no business be proceeded with and that the meeting adjourn to take in a moving picture show.

Seymour Collings, who will be remembered as a late physical director of the local Y.M.C.A., is coming into prominence as a rugby player. Last season he was played at scrimmage for the Springfield, Mass., Training School first team, and this year he is slated for a position on the back division.

Collings was in Toronto last week on his return from the north country, where he was one of a prospecting party.

HOCKEY

Another gap is made in the athletic forces of this city in the removal of Fred. Denison to Port Hope. "Denny" left at noon to continue his studies at Trinity College School. In all branches of sport Fred. has made good, and the hockey game, in which he did stellar work last winter will miss his services this season.

MACK LOOKS FOR FIRST GAME

Chicago, Sept. 24.—"The club that gets the jump on the other by winning the first game will probably carry off the championship," said Connie Mack, leader of the Philadelphia Athletics, here to-day, while discussing the world's series with the Cubs. It was the first direct committal of the taciturn manager. Mack refused to state what his opinion of the probable outcome of the battle would be, merely declaring that he is "always condident."

The Philadelphia boss declared he is going to do all in his power to have the opening game staged in his own park, as he figures that would give him an edge over his Chicago rivals.

THE CAR TO BUY

Russell-Knight

The Car Noted for its Great Power, Flexibility, Quietness and Endurance

Russell-Knight 1911 Models: 22, 26 and 38 H.P.

CRITICS CONFOUNDED

Interested critics said a year ago: "Do not buy a Knight motor, it is an experiment—in a year or two it may be all right."

Partly this is true—the Knight engine will be improved. Quite frankly we venture to hope that each Knight engine and each Russell car we make will be better than the one before. We believe that our 1914 cars will be better than those of to-day.

But this is the fact that must be borne in mind:—

The Knight engine built in its first year, by the first firm building it in a commercial way, under official observation, put up a performance which no valve motor made by any firm after years of experience has been able to equal.

Is not this conclusive proof of Knight superiority?

Then consider that since that time the engineering skill of five of the leading engineering firms of the world have worked for the improvement of the motor, and have been aided by the experience of over 2,000 users.

To-day the Knight motor stands on its record in all quarters of the globe as a tested, tried-out product of superlative excellence.

In the 1911 Russell "38" you get the culmination of this work in engine design.

TO ASSIST THE CHIMES FUND

The senior girls' Bible class of St. John's Sunday school intend holding a bazaar and sale of fancy and useful articles which they have themselves made, together with refreshments, candies, etc., in the guild room of the school on Friday of this week, from four to six o'clock in the afternoon, and opening again at eight in the evening, in aid of the chimes fund. This is the young ladies' own idea, and they hope that their efforts will receive proper appreciation from the members of the congregation and others who wish to assist in this worthy cause. Refreshments will be served and a musical programme rendered. There will be no admission fee, but the young ladies wish to impress upon their friends not to forget to bring their purses, as they have something unusual to offer them.

AN AGGRESSIVE CAMPAIGN

And One That is Bringing Results — C. G. E.'s Strong Support to Y. M. C. A. Membership Rally -- Appreciative Letters

Have you been interviewed yet by the Y.M.C.A. men? If you have not, you are one of a very small number of citizens. These campaigners are right on their job, and if the 500 new members are not secured it will not be the fault of the leaders. No part of the city is making a better showing than the Canadian General Electric Co. The men who have that section of the city under their care are doing everything in their power to get every man who works in the C.G.E. to become a member of the Y.M.C.A. This is as it ought to be, for the association is particularly adapted to meet the needs of the industrial workers. Already there are in the local Y.M.C.A. almost one hundred members who are employed in the C.G.E. and a special effort will be put forth to make the association of great advantage to these men. Already classes are being organized with the needs of these men in view, and there are others yet to be formed.

The Quaker Oats Co. has contributed its share of men. Mr. D. Downie is in charge of this mill, and he is ably assisted by J. C. Kingsborough, who is a tower of strength to the campaign. Mr. Hall is still working hard on the business section, and he has added quite a grist of new men. Probably no single worker, however, has added as many men and boys as has Dr. J. E. Middleton. He is sacrificing large blocks of his time to this campaign, and is hustling others to get to work. The thermometer is not yet in place, but will be put up to-day to show the standing of the membership.

Another letter has been received by the president from a well known local clergyman, assuring the association of his fellowship in the effort to extend the membership and enclosing a contribution. Coming as these letters do, entirely unsolicited, they are the source of great encouragement to the officers and workers.

CHIMES FUND IS SWELLING

Wide encouragement and support is being given daily to the chimes fund, and if this continues Peterborough will be assured of magnificent bells. A kind out-of-town donation has been received from Miss Grace E. Crowe, of Brantford. The employees of the Examiner have subscribed in a body, and their interest, as well as that of their fellow printers in the Review, is warmly appreciated.

No less than seventy girls belonging to the Quaker Oats Co.'s big factory have become subscribers, which means seventy more valuable pushes towards the coming of Peterborough's big bells. This is certainly a remarkable demonstration of interest and generosity, and the grateful thanks of the committee are offered to these girls, and to all the other employees who have given such splendid support.

Several kind individual subscriptions have been received during the past two days, and the list at noon to-day stood at $4,386.

HIS SERVICES IN HIS WORK IN SUNDAY SCHOOL APPRECIATED

Mr. W. E. McCann, the retiring choir leader and organist of George street church, was again honored yesterday, when he was the recipient of an address from the Sunday school. The splendid tributes which are embodied in the words of the address may well assure him that his faithful, earnest and consecrated work in all matters pertaining to the church and its organizations, have not passed by unrecognized. Mr. McCann will carry with him to Toronto the most sincere wishes for a most prosperous future both in the field of music and in whatever other direction he devotes his energy. He leaves to-morrow.

The following is the address which was read by the secretary of the Sunday school Mr. Ray P. Best.

Peterborough, Sept. 25th, 1910

W. E McCann, Esq.:

Dear Sir,—The George street Methodist Sunday school wishes to express to you the regret felt by the whole school that you are leaving us. We have appreciated highly the zeal with which you have conducted the singing in the school. Your faithfulness in regular attendance, and the spirit you have manifested, combined with your ability as a chorister, have been of great value, and have not only benefitted the singing, but have added to the spirit of devotion and aided the whole work of the school.

You have also aided the school in other ways in addition to conducting the singing, and your work as a teacher, and your advice and assistance in the general work of the school have been valuable.

In common with the other departments of the church we have have appreciated your fine Christian character and have felt the influence of of your whole-hearted devotion to the Master and His cause, which have been an example and an inspiration to all who have been associated with you.

We sincerely regret that you are leaving, and that we will lose your services and companionship in the work, and we hope that you will always be successful in your profession and pray that the blessing of God will always rest upon you.

Signed on behalf of the school.

S. R. ARMSTRONG,
Superintendent.
R. P BEST,
Associate Superintendent.
A. N SCARROW,
Secretary.

A MESSAGE TO PROTESTANTS

Rev. J. R. Webb Says Recent Demonstration in Montrea is One of the Greatest Contributions to Spread of Evangelical Religion that World Has Seen

"A message to Protestants" was the subject of an eloquent and convincing sermon by Rev. J R. Webb at the Murray street Baptist church last night.

He took his text from John 14, 6: "No man cometh unto the Father but by Me."

Among other things he said that the recent spectacular demonstration of Rome in the city of Montreal can have but one result. It has been one of the greatest contributions to the spread of evangelical religion that this continent has seen. Not that it was intended as such, but the emphasizing of error always makes for the advance of truth when such emphasis is made among educated people.

The 20th century and the American continent are the time and place for the best demonstration of that principle. The persecution of the early church was like pouring water on flaming oil. It sent those who were in one place into many places preaching the Word. So it will be with the attempt to destroy evangelical progress. Men will hear these great questions discussed and will examine certain matters, which might not have been pressed upon them but for this propaganda.

When the appeal is to the emotions only, and the teaching will not bear the light of reason and revelation, there will be but one outcome.

The Eucharistic Congress was the desperate attempt of a trembling church to save on this continent a system which cannot endure where the policy of the nation is the education and liberty of the people.

Proceeding to discuss the text, Mr. Webb asked the three following questions, and examined them in the light of reason and revelation:

In my approach to God do I need the intercession of Saints?

In my confession to God do I need the ear of a priest?

In my vows to God do I need the intervention of a parent?

I have no patience, said the speaker, with the publication by Protestants of tirades against the Roman Catholic Church, and when efforts are made to call us all into that church, the hierarchy is consistent, and therefore, will not object to our examination of their own publications which suggest dangers in the confessional. Mr. Webb quoted from the Moral Theology of Peter Dens and Bishop Kendricks in this connection.

Man does not need a priest, and that need is written deep in his soul, and the fidelity of men to a church which has denied them liberty of conscience and has imposed such burdens upon them proves that need, but Jesus Christ declared Himself the great High Priest and the last priest when He said: "No man cometh unto the Father but by Me."

What an immense amount of persecution, division and controversy would have been saved if at the time of the reformation the protest had been made complete and all the errors into which the church had fallen had been corrected and the Bible made the only rule of faith and practice.

SOMETHING ABOUT THE FINEST MILITARY BAND IN EMPIRE

Mr. James F. Knox, of the New York office of Boosey & Co., the largest music firm in the British Empire, has a high opinion of the bands of Ontario. He is in Peterborough at resent in the interests of his firm, having left New York some time ago, and has been on an extensive visit to the militia bands of the province. While it is not to be expected that these could approach the standard of the old country military bands Mr. Knox paid a great tribute to the work done by the bandmasters of the province and pronounces the combining in the efforts and instrumentation of the Ontario bands being much superior to that of the American military bands.

The firm which Mr. Knox represents as a standard organization wherever music is played. It combines the publication of high grade popular songs, works of the masters, operas of musical work, and also makes band instruments of every description. Boosey's military band journal of music is suplied to every band in the British service and also to the bands in the colonies.

Most of the bands which came here from England used Boosey instruments and the Irish Guards have used them exclusively ever since the inception of the band twelve or thirteen years ago.

THE PET BAND OF THE SERVICE.

Mr. Knox stated to the Review that the Grenadies Guards' band, which recently made such an impression at the National Exhibition at Toronto is the best of his Majesty's household bands and the pet band of the British service. The members of the band are the pick of the men who have become exceptionally good players in the line bands or even in the other bands of the Royal household. To be chosen for the Grenadiers is the highest honor for any bandsmen in the service.

On the Grenadier Guards coming to the colonies to fill an engagement such as their recent one in Toronto, it is necesasry for the band to obtain permission from the King, but on the departure of the band there are always sufficient bandsmen left behind to fulfill regimental duties.

PLAYED ONLY TWICE OUTSIDE EMPIRE.

The only occasion on which the Grenadier Guards have played in foreign countries were in 1871, when they visited the great festival in Boston under the direction of the late Dan Godfrey and on the special invitation of the United States Government to visit the World's Fair at St. Louis in 1904, the band then being under the leadership of its present director, Dr. Williams. It may be mentioned here that the director of the Guards is the first British Army bandmaster to obtain the degree of Doctor of Music.

The Guards always take the leading part in a musical sense in state festivals and their performance in connection with the changing of the guard at Crystal Palace is one of the continuous attractions of London.

The bandsmen mostly live in civilian quarters and in their spare time are in great demand for the best theatre work in London.

Mr. Knox heard the band play in Toronto and said that the notable features of their performances there were refinement of tone both in military actions and playing.

Mr. Knox's trip of Canada in the interests of his firm will be a most comprehensive one. He will visit every town from coast to coast where militia bands are stationed and will open a branch office of the firm in Vancouver.

While here he was a guest at the National Hotel.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

The Review does not hold itself responsible for opinions expressed by its correspondents

To the Editor of the Review.

Sir,—The following letter from Father McColl explains itself. Does the reverend gentleman expect non-Catholics to aid Catholicism, while he says that Protestantism is not to be encouraged? How can he expect us to help him? I notice he ends up with the offer of an advertisement for benefactors. This is not an ideal position or likely to elevate the T.A.S. to any very high standard. I think he is inconsistent.

Yours,
FAIR PLAY.

Peterborough, Sept. 26, 1910.

Dear Sir,—Eleven years ago St. Peter's Total Abseinence Society was established in Peterborough. It has grown so rapidly that at present we have over one thousand members.

In order to save men and boys from the evils arising from drink we found it necessary to purchase club rooms, whose comfortable surroundings would attract them and furnish a place to meet their friends, and thus prevent them from going to bar-rooms for that purpose. Last February we procured such rooms, and furnished them with a library, gymnasium, etc., which you can readily understand, cost a considerable sum of money, in fact several thousand dollars more than the original estimate.

These rooms are now filled every night with men who are educating themselves by the reading of books well chosen to accomplish that end, who are posting themselves on the questions of the day by the perusal of newspapers and magaziens, or are amusing themselves with harmless games.

But, as these men are poor, it will impede our work if we burden them too heavily financially, and in order to avoid that danger we are appealing to people who we believe can help us, and are willing to assist such a work of philanthrophy. We are convinced you are in sympathy with our efforts to raise the fallen and to safeguard the young. If you extend to us a helping hand we shall enroll you as an associate member of our club rooms, we shall be most grateful for your kind assistance, and shall place your name before our members as that of a kind friend and generous benefactor.

Sincerrely yours,
H. J. McCOLL,
Spiritual Adviser,
St. Peter's T.A.S.,
Peterborough.

Peterborough, Sept. 6, 1910.

(To The Editor of The Review.)

Sir—My letter was not argument and it could not be aubsive for it was not half strong enough. You are either deceptive or foolish. If I was paid to write or a professional religionist, or blasphemous, or indecent performer at your theatres, you would laugh and applaud. In your paper I often read stronger language than I used, and the common language of your youths is too foul to write. You welcome your wealthy fenians who visit your aristocratic shores but I, having been ten years a prisoner in England, you rob, insult and ill-treat. My object has been not to argue, but to warn against the murderous conspiracy that is destroying the people.

EDUCATION OF THE YOUNG

Much Secular Instruction But Insufficient Religious Teaching Says Rev. Robt. Pogue—The Hero Children Should Worship — Force of Prayer and Example.

The various means which can be employed to bring the religious education of the boys and girls to a high and worthy standard, formed the basis of Rev. Robt. Pogue's remarks in a thoughtful, earnest exhortation at St. Paul's church Sunday morning.

Ephesians, 6;4, says "And ye fathers provoke not your children to wrath, but bring them up in the nurture and admonition of the Lord."

The words nurture and admonition were very familiar to the ancient Greeks. Their plans were admirably suited to develop mind and body, but they failed to enable a man to realize his full life. It informed the mind but not the will. Coming down through the ages, it was to meet this defect that the Sunday school was organized. We spend vast sums on secular education, but practically nothing in comparison for religious education.

INADEQUATE INSTRUCTION

The half hour spent by the average Sunday school scholar on Sunday is totally inadequate. It mus tbe supplemented by the parents. One distinguished professor expressed the hope that more religious education might be manifested in our schools. Five or six of the most devoted educators of the land are lending themselves to religious instruction.

CHILDREN ARE HERO WORSHIPPERS.

Then, there are many reasons why we should feel encouraged to go on with this work. It is a work that dear to the heart of the Master. He loved the children. There is the quick response which children make when rightly instructed. If instructed correctly children will learn to love and obey the Saviour as they would their parents. Most important of all is the fact that children are hero worshippers, and they try to form their lives according to the ideal of their hero. The child gives unconscious expression to it. Children should be taught and told stories of heroic deeds, and what hero can, in a child's life or any life, supersede Jesus of Nazareth. Our duty is to see that the child has imparted to him the story of Jesus Christ in such a form that he will open to receive it, as a rosebud will open to receive the sunshine.

EARLY CONVERSIONS.

A vast proportion of those who have united with the church did so in the years of their childhood. Statistics show that in every case where examination and investigation was made, over half joined the church in childhood, between the ages of twelve and twenty. No explanation for this is necessary. The conscience in those childhood years is tender. Though, as is often the case, the child may, like the prodigal, wander away from the path of rectitude, he will ultimately be led back to God.

THE INFLUENCE OF PRAYER.

Systematic instruction of the word of God is necessary. One hour a week is inadequate. Children should be taught to read and pray around the family altar, "and God help the home where the altar is lacking." Every child should own a copy of the Scripture.

Men cannot be well educated without a knowledge of the Bible. Famous men have all loved it. In it are combined poetry, biography, eloquence and beauty.

EXAMPLE A POTENT FACTOR.

Another means of instruction is by example. It is a most potent factor. Children are most impressed by what they see in others. A solemn thing about it is that it works silently. Unconsciously the child imbibes examples from an atmosphere that may be tainted with wrong methods.

There can be no two standards of example either, one for the child and the other for the adult. There need be no fear for the future of the child who has absolute faith in his father's goodness. Then, perhaps, the best example and influence of all is that of prayer. Prayer has and always will, accomplish wonders.—"Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ and thou shalt be saved." Mothers have prayed their boys back from paths of wickedness in the far corners of the earth.

Miss Davies sang "The Lost Chord," with fine effect.

"MADE IN PETERBOROUGH" PLANS

(Hardware and Metal.)

Peterborough, Sept. 19—At a meeting of Peterborough manufacturers selling to the hardware trade, held on Monday evening, it was decided that an exhibit of "Made-in-Peterborough Hardware" would be in one end of the armories during the retail hardware convention to be held here next February. Representatives of the Lundy Shovel & Tool Co., Rapid Tool Co., Peterborough Lock Co, and J. J. Turner & Sons, were present, while others sent word that they would co-operate in anything that was done. It was decided to arrange for the exhibit, and Ald. J. J. Turner, junior, was appointed secretary. Another meeting will be held next Monday evening to complete details. President Cinnamon, Lindsay, Treasurer Caslor and Secretary Wrigley, Toronto, were present representing the Ontario Retail Hardware Association.

The Peterborough Hardware Co., used the "Asbestos" sad iron automaton window display last week, and scores of interested women were seen watching the mechanical window during the display. And that the display paid is shown by the fact that sales totalled about five dozen sets during the week.

A splendid ammunition and fire arms window is being shown by the Kingan Hardware Co. this week.

MADE IN GALT EXHIBIT.

Galt, Sept. 19—A meeting of Galt manufacturers was held on Monday to discuss the making of arrangements for a "Made-in-Galt" exhibit at the Peterborough convention of the Ontario Retail Hardware Association next February. It was decided that if suitable arrangements can be made for space that the idea be taken up. The exhibit will probably include goods made by the Shurly-Dietrich Co., Allan Hills Edge Tool Co., Galt Art Metal Co, R. McDougall Pump Co, and the Down Draft Furnace Co.

WHAT THE WRIGHT HAVE DONE

There has been a good deal of caviling at the Wright brothers for their insisting on keeping their patents free of infringement. When one learns, however, that for many people the great work these inventors did is quite obscured by the crowd of workers who are making use to-day of their discoveries, it seems only fair that the two who made aviation practical should receive the recognition, financial and otherwise, which they really deserve.

The following account of the Wrights' work from the program of the Harvard-Boston aero meet this month shows the actual place of these American brothers in this new enterprise of the air.

Their many successful trials led them to glide from greater heights, and in stronger winds, when the problems of lateral stability came before them as, apparently, an insurmountable obstacle. When lateral stability was disturbed the problem was to raise the low wing in the simplest and most effective manner by means that did not add undue weight to the whole apparatus. This they did by warping the surfaces so that the low wing presented a greater angle of incidence to the line of flight and the high wing a lesser angle. This, of course, increased the lift of the low wing and decreased the lift of the high wing, thus forming a mechanical couple tending to right the machine.

Unfortunately, however, this greater angle of incidence of the low wing reduced the speed of this wing and thus prevented the action desired.—Christian Science Monitor.

THREE ELEMENTS IN THE COMPLETION OF IDEAL MAN

The relation of the church to the individual and the co-operation of the church and the individual was the theme of an impressive sermon by Rev. J. A. Stewart, of Hespeler, at the men's rally at Knox church last night.

THREE ELEMENTS.

The text for the evening was Ephesians 4, 13, "Till we all come in the unity of the faith and of the knowledge of the Son of God unto a perfect man unto the measure of the stature of the fullness of Christ."

Men and women must know the need of salvation before they will accept it. It cannot be forced on anyone nor accepted blindly. We must be able to give a reason for the faith that is in us.

There are three elements in the completion of ideal man. 1.—A longing on the part of humanity for something more than it is. This longing is nothing more than a desire to come to our full manhood. And in the second place there is the answering of the questions of human heart by Jesus Christ, who says that a true man is one who does perfectly the will of God. He shows this in His own life. The real question is not Christ's divinity, but does He present an ideal which is higher than ours? If so, we are under an obligation to follow it?

The third element is the individual who knows.

"Humanity is longing for an ideal. That is the first element. Jesus Christ came to present that ideal. That was His business. The ideal and the hungering and thirsting soul must be brought together. That is our business.

IS THE CHURCH DOING ITS BUSINESS.

It is not piety or prayer that is after all the measure of the worth of a church although these are necessary but "Is the church reaching those who do not know Christ and bringing them to Him. The church is the biggest training school on earth and every man ought to be in Christ's great great school.

When men are educated they should show themselves equipped for some department of life's work. When men are trained in the church they should show themselves prepared for service. Personal work is needed.

HIGHLY DESCRIPTIVE OVERTURE

"La Fremersberg," the overture which the 57th band will play at its concert at the Armouries on Friday night, gives plenty of scope for realistic descriptive work.

The following is the synopsis of this interesting standard number;

The margrave's (knight) horn, echoed by the mountains, is heard summoning the huntsmen, and the fanfare heard first in the distance, then drawing nearer, indicates their approach Signal for the hunt to commence. During the rustic scene which follows, the horns are heard both near and in the distance, Song of the country folk (solo with refrain and dance). During dance, a storm approaches, wind rises, and the peasants' dance becomes more animated. A peal of thunder stops the dance—the peasants rush shrieking away to seek shelter. The lightning flashes—the storm grows in intensity—at last it bursts forth in full fury—rain falls in torrents — thunder crashes..

The Margrave, who has been overtaken by the storm, is heard crying for help—in vain—the noise of the storm drowns his appeal. Overcome by weariness the Margrave falls to the ground. Suddenly he hears the monastery bell and the chant of the monks. Following the sound, he finds the Fremersberg. The storm ceases, and the retainers, who have been seeking the Margrave, find him at the monastry. All join joyfully in the "Te Deum."

STUDENTS ARE ARRIVING

To-day the students who will attend the Normal school here this term are arriving in the city. Those students who come from schools which are unapproved by the Educational Committee, have been writing on their examinations to show eligibility for entrance. There were twenty-two students who wrote.

All the trains this morning brought in contingents of students to swell the attendance this term. Only four students of Peterborough will be among the members. About one hundred and sixty will be present altogether.

POLICE COURT

Three Englishmen who drank too deep and freely of "brain muddler" on Saturday night, were each fined $2 at the police court this morning.

The first offender was rather dense, and an explanation of "drunk in a public place" charge had to be given by his Worship.

No. 2 said he was guilty of having a drop, but the third stood up like a veteran and pleaded guilty.

Each asked for time to pay the fine, and the order was "Pay in ten days."

IS RETIRING FROM BUSINESS

After conducting for thirty-two years, a retail hardware business on George street, Mr. Adam Hall is about to dispose of his large stock to give all his time to his galvanized iron and tin work business, which, under his fostering has taken a prominent place in the city's manufacturing concerns.

The sale commences on October 1st and will give splendid opportunity to the buying public. Wood cook stoves, coal ranges, coal and wood heaters, graniteware and tinware, cutlery and other lines will be disposed of at rock bottom prices. Everything must be sold. The occasion calls for a bonafide sale and as such it will be carried out.

The premises in which Mr. Hall will conduct his new business are at the corner of Simcoe and Bethune streets.

Murray St. Baptist Church

The public will be heartily welcomed at an open meeting of the Young People's Society this evening at eight o'clock. The president will give a travel talk, touching on recent personal experiences abroad.

BOXES FOR BRIDE'S CAKE.

The Heart Shape Design a Popular Selection.

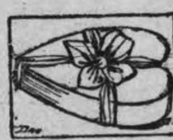
The statement that it is not what is done, but how it is done, that counts verges on the trite, but it is particularly applicable in the little things that contribute toward a pleasant time for wedding guests.

A wedding cake is no longer kept for weeks and weeks. It is cut into little pieces and sent or presented to the guests and friends of the happy pair. Just how to give this in an attractive form is sometimes a question that clamors for its answer in the rush of the last few days.

Boxes can now be purchased at stationery departments of any large store, and the accessories are within the reach of the majority of brides.

There is a charming little circular box that looks like a miniature wedding cake. When tied with white ribbon or with silken cords that reflect the color scheme of the decorations it is well worth having. The ends of the bow are gathered into the tops of tiny silver bells.

Perhaps the heart shaped box of white is more appropriate. This should hold a heart shaped piece of cake, and the top of the box should be tied down with broad ribbon, fastened under a rosette.



Square forms are always good. The addition of a card with the best wishes of the bride and bridegroom is a little personal touch that is well worth while. Through the knot of ribbon a spray of asparagus fern can be slipped. It lasts for weeks and gives the freshness that is desirable, especially for boxes that are to be sent away through the mail.

To the friends who are present there can easily be given a spray of leaves with a blossom from the decoration of the table or rooms. Tied with a gold or silver cord, a long, narrow box will hold a fresh sprig of flowers. People like to carry with them some part of the festivities. The mania for souvenirs still prevails.

Of course the custom of having the cake cut by the bride herself can easily be observed, for during the reception following the small pieces can be boxed and tied by a special committee of friends and distributed to the guests before their departure.

As to the dreams that may come when the fair recipients sleep with the bride's cake beneath their pillows, who can tell whether they can vie with the pleasure of receiving it in so charming a form?

Tasty Summer Dishes.

It is difficult to find a more tasty entree for a summer dinner than baked tomatoes served on the plate with the meat or in individual ramekins. A little cold boiled tongue or ham mixed with the breadcrumbs filling the tomatoes is a tasty addition. Plenty of butter should be used in seasoning cooked tomatoes of any kind, the butter neutralizing the acid of the vegetable. For the benefit of persons who have never stuffed and baked tomatoes it might be said that a slice is taken from the top of round, apple shaped tomatoes and the pulp is removed and mixed with breadcrumbs, rice or macaroni with or without a little minced meat and with or without onion juice and minced parsley. Melted butter should be used to moisten the crumbs, rice or macaroni. The tomatoes should be put into a baking dish and be baked in a hot oven about fifteen minutes or until they are tender and thoroughly heated through.

The dried pieces of the cheese box may be grated and mixed with rich cream seasoned with salt and paprika and left to stand and ripen for a day. The result is an excellent cream cheese which may be served with the salad course or for a supper. Sour cream may be employed.

For a timely luncheon dish cover the bottom of a baking dish with cooked fresh or canned asparagus cut into short lengths, turn over it some rich white sauce and then break on the top an egg for each person to be served. Bake until the whites of the eggs are set.

Electricity For Stains.

There seems to be no limit to the uses to which electricity can be put in the household.

The scientists are learning to harness it up into a first rate maid of all work and making it do everything, from washing the clothes to rocking the cradle, or they would if they had cradles in these up to date households.

But one of the newest uses to which electricity has been put is that of a speedy spot remover.

A technical magazine says that a new electrolytic bleaching apparatus has been invented which enables a woman to remove within two or three minutes any accidental stains from articles such as tablecloths, lace, embroidery work, etc. Tea, coffee, wine, fruit, ink of any color, may all be effectively and inexpensively removed within a few minutes, and above all, the electrolytic method does not destroy the fabric of the article treated.

Father Brennan, who will shortly leave Thamesville, Ont., was presented with a purse of money by his congregation.

POPULAR CLASS IN FIRST AID

The importance and usefulness of having a knowledge of first aid work has become so popular that the Young Women's Association has this year made arrangements for the organization of a class to be under the direction of Dr. Malcolm McCulloch. This class is to be organized at the Young Women's Christian Association on Tuesday (to-morrow) evening, Sept. 27, at 8.30 o'clock. The class will be organized strictly under the St. John's Ambulance Association regulations, and certificates will be awarded at the end of the six lectures to the successful members passing the examinations. The full arrangements of the class will be dealt with at the above association at time stated, and it is urged and hoped that a large class will be enrolled. The first lecture will not be given until a week hence, but it is necessary to enroll at the earliest possible moment, that all preliminary details may be completed before the first lecture.

There are only six lectures, and attendance at four is necessary to enable one to take the examinations. The class will be followed by the Home Nursing Class, upon completion of the six lectures in First Aid Work. Those not able to attend meeting to-morrow evening can send their names to Miss C. B. Morse, or Miss McCalla, care of Y.W.C.A.

OPEN HOUSE AT THE Y.M.C.A. ON THURSDAY EVENING

See the Y.M.C.A. News Item 500 in Ten Days

WHAT HO! WITHIN? GO IN AND SEE WHAT HO! FOR YOURSELF

Every young man in Peterborough, and every middle-aged man, too, should be at the Y.M.C.A. building on Thursday evening. For "open house" will be the order of the evening. There will be no special invitations issued, but every man who reads this notice is most cordially invited to be present.

There will be nothing special doing —that is, there will be no activities than which will not be carried on throughout the whole season. The idea of the function is to give the men of the city an honest idea of what the association is able to do for them.

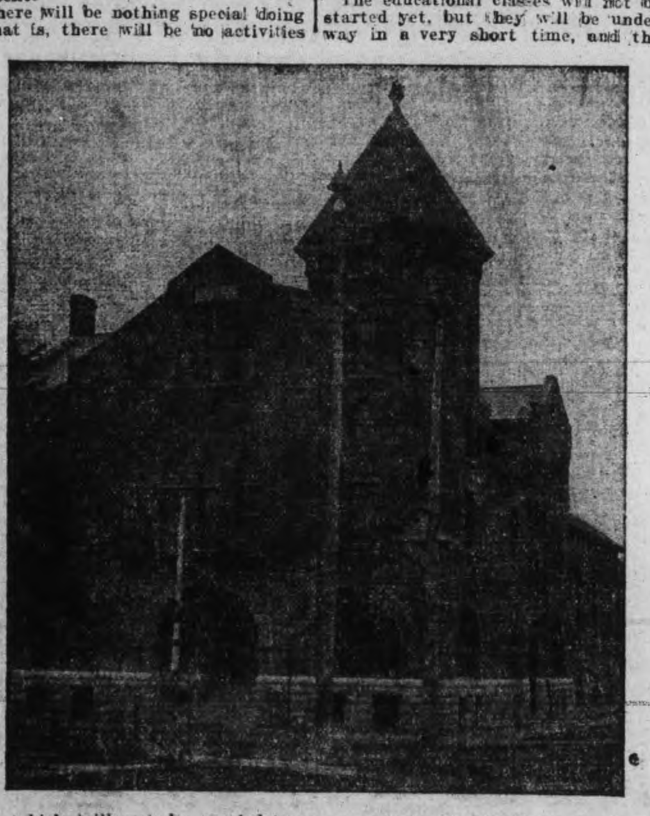
There is no doubt that a man will get his money's worth by joining the Y.M.C.A., and no man need join who is not sure of that fact, therefore, the association is going to make it possible, so far as can be done in one night, for the men to see just what they are doing in joining.

The gymnasium will be in full swing. One of the classes will be in operation. They will work to music, and this will be the case all through the season.

The swimming baths will be an attraction. Some of the good swimmers will give a continuous exhibition of the use to which the plunge can be put. The bath room is one of the most attractive features in the building, having been all decorated and altered to suit the needs of the large number of men who will be using it.

The bowling alleys are now in full swing, too. This room has also undergone a great change, and has a fresh appearance and a sweet smell, being properly ventilated.

The educational classes will not be started yet, but they will be under way in a very short time, and the men will learn all about them on Thursday night.



Of course there will be a number of features which cannot be exhibited, and the committee will be in attendance to give all the information about these.

Already a goodly number of men have joined the association, and are now getting into work in their several departments.

One of the most pleasing and profitable features of the season's work will be the Literary and Debating Club. Some of the best debaters in the city have joined, and are going to be leaders in this club, so if you have talent in this direction you will have no better chance than this to develop.

Don't forget that Thursday night will be "open house" at the Y.M.C.A. Every man in the city ought to be present.

CASE IS BAFFLING

Goderich Murder Case is a Puzzle to Police—Clues Are Very Slender.

Goderich, Sept. 27.—No clue has yet been found to aid in solving the mystery of the brutal murder of 16-year-old Lizzie Anderson, whose nude body, with throat cut was found in the basement of a vacant house last Sunday morning.

Because Frank Smith, a painter, formerly of Toronto, was seen downtown the night the girl disappeared, and his not being seen since, his name has been connected with the tragedy. Inspector Greer of the provincial department, who reached here yesterday, found blood in the cellar 12 feet from where the body was found, and is confident the murder took place in the basement.

Coroner Holmes opened an inquest last night. No evidence was taken, and an adjournment was taken until Tuesday next.

Wesley Anderson, father of the girl, says she had shown her brother fifteen cents, which she said one Fred Jardine had given her. She also told the boy that Jardine told her to meet him on the street afterwards. Mr. Anderson says he went to the Jardine home at midnight that night, becoming alarmed when his daughter had not come home. He could not rouse anybody, but on going back again at 6 o'clock next morning Jardine's mother told him that her son had not come home yet and Anderson would likely find him at the fair grounds, where he was working.

Mame Spatoro, an Hoban foreman, who boards at the house, and had the girl out driving several times, was home about 10 p.m. the night of the tragedy.

Smith had been working at the organ factory here and seemed despondent.

ITALIAN CAUGHT

He May be Cause of Shooting in the North Country.

Toronto, Sept. 27.—When Samuel Salvatore, alias Figliuzzi, alias Salvatore Pesano, is handed to Inspector Boyd of the provincial police, at Buffalo, N.Y., or Clearwater, Pa., by the United States authorities, the Department believe they have secured the capture of a man closely connected with the tragedy in which Raphael Domensala lost his life in Muskoka in June last. Domensala was shot while trying to act as a peacemaker in a quarrel, and Joseph Pesano, now in custody, is to stand trial on a charge of murder.

Salvatore was the foreman of a wood-cutting gang, to which Domensala and Pesano belonged. On June 15 last Salvatore approached Pesano with a "black hand" proposition. He forced the matter with such intensity that Pesano was finally thrown to the ground, and Salvatore, drawing the edge of an axe across the smaller man's throat, swore that unless Pesano agreed he would cut his throat. Pesano consented, only to withdraw his promise as soon as he regained his feet, and attempted to run away. Quickly Salvatore caught up a loaded gun, fired and wounded Pesano in the chest. Pesano ran to his shack and secured his own gun. Then Domensala intervened as peacemaker. Salvatore was advancing and Pesano was threatening to shoot as Domensala stepped between the two, he fired and Domensala was shot through the heart.

Pesano and Salvatore took to the woods. Provincial Constable S. McElwain of Bala traced Pesano to the line of the C.N.R. McElwain telegraphed ahead, and when the train pulled into the Union Station here Pesano was arrested.

It was not until Salvatore had some days start that the true facts began to leak out from those whom he had previously terrorized. A close watch was kept on all persons who had been in any way intimate with him, and finally a letter was secured in his handwriting, in which it was intimated that he was working near Pittsburg. When he was located and arrested by the United States authorities it was only on the direct request of Rogers that Salvatore was held until Inspector Greer, together with a Mr. Thorne, who knew Salvatore well, went down and identified him.

ROYAL COMMISSION GIVES ADVICE TO WEST INDIES

British Colonies in the Atlantic Are Well Disposed Toward a Reciprocal Arrangement — Advisory Board Urges Them to Try for Further Concessions.

London, Sept. 27.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—The report of the royal commission on trade relations of Canada and the West Indies, issued yesterday, signed by Lord Balfour of Burleigh, Hon. Wm. Fielding, Hon. Wm. Paterson, Lord Islington and Sir Daniel Morris, comprises sixty pages, besides voluminous appendices. The commissioners strongly represent that the preference granted the West Indies by Canada for some years, has been of great value in furnishing a favorable market for West Indies' sugar just as the United States, through the development of their own colonial policy have ceased to require West Indies sugar as largely as formerly.

The West Indies are strongly urged to make reciprocal concessions to Canada, so that the advantage already obtained may be continued. Considerable attention is paid to the controversy between West India shippers and Canadian refiners, as to the existence of a West Indian combination to obtain excessive prices and the special concessions made to refiners a year ago, respecting the importation of a limited quantity of foreign raw sugar at preferential rates.

It is recommended in any scheme for the betterment of trade relations that may be proposed, the special concession to refiners be withdrawn, inasmuch as the West Indies would regard that step as essential, but that the percentage of the preference allowed by Canada be reduced and made definite and unqualified.

The West India colonies in general report in favor of reciprocal arrangements with Canada, except Jamaica, which was influenced by the fear, which the commission think not justified, though by making such arrangements they would provoke retaliatory tariff legislation by the United States.

The Standard thinks the results of the commission are fair and equitable, and the whole report appears to be a recognition of the fact that closer political relations can only result from more intimate commercial arrangements.

The Morning Post says common-sense has been vindicated without any inconsistency on the part of the Government's free trade representatives and hopes the same arrangements with Canada, on the lines of the report, can be effected without delay.

The Times says the report is of high value and in consequence the recommendation of a uniform preference by the West Indies testifies eloquently to the breadth of mind wherewith the free traders, Balfour and Islington, approached the task.

ASKS FOR AN INVESTIGATION

Saratoga, N.Y., Sept. 27.—At the meeting of the Republican State committee last night, Chairman Woodruff read a letter from Vice-President Sherman, asking for an investigation by the committee of the charge that his selection for temporary chairman of the state convention was brought about through trickery, and stating that, if such charge were substantiated, he would not care to serve.

F. C. Stevens, superintendent of public works, loomed large yesterday as an available candidate for governor. Some of Mr. Roosevelt's friends pointed out that Mr. Stevens was a Hughes' man, but in the conduct of his office, had many friends among the organization Republicans, who admit that Stevens would make a strong candidate. Efforts were also made during the day to have Representative Bennet of New York withdraw his candidacy to make way for an up-state man. Mr. Bennet, however, was not inclined to be persuaded.

Mr. Fraser, who had been in poor health since last June, had so far recovered that he was expected to return to Halifax about the end of this month but took a sudden turn for the worse yesterday, dying early to-day.

TARIFF BENEFIT TO CANADA

New York, Sept. 27.—An Ottawa despatch to The Herald says:

Now that the Payne-Aldrich Tariff Act has been in force for more than a year, it is possible to show the beneficial effect of the reductions on duty on various Canadian products.

In nearly every instance where the tariff was lowered Canadian exports increased. The most notable instance is cream. The old duty was practically prohibitive, only $8,871 worth of milk and cream being exported to the United States in the year ending July 31, 1909. The exports for the year ending July 31, 1910, were valued at $570,308.

There is a table showing the values for the year ending July 31, 1910, on other commodities on which the tariff was reduced when the Payne-Aldrich Act went into effect, Aug. 5, 1909:

THE MESSAGE FROM THE KING

London, Sept. 27.—The officers of the Queen's Own who are down with typhoid fever are progressing favorably, His Majesty's kind enquiries after them being much appreciated.

Before leaving England, Col. Pellatt received the following telegram from the King:

"To Sir Henry Pellatt, officers and non-commissioned officers and men of the Queen's Own Canadian Rifles:

"The King wishes you all God-speed and a safe return to Canada, and hopes you carry back with you many pleasant recollections and practical experiences from your association with the troops of the Mother Country. His Majesty trusts those who have had the misfortune to be indisposed may soon be restored to health.

(Signed) "A. Bigge."

The following was despatched in reply:

"Sir Arthur Bigge, Balmoral Castle.

"Sir Henry Pellatt, officers, non-commissioned officers, and men of the Queen's Own Rifles of Canada humbly thank his gracious Majesty the King for his kind wishes on their safe return to Canada, and assure His Majesty of the deep loyalty at all times. They return to Canada with most pleasant recollections of the visit."

Aldershot, Sept. 27.—(C.A.P. Cable.) —Yesterday's bulletin states that Lieuts. Muntz and George are convalescent, and that Capt. George is progressing favorably.

Gaynor Not a Candidate.

New York, Sept. 27.—Mayor Gaynor issued last night for the first time a formal statement, saying that he is not a candidate for the Democratic nomination for governor. The mayor does not say, however, what course he will pursue in the event the nomination is offered him.

Wanted In Philadelphia.

Peterboro, Sept. 27.—Harvey M. Neilson was arrested by the Peterboro police yesterday on the charge of embezzling $2,000 in Philadelphia. He was employed here by a real estate firm. An officer from that city took him in charge last night.

ON TRIAL FOR CHILD MURDER

Barrie, Sept. 27.—The chief cases on the docket of the fall assizes, which opened here yesterday, were the Michael Fraser marriage case and the child murder charge against Mary Nolan and Thomas McNulty of Orillia.

Justice Britton briefly related the facts concerning the murder. The child was born at a house in Toronto on March 10. Soon after Mary Nolan left the city, carrying the child and a valise. She alighted at Hawkestone and started down the track to go to Rugby, as she stated. She was overtaken by Noah Cotton, to whom she told the story of being a married woman. He invited her to his home, where she was given her supper, and then driven to the station by a brother of Cotton. At the station she was seen to be without the baby, but still carrying the valise. It is alleged she had strangled the baby and hidden it in the valise. This she afterwards threw into the river. It was found later in Lake Couchiching.

It is charged against the man, McNulty, that he was an accessory before the fact, having counseled the girl to the action.

There are 43 witnesses for the crown. Mr. Robinette will press for a reduction of the murder charge against the woman to that of manslaughter. She will be tried first and used as the chief crown witness against McNulty, who must fight the murder charge.

The Fraser case is an attempt by relatives of Michael Fraser, aged 80, to quash his marriage to Hannah Robertson, aged 50, under sensational circumstances. Fraser is wealthy.

ACCUSED OF EMBEZZLEMENT

Woodstock, Sept. 27.—A. McNeal, treasurer of the Embro Public School Board, is in custody in that village, his arrest having taken place on Saturday on the charge of misappropriating about $500 of funds belonging to the village board.

McNeal spent Sunday in the village lockup and yesterday afternoon his preliminary hearing was commenced before Justices of the Peace Ross, Cody and Creighton, with Crown Attorney Ball of this city prosecuting, and was adjourned until this afternoon.

It is alleged that the treasurer drew from the treasury in the school board's name more money than there were funds to meet.

Lieut.-Governor Gibson on Coast.

Vancouver, Sept. 27.—"Vancouver enjoys no monopoly of prosperity, for I see vast construction forces at work in the entire region from Lake Superior to the coast, and particularly from Winnipeg to the Rockies," said Hon J. M. Gibson, Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario, who, with his party in the private car of the Ontario Government, arrived here yesterday.

He will be entertained by the Scottish Rite in the Masonic Temple. His honor is sovereign grand commander of Scottish Rite, A. F. and A. M.

FAIR RECEIPTS WERE $5.600

Directors Wind Up Affairs in Connection With the Exhibition—Fair Board Will Realize a Good Surplus as Result of Exhibition This Year—Votes of Thanks Passed.

The directors of the Peterborough Fair met in the City Council Chambers last evening to settle all business pertaining to the Exhibition. They were in session from eight till ten o'clock. Nearly all the members were present, and President R. H. Leary occupied the chair. All accounts were passed, and cheques for the same will be issued immediately.

It was decided to hold the fair next year on the same days as it was held this year, and the question of holding it for a longer period was discussed. It was, however, left over for further consideration. In any event, however, the fair will be held next year at the end of the week following the Toronto Exhibition. It was also decided to ask the co-operation of the Board of Trade towards purchasing new grounds for the Exhibition.

A vote of appreciation to Hon. J. R. Stratton was also moved, and seconded, for his work in making the Exhibition such a success, by bringing the best horses in the province to the city.

To Mr. W. E. Conway a vote of thanks was also moved for the trouble he took in checking over the gate and grand stand receipts. This is no small task, and involves great carefulness and the directors fully appreciate his efforts.

The directors realized well on the Exhibition this year, their total receipts from all sources amounting to $5,600. After all the expenses are paid there will be a substantial surplus remaining.

Violence Not Shown.

Hamilton, Sept. 27.—An inquest was held last night into the death of the baby which was found in a valise at the home of William Batstone, 80 North John street, last week. The verdict of the jury was to the effect that there was nothing to show that the child had come to its death through violence, or that it had ever lived.

Detective Sayer testified that Miss Jessie Sweet, the girl arrested in connection with the case, told him that the child was hers, and that it was born at the Batstone home eleven months ago. Mrs. Batstone, however, denied the latter statement. Drs. McNichol and Edgar, who conducted the postmortem examination, said the little body was so dried up that it looked like a mummy, a condition that was unusual. They did not think there had ever been life in the body, but, owing to the condition in which they found it, it was pretty hard to tell whether there had been or not.

Coroner Dickson had charge of the inquest. Crown Attorney Washington conducted the examination of the witnesses, and George Kerr, K.C., was present in the interests of Miss Sweet. She was not asked to give evidence.

STRIKERS AND POLICE FIGHT ON THE STREET

Churches were stormed, windows smashed, residences entered and looted, and street lamps torn down.

The scene was indescribable.

UNION LABEL

TOO BAD

Too bad! Sir Wilfrid Laurier seems to have mislaid that low tariff policy of his. It must have fallen off the train somewhere between Winnipeg and Port Arthur.

TOO CURIOUS

Its a good thing sometimes not to be too curious. Over in Wareham, Mass., Johnathan Willetts is nursing a broken leg. A woman passed him wearing a hobble skirt and Willets stopped dead as she passed by, to get an eyefull. He turned quickly, stumbled over a stone and they carted him home on a stretcher. A man in Chicago a while ago saw a man walking with his arm about a woman's waist. He turned and made an insulting remark. They carted him off to the morgue. Minding one's business is an art that a lot of people don't know anything about.

THE SCANDAL MONGERER

Berlin Sept. 24.—The Burgomaster of the thriving town of Hattersheim has declared war on scandal-mongering women. He has issued a municipal proclamation calling attention to the frequency of prosecutions for libel and slander resulting in bitter enmities and costly litigation. The cause, says the Burgomaster, is usually the same. While the men are hard at work the women fritter away their time gossiping and quarreling their children neglected and their households suffering from lack of care.

But this is not true of Peterborough. The women here never talk Is there a female who is unfortunate enough to have known

"A sigh too much a kiss too long,
Then follows the sound of weeping rain,
And things are never the same again."

They refrain from publishing the news over the backyard fence or via the front door step route.

Is there a man who has got drunk, who has made an ass of himself?

They do not repeat the story.

They do in Toronto, in Montreal, in Millbrook, Brantford, Guelph and even in Lakefield. BUT IN PETERBOROUGH NEVER.

A NOISE

Since Goldwin Smith's death the young and ambitious editor of the Peterborough Review has been shaking his head with the air of a Sage of the Grange. But when Goldwin Smith's head shook, it didn't rattle.—Orillia Packet.

This is gratifying. We are glad to get this little boost, for every knock is a boost to us. If it wasn't we would have been dead long ago. We are glad that when we shake our head our brains rattle, that's a little noise anyway. We try to make a noise. Some people pass through life apologizing for their existence, moving on tiptoe. However, we don't have to do that. We simply shake our heads and our brains rattle. In Orillia when the editor of the Packet shakes his head—there is a deep silence. No, we didn't say there was a vacumn there.

TELL US ABOUT IT

The Montreal Star goes into details editorially to tell how Chicago grew. In a nut shell it is this CHICAGO GREW BY ADVERTISING. That's the way a business grows, that's the way Eaton grew, that's the way everything worth while travels to the head of the procession. Phineas T. Barnum said he didn't care a damn what people said about him and his show so long as they were saying something. And so long as a merchant, a show, a paper, or a city can deliver the goods and keep delivering them, they are bound to win. Can you Peterborough deliver the goods? You bet you can then why don't you let the world know through the magic ink? Can you merchant deliver the goods? They why don't you keep telling the tale in large letters? Can you Tom, Dick and Harry, deliver the goods. Then show the people in the shop, in the office, in the store, in the church. They will catch on. Just deliver the goods and don't be bashful, that's all. And Maud, Mary, Susan or Lizzie can you deliver the goods in your humble way in office or store in factory at home. We're all from Missouri, and you'll never be idle. We want the goods delivered in the palace or the cottage, in the railway or on the road Tell us, and if you'll advertise the fact the world is on and you'll never need want..

SOMETHING NEW

Toronto, Sept. 24.—The following extract from a letter written home by a Toronto young man who has just entered the first year at the Ontario Agricultural College at Guelph, speaks for itself:—"This morning at three o'clock all the freshmen were turned out of their beds and painted from head to foot, marched to McDonald Hall, the girls' residence, in their night shirts, and compelled to give a song and dance outside their building."

This is part of the education that annually falls to the lot of freshmen in Guelph, Toronto and Queen's. But there is something new and original in singing and dancing to ladies in their nightshirts. But what odds, the doors were locked.

IS YOUR COAL BIN FULL?

Winter is winging its way here from the northland and some of us who have been feeding the birds are wondering. We are thinking of the money we should have saved or the coal we should have purchased, of the overcoat we should have bought, of the money we should have saved for the rent. When a man makes a habit of getting full his coal bin is usually empty—when a man makes a practice of getting full his pantry is usually empty, when a man makes a habit of getting full his family's stomach is often empty. However, there is always the hope of the glad to-morrow for the worst of us.

THE FIGHT

New York, Sept. 23.—Dr Fredk. A. Cook, the vanished explorer, has been sighted again, this time in a Munich hotel, under the name of Mr. Coleman and family. Michael M. Ryan, of Bridgeport, Conn., as inventor and associate of Sir Hiram Maxim, has informed the New York Times, which will publish his account to-morrow, of how he met the doctor.

Which all goes to show how many people can be found to look alike. Dr. Cook is reported bobbing up all over the world, sometimes in as many as three places at once. He should have stood his ground. If he was right he needn't have skipped. If he was wrong, he should have said to the world "Here, I made a mistake and am sorry. I'll do better." The world would have forgiven him for, disarmed by confession, it could have little to say, for every one makes mistakes Truth will out, and a getting up when knocked down by drink, theft, women or crookedness, slander or thirty days—why, there's nothing to it than getting up again.

"More than half beaten, but fearless,
Facing the dusk and the night,
Breathless and reeling, but tearless,
Here in the thick of the fight,
I, who bow but before Thee,
God of the fighting clan,
Lifting my fists I implore Thee,
Give me the heart of a man.
What though we stand with the winners,
Or perish with those who fall,
Only the cowards are sinners,
Fighting the fight is all."

SIDE LIGHTS

CLERICAL SLIPS

A preacher, discoursing upon Bunyan and his work, caused a titter among his hearers by exclaiming—"In these days my brethren, we want more Bunyans." Another clergyman, pleading earnestly with his parishioners for the constitution of a cemetery for their parish, asked them to consider "the deplorable condition of thirty thousand Christian Englishmen living without Christian burial." Still more curious was the clerical slip, "When do you expect to see Deacon B. again?" "Never" said the reverend gentleman solemnly, "the deacon is in heaven."

Gruesome Relics

Toronto Telegram.

Crosses made from a gallows are among the latest of trinkets to be presented to friends as souvenirs.

The scaffold on which Henderson was hanged in the summer is being preserved by the authorities as it may be required again. It is one of the objects of interest to prisoners who are privileged characters around the county boarding house.

One of these privileged individuals never loses an opportunity to secure a piece of the beam that supported hangman's rope, and from which Henderson's body hung. These pieces of wood have been whittled and made into a dozen or more neat little crosses, which the maker says he will present to his friends when he has served his time for getting the losing end of a "booze fight."

The Round-Up

A Romance of Arizona

Novelized From Edmund Day's Melodrama

By JOHN MURRAY and MILLS MILLER

Copyright, 1908, by G. W. Dillingham Co.

In the arid regions of the west water signs are quite frequent. They usually consist of a grouping of stones, with a longer triangular stone in the center, its apex pointing in the direction where the water is to be found. In some cases the water is so far from the trail that four or five of these signs must be followed up before the water is found.

Only the Indian and the mule can smell water. This accomplishment enabled the fleeing Apaches to take every advantage of the pursuing troopers, who must travel from spring to spring along known trails.

In the long, weary chase men and horses began to fail rapidly. Short rations quickly became slow starvation fare. Hardie fed his men and horses on mesquite bean, a plant heretofore considered poisonous. For water he was forced to depend upon the cactus, draining the fluid secreted at the heart of the plant.

With faces blistered by the sun and caked with alkali, blue shirts faded to a purple tinge and trousers and accouterments covered with a gray, powdery dust, the soldiers rode on silently and determinedly. Hour after hour the troop flung itself across the plains and into the heart of the lava beds, each day cutting down the Apache lead.

CHAPTER XIV.

FALSE dawn in the lava beds of Arizona. The first faint tinge on the eastern horizon fades, and the stars shine the more brilliantly in the brief, darkest hour before the true daybreak. An icy wind sweeps down canyons and over mesas, stinging the marrow of the wayfarer's bones. In the heavens the innumerable stars burn steadily in crystal coldness. Shadows lie in stygian blackness at foot of rock and valley. Soft and clear the lights of night swathe the uplands. An awesome silence hangs over the desert. Hushed and humbled by the immensity of space, one expects to hear the rush of worlds through the universe. At times the bosom swells with a wild desire to sing and shout in the glory of pure living.

The day comes quickly. The sun, leaping over the edge of the world, floods mesa and canyon, burning, withering, sparing no living thing, lavishing reds and purples, blues and violets, upon canyon walls and wind sculptured rocks. But a remorseful glare, blinding, sight destroying, is thrown back from the sand and alkali of the desert. Shriveled sagebrush and shrunken cactus bravely fight for life.

A narrow pathway leads from the mesa down the canyon's wall, twisting and doubling on itself to Apache spring. The trail then moves southward between towering cliffs, a lane through which is caught a far distant glimpse of the mountains. Little whirlwinds of dust spring up ever and anon, twirling wildly across the sandy wastes. The air suffocates like the breath of a furnace. Ever the pitiless sun searches and scorches, as conscience sears and stings a stricken soul.

Down the narrow trail, past the spring, ride in single file the Apaches slowly on tired horses, for the pursuing soldiers have given them no halting space. Naked save for a breechclout, with a narrow red band of dyed buckskin about his forehead, in which sticks a feather, each rides silent, grim, cruel, a hideous human reptile, as native to the desert as is the Gila monster. The horse is saddleless. For a bridle the warrior uses a piece of grass rope twisted about the pony's lower jaw. His legs droop laxly by the horse's sides. In his right hand he grasps his rifle, resting the butt on the knee. The only sound to break the stillness of the day is the rattle of stones slipping and sliding down the pathway when loosened by the hoofs of the ponies.

Creeping down the canyon wall, they cross the bottom, pass the spring and disappear at a turn in the canyon walls. Nature and Indian meet and merge in a world of torture and despair.

Dick had fared badly in the lava beds. One spring after the other he found dry. His horse fell from exhaustion and thirst. He ended the sufferings of his pack mule with a revolver bullet.

Dick staggered on afoot across the desert, hoping to find water at Apache spring. His blue shirt was torn and faded to a dingy purple. Hat and shoulders were gray with alkali dust. Contact with the rocks and cactus had rent trousers and leggings. His shoes, cut by sharply pointed stones and with thread rotted by the dust of the deserts, were worn to shreds. Unshaven and unshorn, with sunken cheeks and eyes bright with the delirium of thirst, he dragged his weary way across the desert. He reached Apache spring shortly after the passage of the Indians, but his craving for water was so great that he did not observe their trail.

Reeling toward the spring, he cast aside his hat and flung down his rifle in his eagerness to drink. Throwing himself on his face before the hollow in the rock from which the water trickled, he first saw that the waters had dried up. With his bony fingers he dug into the dry sand, crying aloud in despair. Stiffly he arose and blundered blindly to a rock, upon which he sank in his weakness.

"Another day like this and I'll give up the fight," he moaned. "Apache spring dry, the first time in years; Little Squaw spring nothing but dust and alkali. It is twenty miles to Clearwater spring—twenty—miles—if I can make it."

Dick trembled with weakness. His swollen tongue clove to the roof of his mouth. His lips were cracked and blackened. Bits of foam flickered about the corners of his mouth. The glare blinded his eyes, which were half closed. At times fever waves swept over him; again he shuddered with cold.

Sounds of falling waters filled his ears. The sighing of the wind through the canyon walls suggested the trickling of fountains. Rivers flowed before his eyes through green meadows only to fade into the desert as he gazed.

"What a land—what a land! It is the abode of the god of thirst! He tempts men into his valley with the lure of gold and saps the lifeblood from their bodies drop by drop. Drop by drop I hear it falling. No—it is water I hear! There it is! How cool it looks!"

Dick rose and staggered toward the cliff. In his delirium of thirst he saw streams of water gush down the mountain side. Holding out his arms, he cried, "Saved, saved!"

His hands fell limply by his sides as the illusion faded. He then doubled them into fists and shook them at the cliff in a last defiance of despair. "You shan't drive me mad!"

He seized his empty canteen, pressing it to his lips.

"No; I drained that two days ago, or was it three?" he whispered in panic as he threw it aside.

Picking up his gun, he falteringly attempted the ascent. "I won't give up—I won't!" he shouted huskily. "I've fought the desert before and conquered. I'll conquer again—I'll"—

His will power ebbed with his failing strength. Blindness fell upon him. Oblivion swept over him. He sank, dying of thirst, in the sands of the desert.

As the buzzards find the dead, so an Apache crept upon Dick as he lay prostrate. But as the Indian aimed he heard footsteps from a draw. He saw a man approaching the spring. Silently he fled behind the rocks.

It was Jack. He had entered the lava beds from the east, closely following the man for whom he had searched for so many weary months. Others of the Apaches had marked him already. Knowing he would go to the spring, they waited warily to learn if he were alone. The band had scattered to surround him at the water hole.

Jack's horse and burro, which he had left at the head of the canyon, were already in the Indians' possession. With him he carried his rifle and a revolver. A canteen of water was slung over his shoulder. The desert had placed its stamp upon him, turning his clothes gray. The tan of his face was deepened. Lines about his eyes and mouth showed how much he had suffered physically and mentally in his search for the man he believed was his successful rival in love. Reaching the spring, he looked about cautiously before he laid down his rifle. He tugged at the butt of his revolver to make certain that it could be pulled quickly from the holster. Taking off his hat, he knelt to drink. He smiled and confidently tapped his canteen when he found the spring dry. He was raising his canteen to his lips when he spied Dick's body.

"I won't give up—I won't!"

Jumping behind a rock, he pulled his revolver, covering the insensible man. It might be a trap. He scanned the trail, the cliff, the canyon. Hearing and seeing nothing, he slipped his revolver into his holster and hurried to Dick's side. At first he did not recognize him. The desert and thirst had wrought many changes in his friend's face.

When recognition came he threw his arms about the prostrate form, crying, "Dick, at last, at last!"

His voice was broken with emotion. The search had been so long, so weary and the ending so sudden! He had found Dick, but it looked as if he came too late.

Gathering Dick up in his arms, he raised him until his head rested on his knees. Forcing open his mouth, he poured a little water down his throat. Then with a moistened handkerchief he wetted temples and wrists. Slowly Dick struggled back to life.

"Water—water—it's water!" he gasped, struggling for more of the precious fluid.

"Easy," cautioned Jack. "Only a little now—more when you're stronger."

"Who is it?" cried Dick. Not waiting for Jack to enlighten him, he continued: "No matter—you came in time. I couldn't have held out any longer. All the springs are dry. I figured on reaching Clearwater."

Jack helped Dick to his feet. Taking his stricken friend's right arm, he drew it across his shoulders. With his left arm about his waist, Jack led him to a seat upon a convenient rock.

He poured a little water down his throat.

"I came by Clearwater yesterday," explained Jack. "It is nothing but mud and alkali."

"My horse dropped three days ago. I had to shoot the pack mule. I"—Dick opened his eyes under the ministrations of Jack. Gazing upward into his face, he shouted joyfully:

"Why, it's Jack—Jack Payson!"

"Didn't you know me, Dick?" asked Jack sympathetically.

"Not at first. My eyes went to the bad out yonder in the glare."

The effort had been too much for Dick. He sank weakly over Jack's knees. Jack turned him partly on his back and let more water trickle down his throat. Dick clutched madly at the canteen, but Jack drew it back out of his reach. With his handkerchief he moistened lips and neck. When Dick's strength returned Jack helped him to sit up.

"I've been hunting for you for months," he told him.

"Hunting for me?" echoed Dick.

"Yes," answered Jack. "I traced you through the Lost Cities, then to Cooney, then up in the Tularosas. At Fort Grant they put me on the right trail."

As the clouds break, revealing the blue of the heavens, so Dick's memory came back to him. He shrank from the man at his side.

"Well?" he asked as he stared at his betrayer.

Jack gazed fixedly ahead. He dared not look into the face of him he had wronged so bitterly.

"She wants you," he said in a voice void of all emotion.

"Who wants me?" asked Dick after a pause.

"Echo."

"Your wife?" gritted Dick. He fingered his gun as he spoke.

Huskily Jack replied, "Yes."

Bitter thoughts filled the mind of one; the other had schooled himself to make atonement. For the wrong he had done Jack was ready to offer his life. He had endured the full measure of his sufferings. The hour of his delivery was at hand. Hard as it was to die in the mid glory of manhood, it was easier to end it all here and now than to live unloved by Echo, hated by Dick, despised by himself.

"She sent me to find you. 'Bring him back to me.' That's what she said," Jack cried in his agony.

"Your wife—she said that?" faltered Dick.

Fiercely in his torture Jack answered: "Yes, my wife—my wife said it. 'Bring him back to me.'"

"Back?" Dick paused. "Back to what?" he asked himself. "She's your wife, isn't she?" he demanded.

"That's what the law says," answered Jack.

To be continued.

AFTER DOCTORS FAILED

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Cured Her.

Toronto, Canada.—"I shall endeavor to describe to you how I felt before I began taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I scarcely knew what it was to be well. I had awful bearing-down pains and usually before my monthly periods I suffered terribly and had to go to bed. I was not able to walk across the floor the pain was so bad. I doctored for a long time, but the doctor's treatment did not do me any good. I gave up all hopes of ever being well again until one day my husband saw the Compound advertised in the paper. He decided to get me a bottle, and I am thankful he did. I had not taken one bottle before I began to feel better, and I kept on taking it until now I am a different woman. It also helped me during maternity and childbirth. I can thoroughly recommend your Vegetable Compound to any woman who is afflicted with female troubles."—Mrs. J. M. TWEEDALE, 138 Nassau St., Toronto, Canada.

The success of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, is unparalleled. It may be used with perfect confidence by women who suffer from displacements, inflammation, ulceration, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, bearing-down feeling, flatulency, indigestion, dizziness, or nervous prostration.

THE DAILY REVIEW PATTERN SERVICE

Every day we will print and illustrate a new pattern. These are the very latest and thoroughly up to date.

On receipt of order, giving the number of pattern desired and 10 cents, along with name and address, the pattern will be mailed.

Be careful as to the right number.

GIRLS' COAT.

All Seams Allowed.

This will be a season of rough materials, and as these are not suitable for any great amount of plaits, the coats will be quite plain. The model we picture is a typical Russian coat. It has the blouse belted in at the waist, the skirt is circular and the closing is on one side; the neck is quite high. A turnover collar and turnup cuffs complete the garment. The only trimming is a row of braid, which marks the closing and serves as a belt. Wide material cuts to much better advantage in these garments and should always be purchased if possible. The pattern (5138) is cut in 4 sizes — 6 to 12 years. To make the medium-size requires two yards of material 44 inches wide; two yards of braid.

The above pattern can be obtained by sending 10 cents to the office of this paper.

A FIND OF COAL

Mr. David Porter Interested in Property at Cochrane, Where Samples Were Found

A dispatch to the Toronto Star from Cochrane, Ont., says:

There is great excitement here over the discovery of lignite coal during the boring of an artesian well on the property of the Cochrane Hotel.

Only small samples can be brought to the surface, as the pipe which is being sunk is only four inches in diameter.. If anything should come of this discovery the T. and N. O. Railway Commission will be the only ones to benefit as for all the land which they have sold, the deeds are for the surface rights only, they holding any mining rights.

Mr. David Porter, of this city, built the hotel on the property, where the discovery of the coal is reported, and a short time ago disposed of the premises, retaining, however, a $4,000 equity in the hotel. He also owns 33 feet adjoining the hotel and on which is situated a drug store.

Mr. Porter recently received an offer of $5,000 which he did not accept, and last night a telegram advised him not to consider any offers for the present. At the time the hotel was being built, traces of coal were found and this latest find confirms the opinion that rich coal beds are about to be unearthed. Mr. Porter is leaving for the north country at the latter part of the week.

While the dispatch states that the T. and N. O. Railway Commission holds any mining rights, in conection with the property, it does not necessarily mean that Mr. Porter will not derive any benefits.

HELD JOINT MEETING

Epworth League of Charlotte St. and St. Jame's Church Had a Pleasant Evnenig

The Epworth League of Charlotte street church and St. James' united last evening in the latter church and held their regular weekly meeting. The members of Charlotte street league marched down to St. James' in a body and took charge of the joint meeting. Mr. R. J. Downey presided, Miss Ethel Higgins read a well prepared paper on Indian Missions in the Northwest, and Miss Annie Mountjoy, one on Mission Work in China. A solo by Mr. Downey proved a very acceptable variation, after which Mr. Jones delivered a good address on the urgent call of the west for more missionaries.

During the evening a list of missionary questions were given out to be answered by the audience and the accuracy and promptness with which they were answered was a noticeably creditable feature.

LECTURED ON HER TRAVELS

Last evening in Murray street church, the Young People's Society held an open meeting, which was addressed by Miss Kathleen Martin, president of the society. She gave an interesting and entertaining account of her travels abroad this summer and displayed excellent powers of description.

The meeting was open to all and was well attended.

A PORTLY PUFF BALL FOUND

A puff ball is what they call it, and it is 44 inches in circumference. It has a covering of outer skin that looks like the leather of a light complexioned boxing glove, and the inside of it resembles Dutch cheese.

It is not like the ordinary rough fungus that clings like a wart on an old stump, but has a more dignified appearance—not unlike a mushroom with a swelled head.

One half is at the Review office and the other half was given to Mr. Hughie Darke, and it is pronounced non-poisonous—good to eat as soup or salad.

To people in the country it may be an everyday growth of no consequence, but to us of the crushing city, where automobiles speed over the oiled streets, it's a real curiosity.

Ernie Milburn found it in Smith.

PRESENTATIONS BY THE LEAGUE

George St. Epworth Leaguers are Sorry to Lose Their President Mr. W. E. McCann

At an open and largely attended meeting of the George street Methodist church Epworth League last evening Mr. W. E. McCann, who had been an efficient and painstaking president of the society was presented with a gold headed umbrella accompanied by an address. Mr McCann left this morning for Toronto where he will reside in the future.

The address which was read by Miss McBride, was as follows:

To Mr. W. E. McCann:

From George street Epworth League.

It is with the deepest regret, Mr. McCann, that we learn of your approaching departure from our city. Since you have been with us you have revealed to us the many sided man, the man who possessed of talents, which are God-given, uses them to further God's work. Hence we find in you a captain of the league forces. We see you wielding the baton to further the interests of Apollo, and even in the Sunday school your work is praiseworthy and in general very many branches of our church are strengthened by your endeavors.

But it is especially in the capacity as president of the Epworth League of George street church that we wish to speak. Carlyle says: "Heaven's most precious gift to earth is the soul of a man sent down with a God's message to us, with these credentials—sympathy, sincerity and a zeal for righteousness." These we feel our leader possesses in no small degree. You have shown a living sympathy in all branches of the work; time was nothing when work was to be done. Behind your sincere endeavor to better your fellow companions was the earnest desire to make your own life stand out as an unselfish example of the words you uttered. You strove to show that character is a structure that rises under the direction of a Divine Master builder and the character that the architect is gradually moulding in our President is that of a manly man. We have only the best to wish you. May God prosper you as He has done. May you never be weary of building treasure-houses of precious sols for our God.

As a tangible expression of our appreciation and good-will, we ask you, Mr. McCann, to accept this remembrance.

Signed on behalf of the George street Epworth League

MISS V. MILLER
1st Vice-President.

The presentation was made by Mr. McCarroll.

During he evening Rev. Mr Couch acted as chairman. Addresses were given by Rev. J. H. Arnup, and Rev. Mr Jones, a returned missionary. A vocal solo was also given by Mr. Albert Gray

Mrs. McCann was presented with a beautiful hand painted jar.

WANTED FOOTNOTE DROPPED

And Rev. G. W. Henderson Will Tell His Congregation Why He Took This Attitude--Difference of Opinion Among Methodists Regarding the Abolition of the Famous Clause--What One Writer Says

The action of the recent Methodist General Conference at Vancouver in abolishing the foot-note of the Methodist church has caused wide-spread comment and difference of opinion. The chief argument used by those in favor of its removal was that there were many persons waiting to come into the church, but would not as long as the foot-note remained in the discipline. A letter signed by "Ashbury" appearing in the Christian Guardian, Sept. 21st, in summing up the question says that it puts it in this light; "I, a member of the Methodist church, and "John Smith,' a man of the world, are on par as far as our conduct is concerned. He can attend theatres card and whist parties, dancing parties, Woodbine races, etc., and so can I. We can both use intoxicants, or do, or perform any other act so long as we do not violate the law of the state."

In the Methodist circles of the city, the question is causing considerable agitation. Rev. G. W. Henderson, pastor of Charlotte street Methodist church, was the only representative of the Methodist church of Peterborough, present at the conference. He also made an address advocating the abolishment of the footnote.

To clear the air of any misunderstanding which may exist in the congregation and to define his reasons for taking the attitude which he did towards the matter, Mr. Henderson will on Wednesday night of this week in the parsonage, meet the members of his church and talk matters over that no in-harmonious feelings may exist in the church.

The subject of controversy is a critical question and the result of the conference between the pastor and his congregation will be awaited with interest.

DAY NURSERY FOR CHILDREN

In connection with the Associated Charities movement advocated by prominent women of this city a commendable plan has been suggested and will undoubtedly be realized. It is a plan for the caring of children of the women who work and who have no suitable place to leave their children and be assured that they will be comfortably and safely cared for. The movement will be called the Day Nursery. A room has been secured at the Y. W.C.A. which will be heated and furnished by the kindness of the Y.W.C.A. officers, and here the children may be left by the mothers, who will be satisfied with the knowledge that their children are in good hands. An experienced lady will be in charge of the little ones.

The society will hold a meeting next week to make further plans for the promulgation of the work in the city.

A SUGGESTION TO THE G.T.R.

It's never too late to mend and it's never too early to suggest.

And while the season is far in the future when the trains will be bringing their crowds back to the city from the lakes a citizen has made a suggestion which seems a good one.

"I think it would be a good idea if the train would slow up where the track crosses on Water street north, on the way to the city and let those passengers off there who might find it convenient to take a car to their homes or places of business. There are lots of businessmen to whom this would undoubtedly be a great convenience and would save them the trouble of walking all the way from the station to their offices. I have no doubt that the street railway company could make arrangements to have the trains met."

PROPERTY COMMITTEE WILL LOOK OVER LIBRARY FIXTURES

The Property Committee met last night, with Ald. Duncan in the chair.

It was moved by Ald. Bradburn, seconded by Ald. Graham, that the insurance on ambulance be cancelled and renewed with the same company.

A tender from a Toronto electrical supply firm for the supplying of the electric fixtures for the library was submitted. It was decided, on motion of Ald. Batten and Ald Bradburn, that the committee go to Toronto and inspect the fixtures. It was further decided that Dr. McPherson would accompany the committee in order to look over with the commmittee equipment and fixtures for the Isolation Hospital.

A tender from a Toronto firm also for furnishings was submitted to the committee.

The matter of the cesspool for the Isolation Hospital was left with the chairman, the opinion being expresses that it should be placed at the west of the hospital if possible.

HARVEST FESTIVAL WAS A COMPLETE SUCCESS

A complete success describes the annual harvest festival held in Park street Baptist church last evening, when a splendid supper and high class program entertained over three hundred people for some hours.

Supper was served between six and eight o'clock, and the quality and quantity of the good things served out left nothing to be desired. Everybody was satisfied.

The program immediately followed the conclusion of the supper. Rev Mr. Riddiford presided It was opened by the singing of the doxology. Rev. Mr Webb led in prayer.

A solo by Mr. Gribbs was given in splendid voice and was well received.

Chief Thompson next made a very able and earnest address. He said that he was resolved to do his utmost in his official capacity for the moral uplift of the city, and commented favorably on the high moral condition which he considered prevailed in Peterborough.

Rev. J R. Webb also made a good address.

A violin solo by Mr. A Barnes was next given.

Rev. Mr Trumpour and Fire Chief Howard made short, suitable addresses. Chief Howard's address taking a humorous bent, and in which he said he was much impressed by the good-fellowship and hospitality shown and was inclined to unite himself with the Baptist church.

Mr. A. Lees also gave a vocal solo in good voice.

The last address of the evening was given by Rev. Mr Bonner.

A solo by Mr. G Barrett was the last number on the program.

The church was very attractively decorated for the occasion.

CHANGES IN RUGBY GAME

The changes in the Rugby rules this year are as follows:

1. Mass play made impossible by the rule providing that there shall be no pushing or pulling of the man with the ball.

2. The forward pass must be made at a point at least five yards behind the line of scrimmage. It may cross the line at any point, but canot be legally caught at a point more than 30 yards in advance of that line. The players on the defence may interfere with the man about to catch the ball in any way except in a bona fide attempt to catch the ball. The penalty for an incompleted pass is one down, the ball being brought back to the point at which the pass was made.

3. The kicker must be at least five yards behind his line of scrimmage, team mates are not outside till the ball has hit the ground at least 20 yards in advance of the point at which it was put in play.

4. A tackle must have at least one foot on the ground when he strikes opponent. This rules out the flying tackle.

5. The team in possession of the ball must have at least seven men on the line of scrimmage.

6. A game consists of four periods of 15 minutes each. Between the second and third periods there shall be an intermission of 15 minutes, and between the first and second and and third and fourth, an intermission of three minutes.

7. The man receiving the ball from the snapback may advance it at any point.

8. A player taken from the game for any cause save disqualification may return once in any succeeding period.

Ty Cobb will have to play in all of the remaining games to pass Lajoie in the race for batting honors in the American League, and even then it is doubtful if he can beat out the Cleveland man Lajoie has an average of .363, and Cobb has .358. Experts figure that Lajoie, by averaging two hits a day, cannot be deposed.

Ramsay Rankin, formerly of Stratford, has gone to Montreal to resume studies at McGill University. He may play hockey with the college team.

Alex. Cameron, of Central Y.M.C.A., cleared 11 feet 11 inches in the pole vault at Montreal on Saturday. W. Halpenny, of Montreal, tied with Cameron at 11 feet 9 in. It took over an hour to settle the contest.

"There will be no Sunday game during the world's series unless President Murphy, of the Cubs, agrees to wind up the schedule for his club before October 15th," says President B. B. Johnson, of the American League.

The annual Field Day sports of the Collegiate Institute will be held in October, the date of which is yet to be announced.

Murray Kennedy is safely sheltered in the camp of the Ottawas. Kennedy is getting all sorts of prominence in these feverish days of the fall game.

Hello! Has anybody heard of Fred Whitcroft lately.

Now that Lindsay is through with the biggest of the big fairs, there should be something doing in rugby circles.

WALTER JOHNSON STRIKEOUT KING

Walter Johnson, the wonderful pitcher of the Washington American league, whom many consider the best twirler in either league, yesterday broke all pitching records for strikeouts in a single season. Rube Waddell had held the high mark of 301 in a season. Yesterday Johnson fanned 11 St. Louis batsmen and boosted his number of victims to 303, a wonderful record.

RUNNING

Los Angeles, Cal., Sept. 26.—Shattering all records for the hundred yards dash on the down grade track and covering the century in the fastest time ever made by a human being, Waldo Throop, the University of Southern California sprinter, Saturday hung up a mark of 8 4-5 seconds for the distance. Throop, who is one of the three sprinters selected to represent California in the A.A.U. championships at New Orleans in October, will ask an official timing for this new sport of running down hill, which he has developed himself.

HOCKEY AT LINDSAY

Lindsay will see no intermediate hockey this year unless something unforseen happens between now and the opening of the season. This is the statement made by several of last year's intermediate players, who have made their last appearance in Midget uniforms. There is a likelihood, however, of a junior O.H.A. team being put on the ice, as Lindsay has the material for a speedy septette.—Lindsay Post.

WILL CAPTAIN THE COLLEGIATES

At a meeting at the Collegiate Institute this morning Charlie Ray was elected captain of the rugby team. A game with the T.C.S. of Port Hope is being arranged for Saturday.

LANG LEFT THE RING

Toronto Welterweight Didn't Last One Round With Milwaukee Boxer

Buffalo, N. Y., Sept. 26.—Bob Moha, of Milwaukee lowered the colors of Hilliard Lang, the Toronto welterweight, in 2 minutes and 45 seconds of the first round of their ten-round bout here to-night. In an exchange in the first minute Moha sent Lang flat on his back with a short right jolt. Lang got up badly bleeding and made little defence. He was knocked down twice more and finally crawled through the ropes in his dazed condition and would not come back. That ended the fight, Lang being on his feet outside the ropes in his corner when the referee waived Moha away a winner. They both made weight, 145 pounds at 4 p.m.

When any one tells you that imported beers are worth the price, ask this question:

Why don't foreign brewers charge their Canadian price in their home markets?

That will end the argument. The best beer brewed is just worth the cost of ingredients and production, plus selling cost and a fair profit. Order and you'll get the best beer brewed at normal cost. Try it once and you'll know exactly why "Salvador" is called "The National Drink" by the majority of Canadians.

"Salvador" (The Famous National Drink)

"Salvador" has been pre-eminent for purity and quality for over 260 years. It is pure, sparkling and refreshing, besides possessing tonic qualities which doctors recommend.

THE CAR TO BUY
Russell-Knight
The Car Noted for its Great Power, Flexibility, Quietness and Endurance
Russell-Knight 1911 Models: 22, 26 and 38 H.P.

CRITICS CONFOUNDED

Interested critics said a year ago: "Do not buy a Knight motor, it is an experiment—in a year or two it may be all right."

Partly this is true—the Knight engine will be improved. Quite frankly we venture to hope that each Knight engine and each Russell car we make will be better than the one before. We believe that our 1914 cars will be better than those of to-day.

But this is the fact that must be borne in mind:—

The Knight engine built in its first year, by the first firm building it in a commercial way, under official observation, put up a performance which no value motor made by any firm after years of experience has been able to equal.

Is not this conclusive proof of Knight superiority?

Then consider that since that time the engineering skill of five of the leading engineering firms of the world have worked for the improvement of the motor, and have been aided by the experience of over 2,000 users.

To-day the Knight motor stands on its record in all quarters of the globe as a tested, tried-out product of superlative excellence.

In the 1911 Russell "38" you get the culmination of this work in engine design.

In Unknown Labrador.

Middlebury, Vt., Sept. 27.—Far into the wilderness of western Labrador, where no white man is known to have trod before, Prof. Raymond MacFarland of Middlebury College, has traveled in a canoe along rivers and lakes, and on foot through forests and over mountains during the past two months. With Profs. Thos. C. Brown and Phelps N. Sweet, also of Middlebury College, who accompanied him during a portion of his expedition, he returned to Middlebury yesterday. Much valuable geographical and topographical data and many interesting photographs were secured during the 900 mile trip in Quebec and Labrador.

A Million Owing.

Winnipeg, Sept. 27.—Controller McArthur stated yesterday that negligence of the C.P.R. in providing proper stock yard accommodation was sufficient provocation for collection of many thousand dollars in taxes, from which the company has been exempt for thirty years by virtue of this agreement. The controller set the total at $910,836. He said $84,264 was forfeited this year, and it was up to the city to collect the arrears.

Wilful Murder.

London, Sept. 27.—A verdict of wilful murder was returned against Dr. H. H. Crippen by a coroner's jury at the conclusion of the inquest into the death of Belle Elmore Crippen yesterday. The jury was out only a short time. Miss Leneve, charged as accessory after the fact, was not included in the verdict.

Sidney Hope, at Owen Sound, was sent to the Central for five months on five charges of burglary.

The inquest into the death of Mrs. Deline opens to-morrow afternoon at one o'clock at Havelock before Coroner Dr. Kindred.

BY THE WAY

Digging murphies now remind us,
Of the nights of toil we spent,
And departing left behind us,
Dreams which now ain't worth a cent.

Let us then be up each morning,
With a heart for any fate,
And next year see that tomatoes,
Are all covered with a crate.

Mary had a little oil,
With which she spread the street,
And every where that Mary went,
The dirt stuck to her feet.

She travelled off to school one day,
The oil stuck like a mule,
The scholars kicked and Mary got,
The teachers' hardwood rule.

A September Bride

CROUGH—SCOLLARD

Special to the Review.

On Tuesday morning, the 20th inst., a very happy event took place at St. Martin's church, Ennismore, when Mr. Timothy Jos. H. Crough was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to Miss Margaret Loretta Scollard, daughter of Mr. Jas. Scollard, both of this parish, and one of the most popular young couples in the township. The bride entered the church gracefully on the arm of her father, who gave her away. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Father Fitzpatrick, after which High Mass was celebrated. After Mass, as the young couple were leaving the church, Mrs. John P. Flood, who had presided at the organ during the ceremony, played a beautiful wedding march, accompanied on the violin by Mr. J. P. Flood and Mrs. W. D. Cavanagh. The young couple, followed by a host of admiring friends and relatives, drove to the palatial residence of the bride's father, where a chef catered to the appetites of a multitude transported with joy and mirth.

After spending a few hours intermingled with the pleasant associations of the party assembled the happy couple drove to Peterborough and took the 9 p.m. G.T.R. for Toronto, Buffalo, Cincinnati, St. Louis and Omaha, returning by way of St. Paul, Chicago, Detroit and Lindsay. The bride was handsomely attired in a pretty frock of satin "Presto" with handsome panel of ecruguipure lace and graceful folded bodice caught into buckle of own material, giving a most becoming line to the figure. She wore a veil of the Marie Antionette type and a wreath of lilies-of-the-valley and carried a bouquet of gypsophilas. She was assisted by her sister, Miss Agnes, who wore a simple and ladylike gown of satin oriental with folded high waist belt, yoke of finely tucked chiffon and bands of satin over shoulders and crescent-shaped lace motifs edged with gold ball fringe, sash at back of tucked chiffon edged satin completing an extremely pretty empire gown with a beautiful black picture hat. The groom was assisted by his nephew, Mr. Stainlaws Moher, of Ottawa.

The young couple received many beautiful and costly presents showing in no small degree the high esteem which was held for them in the community. The groom's gift to the bride was a hall-marked gold bracelet set with ruby doublets and rose point diamonds complete in case and to the bridesmaid a beautiful pearl necklace with paste jewel snap, and to the groomsman a fob of guinea gold. The young couple will reside at "Elmvale farm," Ennismore, and will be at home to their friends after October 15th.

MIDWAY SHOWS HAD NO LICENSE

Lindsay Post.

Provincial Constable Broddy, who was attending the Lindsay Central Fair Friday and Saturday, got busy Saturday afternoon, and as a result four of the midway show owners appeared in police court the same afternoon.

It appears that the four who were "pulled"—Kenny's Gay Paree, the proprietors of Corelli, the trick horse, and the man who writes with his feet—were running their shows without a provincial license, which is contrary to the law.

Magistrate Jackson heard the charge, and adjourned the cases until October 8. In the meantime if the accused take out licenses they will, in all probability, escape with a warning "to never let it occur again."

ONE OF OLD GUARD HAS TERRIBLE EXPERIENCE

Sam Hograth, a Former Local Lacrosse Player, and His Companion Tossed About on Overturned Boat in Lake Superior For Five Hours—Played Third Home Here

Sault Ste. Marie, Ont, Sept. 26.—Sam Hogart, and W. V. Van Sycle, mining prospectors, returning Saturday from the district 50 miles north of Michipicoten, relate a terrible experience. Leaving Red Sucker Cove in a flat-bottomed boat Saturday night, intending to coast to Michipicoten River, they were caught in a 50-mile gale and blown out to sea. The boat overturned, and for five hours they clung to their craft, as it was tossed about Lake Superior.

Just as the sun rose Sunday morning they were washed by the waves upon the sands of Michipicoten Island, where they lay for an hour, unable to move, and where they were found by inhabitants, utterly exhausted. The men lost their personel property to the amount of $200 and all of the mineral specimens secured from a three months' prospecting trip.

Sam Hogarth, mentioned in the above despatch, was a member of the Peterborough Intermediate Lacrosse Club twelve years ago, and in the fall, in company with another player named Mooney, left for the northern wilds. He played third home and figured in the game between Peterborough and Orillia at Toronto in 1898, for the championship of the Intermediate series. Peterborough was defeated by a score of 8—1. The team at that time was:—Goal, Dobbin; point, Lynch; cover, Brown; 1st defence, Glover; 2nd defence, Jas. McCabe; 3rd defence, McDonough; centre, King; 3rd home, Hogarth; 2nd home, Jack McCabe; 1st home, outside home, Lipsett; inside home, Mooney; field captain, Bert Dolan. Of this team only four players are no win the city, and they are:—Fred. Dobbin, R. M. Glover, Geo. Lipsett and Jack McCabe.

FUND NEARING THE MARK

The Chimes Committee were pleasantly surprised yesterday to receive a cheque for $32.20, from the secretary of the Peterborough Lock Company. On enquiry it was learned that this was the splendid result of a collection made in the Lock Works in which every single man in their employ had taken a willing part. No suggestion had been made from outside and this is a tribute to their generosity and interest.

Nearly every employee of the Canadian Canoe Company, also made a kind contribution this morning.

Mrs. S. McNeil, who is on the staff of the Rochwood Hospital, Kingston, sent yesterday a kind donation. Three citizens generously doubled their former contributions. All these generous actions brought the chimes fund up at noon to-day to $4,442.70.

FROM CLYDESDALE AND CHANDOS

Harvest Home—Concert—Threshing—Minister Leaves

(Special to the Review)

Clydesdale, Sept. 26.—"The Harvest Home" which was held at the Clydesdale Presbyterian Church, was a grand success. Dinner was served at 12 o'clock, and in the course of the afternoon a very interesting baseball game was played between the married and single men. Races were run off, and a very enjoyable time spent. Tea was served at 5.30, giving the waiters time to prepare for the concert, which was commenced at 8 o'clock. A booth was erected on the grounds, where candies, nuts, oranges, ice cream, etc. were served.

CONCERT

The concert was a brilliant success. Recitations, dialogues, songs, solos, and quartettes forming the program. The Apsley quartette was in attendance and rendered some very beautiful music.

THRESHING

The hum of the threshing mill is getting very distant. Mr. Rusau seems to be having ill luck. His mill is breaking so often.

GOOD-BYE

The people of Clydesdale are very sorry to lose Mr. Soules, their pastor, who has become very dear to them. He preached his farewell sermon on Sunday, and leaves Tuesday for his home in Toronto.

A large number of Apsley people attended the Harvest Home here on Thursday last.

The many friends of Mr. William Bristol, Coe Hill, will regret to hear of his demise, typhoid fever being the cause. The people of Clydesdale extend their sympathy to the family in their bereavement.

Mrs. A. Blackburn returned to her home on Wednesday, after spending a few days with her mother, Mrs. Swey, Coe Hill.

(Special to the Review)

Chandos, Sept. 26.—Messrs. James and Harry Roberts have returned from Peterborough, where they were attending to some business interests. The latter has purchased a fine rubber-tired buggy.

Threshing mills are very numerous now, three being within a short distance

A number from here attended the Harvest Home at Clydesdale on the 22nd.

Mrs. Albert Smith is spending a few weeks visiting friends in Peterborough and Lindsay.

The home of Mrs. Philip Tanner was the scene of a very nice little party on Tuesday night. Guests were present from Port Arthur, Clydesdale, and Loon Lake.

Mr. Chas. R. Hawkes is finishing Mr. Harry Roberts' new house.

OTONABEE

Mrs. Wm. Rutherford, of Otonabee, accompanied by Miss Jessie Rutherford, of Fenelon Falls, has just returned from a three weeks' visit with friends in Orillia and Huntsville. Mrs. Rutherford reports having a good time.

A FLOTILLA OF PETERBORO CANOES

Peterborough Craft Used on Earl Grey's Hudson Bay Expidition

Toronto Star.

In the afternoon of August 8th the wind moderated and at three o'clock the flotilla started from Norway House. It consisted of twelve Peborough canoes, his Excellency leading and setting the pace in a light one of cedar 17 feet long, with Thomas Garsen, in command of the whole company of Indians, at the bow, and "Isaac" as guide, the most dignified and courtly personage, as well as the most expert steersman of all the men in the stern, the others larger, about twenty feet long, made of basswood, and provided with sculls as well as paddles. Every canoe had, besides a sail, of which it is the standing good wish bestowed upon a departing crew that they may have occasion to make frequent use. There were twenty-four Indians in all.

It is probable that no such sight as the departure of this flotilla with its beautiful freshly varnished and painted canoes, oars and paddles glancing in the bright sunshine, amid cheers and fusilades, had ever been seen at the wharf of Norway House since the time of the magnificent Sir George Simpson in the hey-day of the power and prosperity of the Hudson's Bay Company during the third and fourth decades of the last century.

The canoes for this expedition were supplied by the Peterborough Canoe Company.

ON CHICAGO.

Dr. Heinrich C. G. Hirsch, the Viennese conductor, said recently that New York's musical taste was much better cultivated than Chicago's.

"A New York and a Chicago girl," he went on, "met at the seashore. In the twilight, while the sky flamed, pink in the sunset, and the hotel orchestra played Massenet on the terrace, the New York girl said to the Chicago girl:

"'Do you like fugues"

"The Chicago girl sighed and answered wistfully:

"No, but I adore clams."—Detroit Free Press.

CHURCH UNION

Is Favored by the Presbytery of Peterborough But They Will Submit Proposal to the People—Two Calls To Rev. Mr. Brokenshire—Moderator S. S. Burns Resigns—A Step Toward Church Union

The vital question of church union was discussed at the meeting of the Presbytery of Peterborough in St. Paul's church yesterday and many important business matters were dealt with.

CALLS TO MR. BROKENSHIRE

The session opened at 9 o'clock in the morning with the moderator, Rev. S. S Burns, of Lakefield, presiding. The meeting did not adjourn till 5.30 in the afternoon, and a special session was held in the evening to consider a call to Corbeton extended to Rev. Mr Brokenshire, of Mill street church, Port Hope.

The calls to Mr. Brokenshire were laid on the table at the commencement of the session in the morning, one from Corbeton, in the Presbytery of Orangeville, and the other from Pontypool.

Mr. Brokenshire was not in attendance but in view of the fact that he had resigned from Mill street, it was decided to accept the resignation and let the calls take their proper course.

MODERATOR LEAVING.

The Presbytery also learned with deep regret of the intention of Rev. S. S. Burns, of Lakefield, to give up his important work there in order to pursue graduate work at Princeton.

The Presbytery, learning that the consent of the congregation had been regretfully extended, decided to accept the resignation, which will take place October 25th.

A minute was prepared in reference to Mr. Burns' service to the Presbytery.

REV. DR. MARSH NEW MODERATOR.

Rev. H J. Keith was appointed interim moderator. Rev. Dr. Marsh, of Springville, will succeed Rev. Mr. Burns.

GREETINGS TO OLD MINISTERS.

A deputation consisting of Rev. A. K. McLeod, Brighton; Rev. D. A. Thompson, Hastings; Rev. H. J. Keith, Peterborough, and Mr. J. F. Clarke, Port Hope, was appointed to wait on Rev. Mr Bennett, Gilmour street, and convey to him the greetings of the Presbytery.

Mr. Bennett is the father of the Presbytery, and still retains a keen interest in the affairs of the church not only in the Presbytery, but at large. He appreciated the visit of the deputation.

A similar deputation composed of Rev. Mr. Beatty, Cobourg; Rev. Mr. Thornton, of Colborne, and Rev. Mr. Stuart and an elder from Grafton, was appointed to wait on Rev. Mr. Dineen, of Colborne, and extend to him the good wishes of the Presbytery.

READJUSTING FIELDS.

Rev. M. E. Wilson, Pontypool, of the Methodist conference, was introduced to the Presbytery. He was present for the purpose of conferring with the Presbytery on a matter in which both Presbyterians and Methodists are interested, the readjusting of certain fields within the bounds of the Presbytery. After the meeting had considered the situation it was decided to grant the committee on readjustment power to continue conference with the Methodist committee. This will probably mean that one or two stations in the neighborhood of Pontypool, Ballyduff and Mount Pleasant, will be transferred to one or other of these two churches. This will be a step towards church union.

CHURCH UNION QUESTION.

The question of church union was introduced by Rev. Mr. Beatty, of Cobourg.

The action of the general assembly, which was favorable to the union and decided to refer the matter back to the Presbyteries, was seriously considered in a debate of a couple of hour's duration. The discussion will be resumed at the meeting of the Presbytery in December at Knox church.

The Presbytery felt that it was not in a position to definitely declare itself on church union, which will mean the combining of the Methodist, Presbyterian and Congregational churches, until the views of the congregations were made known. However, from the tenor of the discussion it could be seen that the union was favored. The matter will be laid before the congregations at an early date.

Rev. Mr. Thompson, of Hastings, was appointed to represent the assembly at the 75th anniversary of the Omemee congregation, which will be celebrated in the near future.

SIMCOE COUNTY WOMAN GUILTY OF CHILD MURDER

In Her Own Testimony the Girl Says Crime Was Committed at the Instigation of Thomas McNulty, the Former Tavern-Keeper.

Barrie, Sept. 28.—Probably never in the history of Canadian courts has a more pitiful story been unfolded than was brought out yesterday during the trial of Mary Dolan, charged with the murder of her infant child. Although the jury returned a verdict of murder against her, it was accompanied by a strong recommendation to mercy, which Justice Britton said would be respected.

In outlining the case to the jury, G. Tate Blackstock, K.C., crown prosecutor, said the girl was more sinned against than sinning. Mary Dolan, 24 years of age, came of respectable family. Some years ago she formed an intimacy with Thomas McNulty, a tavern-keeper at Uptergrove, who was married, with two children. Three years ago a child was born, which Mary Dolan placed in charge of friends. Her intimacy with McNulty was resumed, and in July, 1909, another child was born in Toronto. On March 26 last the woman left Toronto with the child, took a train to Hawkstone, and was seen walking along the track in the direction of Orillia. She stranged her babe with a cord, placed the body in a valise until reaching the Narrows, when she dropped it in the water.

Giving evidence in her own behalf, the young woman said the crime had been done at the instigation of McNulty, by whom she had been kept in the stable loft of the Grand Central Hotel, Orillia, from October until February, except for two weeks, while she was in a delicate state of health. There she lived alone, never going out, and the only food she obtained was carried to her by McNulty. There was no furniture, and no stove in the loft, and it was bitterly cold, snow coming in through the roof. McNulty refused to give her money to board out. Her bed was two horse blankets.

Several times the prisoner broke down, and once she sobbed aloud. "My heart is broken." The painful impression in the court was intensified by the fainting of Constable Wright in the witness-box.

When the jury retired, McNulty was also placed on trial accused of murder.

ROOSEVELT WINS THE FIRST ROUND IN NEW YORK FIGHT

Is Elected Temporary Chairman of the Republican State Convention and Routs the Old Guard—Roosevelt Eulogizes Taft.

Saratoga, N.Y., Sept. 28.—Theodore Roosevelt rode yesterday on the top wave of victory, defeating Vice-President Sherman for temporary chairman of the Republican State Convention, and bowling over the old guard in the first engagement of a series of conflicts that are to come.

After he had named the members of the three important committees, and the convention had adjourned to meet to-day, he said to the newspaper men: "I said 'frazzled,' you may recall. You may quote me on that."

At Troy Monday the former President said he would beat his opponents to a frazzle.

There were 1,013 votes cast in the convention yesterday, of which Col. Roosevelt received 568 and Sherman 445, a majority of 123 for the former President. There was no motion offered to make the selection unanimous. Woodruff named as the committee to escort Roosevelt to the platform Vice-President Sherman and Cornelius V. Collins of Rensselaer.

VICE-PRESIDENT SHERMAN.

When Sherman reached Roosevelt's seat he put out his hand with a grin, both men smiled and then Roosevelt started for the platform with Sherman right behind him, and Collins bringing up the rear. Sherman stepped forward, and in stentorian tones said: "Your selection for chairman, Col. Roosevelt."

Col. Roosevelt spoke feelingly of what President Taft had accomplished in his administration, in his speech as temporary chairman, saying that the laws passed reflect high credit upon all who helped enact them; that they are an earnest forecast of the achievement which is yet to come, and that the beneficience and far-reaching importance of this work measure the credit which is rightly due to the congress and "to our able upright and distinguished President, Wm. Howard Taft."

The spectators and many of the delegates warmly applauded Mr. Roosevelt's declaration for a direct primary plank.

Col. Roosevelt also bitterly assailed the bosses, declaring that "the difference between a boss and a leader is that the leader leads and the boss drives. The difference is that the leader holds his place by firing the conscience and appealing to the reason of his followers, and that the boss holds his place by crooked and underhand manipulation.

Wilkee, Sask., Sept. 28.—Constable Vincent of the R.N.W.P., was drowned in Snider Lake, nine miles northwest of this town. He was shooting, and had gone to the lake to bring the ducks out.

WHERE WAS JARDINE AT TIME OF ANDERSON MURDER?

Evidence of Jardine Family Regarding His Whereabouts on the Night of the Crime Are Contradictory—Adjournment Until Oct 5.

Goderich, Sept. 28.—An inquest was opened last night by Coroner Holmes into the death of 16-year-old Lizzie Anderson, whose nude body with throat cut, was found in the basement of an unoccupied house Sunday morning, after she had been missing several days. Nine witnesses were heard, including the parents, brother and sister of the dead girl, Mrs. Jardine and her four sons, Edward, Albert, Charles and Thomas; and Mame Spatore, the Italian who boards at the Anderson home.

The evidence of the Jardine family was contradictory as to Ed's movements on the fatal Tuesday night. His mother insisted that he and his brothers had slept in a tent outside the house that night; the boys said that they had slept in the house; Ed. and Thomas agreed that they at least had also, after arising, gone to the tent for another rest, while Charles said he didn't think they had. Mrs. Jardine and Charles said Ed. had had supper at home that night, while Ed. insisted he had lunched at the fair ground with Charles.

Adjournment was made at a late hour until Oct. 5.

No other headway toward solution of the mystery was made yesterday, beyond it being practically proven, from persons who had seen her at the fair grounds, that she was alive at 10 o'clock the night she disappeared, while Mrs. Donald Buchanan and her mother, Mrs. Milton, who live only a short distance from the scene of the tragedy, state that they heard screams that night between 11 and 12 o'clock. They twice heard screams about five minutes apart.

Wesley Anderson, father of the victim, was the first witness. The last time he saw Lizzie was Tuesday morning. He was at home when the son arrived, about 10 p.m., without her, and went up town to see if she was with her sister at the Colborne Hotel, where the latter worked. When he returned he asked one of the Italian boarders if he had seen her and was told that he had about 8 o'clock, when he asked her what time she was going home, telling her to wait a few minutes and he would go home with her. She had promised to wait, but he could not find her when he returned. Witness did not think his daughter allowed any improper attentions, and did not think the girl would go with strangers. Lizzie was subject to fits, the last being last winter. She used always to fall down when taken with a fit.

He did not think Mame Spatore, the Italian boarder, carried a knife of any kind. Inspector Greer here examined the knife of the witness.

Rubena Anderson, eldest sister, employed at the Colborne Hotel, said that Albert Jardine came Monday to the Anderson home and said he was very sorry about the tragedy. Albert had been there at previous times, and had visited her also at the hotel. Spatore had taken Lizzie and Ethel Devine for a drive once, but Lizzie had never gone for a drive with any other young man.

Willie Anderson said that when he saw his sister last, she was watching the races and said she was going home about 9 o'clock, that Ed. Jardine was going to meet her at the corner near the collegiate institute and take her home. Lizzie had promised to wait for him (witness), and he had watched at the main entrance until all the people had come out, and also looked through the grounds before starting for home without her. He heard the clock strike 10 before he reached home. Her father went up town in search of the girl about 11, returning about midnight, and witness and father and mother went out about one hour later as told in the father's evidence.

Mrs. Jardine said that Ed. had come home about 8 o'clock, and that he and Albert went out to their sleeping tent, but later came in and slept in the house on account of the cold. She admitted having told Inspector Greer and Crown Attorney Seager previously that the boys had spent the night in the tent, and when pressed for the truth, she said that neither of the boys slept in the house that night, that after Ed. came home, he mentioned having seen the girl standing at the fence about 7 o'clock and had given her 15 cents to get her supper, also that he had seen her about 7.30 at the chicken house, standing with a man dressed in a dark brown suit with a fedora hat, in which was a red ticket. When Mr. Anderson called in the morning, asking about Ed., witness had told him he was sleeping in the tent.

Two Men Arrested.

London, Sept. 28.—Two vagrant characters, giving their names as Horsey and Stevens, are held by the police, charged with burglary, but who are also suspected as having possible knowledge of the Lizzie Anderson murder at Goderich.

Horsey, who is about 33 years of age and claims to belong to Baltimore, Md., had an old diary in which was the vague entry: "Good-bye, dear, I killed——." Also, he has some 30 pictures of young girls, not obscene, but just portraits, that would indicate that he is "girl crazy." In view of the suspicion entertained that the murder was committed by two men, the police will make a thorough enquiry. The men admit having been up in the district of late, and say they were in Clinton, which is twelve miles from Goderich.

Will Defend Crippen.

London, Sept. 28.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—Marshall Hall and Huntley Jenkins will defend Dr. Crippen, and P. E. Smith and H. F. Barrington Ward Miss Leneve, in the trial, which opens Oct. 13, and will last about four days.

LIEUT-GOVERNOR FRASER DEAD

Former Political Leader in Nova Scotia Passes Away, Aged 65.

Halifax, Sept. 28.—Lieutenant-Governor D. C. Fraser, who has been at his summer home at Guysboro all summer, took a turn for the worse Monday, and died yesterday morning. His son, Allister Fraser, was summoned from Halifax, and was at the bedside.

Duncan Cameron Fraser, D.C.L., LL.D., was born in New Glasgow, N.S., on Oct. 1, 1845. He was the son of Alexander Fraser and his wife, Ann Chisholm, whose parents came to Pictou County from Inverness-shire, Scotland. Duncan was educated in the public and normal schools in Truro, and was for some years a school teacher. He left teaching to enter Dalhousie University, where he graduated B.A. in 1872. In the following year he was called to the Bar of Nova Scotia. He afterwards entered municipal politics and was mayor of New Glasgow for two terms.

In February, 1878, he was called to the Legislative Council of the province, and became a member of the Cabinet, but he resigned his seat in the council the same year to run for a seat in the Assembly. Ten years later he was again called to the Legislative Council and to a seat in the Cabinet, becoming Government leader in the Upper Chamber. Three years later he once more resigned his seat in the council, having an ambition to enter Dominion politics, and contested Guysboro at the Federal general elections of 1891. He was elected, and was also returned at the general elections of 1896 and 1900.

In 1904 he resigned his seat in the Ottawa House on his appointment as a judge of the Supreme Court of Nova Scotia. He held the position a little over two years, and on March 27, 1906, he was sworn in as Lieutenant-Governor of Nova Scotia.

REFUSED THE APPLICATION

Port Hope, Sept. 28.—At a meeting of the Board of Railway Commissioners held here yesterday the application of George Nicholas Smith of the Township of Clarke, for an order directing the Canadian Northern Ontario Railway Co. to construct an overhead bridge across the applicant's property, on lot No. 3 concession 4, Township of Clarke, was refused.

Judgment on the questions of protection at the crossing of the Grand Trunk Railway Co. at the base line near Whitby Junction, and of the application of the Canadian Northern Ontario Railway Co. for authority to divert Princess street, in the village of Orono, for leave to construct its railway across the public road, between lots 10 and 11, concession 4, in the Township of Clarke, were reserved pending reports of the engineer of the commission, Mr. Mountain.

GAYNOR'S REASONS FOR STAYING

New York, Sept. 28.—If nominated for governor at Rochester, Mayor Gaynor will refuse to accept the nomination. In a letter to James Creelman of this city, written Monday, and made public yesterday, he definitely eliminates himself as a possible candidate in language so plain that he says "every honest man will understand me."

He says in part: "I could not abandon to their fate the splendid men whom I have appointed to office, and who are working so hard for good government, nor could I abandon the people of the city of New York after so short a service."

LATE TICKS FROM WIRES

Mrs. George Martel threw herself from a window at Montreal and was killed.

The fifth biennial convention of the Irish League opened in Buffalo yesterday.

The trial of A. McNeil, treasurer of the Embro School Board, on a charge of embezzlement, has been again postponed.

Earl Wilkinson and Sam Davidson were badly hurt at Ottawa by the collision of an automobile, in which they were riding, with a bridge.

The police of Berlin clashed with strikers in the city streets, and in the fight that followed used swords and revolvers against the bricks and stones of their assailants.

SEMBRICH ATTACKED BY ROBBER

Lausanne, Switzerland, Sept. 28.—Mme. Marcella Sembrich narrowly escaped death at her villa here Sunday night, when a man, who had presumably entered for the purpose of robbery, attacked her companion, Fraulein Berta Meilke, known in America as Miss Frieda, in the grounds surrounding the house. The prima donna rushed to her friend's assistance and was herself attacked, but succeeded in driving off her assailant.

The police believe that the man intended to kill Mme. Sembrich. Fraulein Mielke has been Mme. Sembrich's constant companion for twenty years.

A MASTERLY DOCUMENT

London, Sept. 28.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—A. E. Ashinwall, secretary of the West India committee, says the report of the West Indies' Commission is a masterly document, and generally speaking is decidedly favorable. Indeed, many of the suggestions made have been embodied in a memorandum which the committee has submitted to the royal commission, and has now been adopted.

The Globe hopes its evidence and conclusions will not be quietly pigeon-holed but thoroughly debated and acted upon.

The Westminster Gazette says if at the end of it all the Canadian Government does seriously mean not to continue its preference unless it gets reciprocity on revenue tariff, the report of the commission makes the best of a bad job, and does so with the least possible disturbance of existing system.

PRESBYTERIAN HOME MISSIONS

Toronto, Sept. 28.—At a meeting of the executive of the home mission committee of the Presbyterian Church, Dr. Sommerville reported that the expenditure since April 1, including the payment of claims, which alone had aggregated $49,657, amounted to $117,426, and the receipts $28,355, leaving the fund in debt $89,070. The revenue last year was $208,000, an advance on contributions of the previous year of $51,000, of which amount $37,000 was raised by special convass, and, accordingly the increase from ordinary sources amounted only to $14,000.

The estimated expenditure for the current year was $214,000. In order to meet its obligations next spring, the committee will require from ordinary sources about $77,000 more than was provided last year. The committee recommended that these facts should be brought to the notice of all congregations.

MANGLED BODY FOUND ON TRACKS

Toronto, Sept. 28.—The mangled body of a man, believed to be A. G. Tait of Ottawa, from papers found in the pockets, was found yesterday afternoon beside the G.T.R. tracks, in rear of the Sunlight soap works, at the foot of Eastern avenue, by Geo. Banks of the American Hotel. It may have been there several days.

The pockets were found to contain a ticket case bearing the name A. G. Tait. There were also three insurance tags. Two were those of the C.P.R. Accident Insurance Co., one numbered 206,762, and the other unnumbered. The third was from the Dominion of Canada Accident Insurance Co. At the office of the former company it was learned that the number quoted would be issued at Ottawa.

It is thought the man was walking on the tracks when struck. He was about 25 years of age, five feet ten inches in height, medium build and smooth shaven. He wore a black suit, tan shoes, a black fedora hat, a soft woolen shirt with a soft collar.

EDMONTON TO FORT WILLIAM

Winnipeg, Sept. 28.—On Saturday next the G.T.P. takes over from the National Transcontinental Commissioners the section between Winnipeg and Superior Junction. The section west of Winnipeg will at present be used for grain traffic and freight only.

"RED WALLY" WAS DEPORTED

Toronto, Sept. 28.—Walter Higgins, known as "Red Wally," who enjoys distinction in police circles as an expert pickpocket, short-change artist, with varied other accomplishments of similar ilk, was arrested Monday night on the T., H. & B. train at Bridgeburg.

DECIDED TO MARRY HER FIRST LOVER

Montreal, Sept. 28.—A strenuous Atlantic romance ended in the marriage of young and pretty Ethel Gertrude Thomas of London, Eng., and George Stuart Richards of Winnipeg. The girl came to Canada on the last trip of the Allan liner Sardinian to wed Thomas, but on the trip made such an impression on Victor Turner, a London journalist, that she agreed to throw over Richards and wed the scribe. Both sought employment in Montreal, Turner joining the staff of The Gazette.

Mr. Richards, who had come from Winnipeg to meet his bride-to-be, at once laid information with the immigration authorities, who took charge of Miss Thomas and asked her to decide whether she would marry Richards or go back to England at the cost of the Immigration Department. She decided to marry her Winnipeg lover.

The fight resolved itself into the question as to whether the crime which Federenko committed in Russia was a political crime or not.

COMMITTMENT WAS ILLEGAL

Montreal, Sept. 28.—Mr. Justice St. Pierre has dismissed the case against A. J. Lemieux, who was before the Court of King's Bench for robbing one of the members of the Emancipation Lodge, so Lemieux will go back to the Police Court. The judge said that the committment was illegal, as it had not been signed when given to the grand jury, and he added that if the employe had committed the blunder intentionally, he should at once be dismissed from the service. The supposition is that the irregularity was committed with a view to save Lemieux.

HIS GRAVE A VERY DEEP ONE

Kamsack, Sask., Sept. 28.—A funeral service, attended by circumstances that are unique in the history of Canada, took place Saturday on the farm of John Bowes, 16 miles south of here. At the top of a 73-foot shaft that had been sunk for a well, and at the bottom of which lay the remains of Elwer Olson, aged 35, of Yorkton, Rev. J. Morrison conducted the service for the dead. The shaft has been closed up, and the body will remain in this deep grave. Olso was overcome by coal gas while digging the well.

SUICIDED IN PUBLIC GARDENS

More than 200 priests of the church also will find it convenient to be absent from the banquet, to which they were invited by their lay brothers, the Knights of Columbus.

Hearst's "Unselfish Devotion."

New York, Sept. 28.—W. R. Hearst in an interview in Paris, cabled to The New York Herald, says positively that he will not be a candidate for governor next fall, but to "prove my unselfish devotion to the cause," he says, "if the Independents shall nominate a sound Progressive for governor, I will accept the nomination for some minor office on the ticket, and do my best to elect the head of the ticket and bring out the Independent vote."

BONUSING

The Toronto Star gives the Sentinel-Review, of Woodstock, a rap over the knuckles for its advocacy of the bonus systemThe Star is right. Municipalities that bonus industries are in wrong. Why should Woodstock or Dunnville, or any other ville, set a man, or a body of men up in business? Ask Davie Hastings, editor of the Dunnville Gazette, what he thinks of the two industries that that natural gas town voted hard cash for. The cash is gone and so are the industries.

TO-NIGHT

To-night the opera house opens for the season, when the Aborn Grand Opera Company will produce The Bohemian Girl, Balfe's romantic opera. We can congratulate ourselves upon our churches, we can congratulate ourselves upon our factories, and we can congratulate ourselves upon our opera house and its management. The show to-night is high class. The season is open and with the opening of the season and the rolling up of the curtain will come a production that leaves no bad taste in the mouth when one is homeward bound. J. J. Turner & Son do not cater to the lewd, they strive to stir the nobler passions. That said, what more can be added.

MISINFORMED

Rev. G. W. Henderson, pastor of the Charlotte street Methodist church, says we are misinformed. We will not deny this. The blame is on the other fellow. He says that we were right when we say he was at the General Conference in Vancouver. when the celebrated footnote was discussed. He does not deny that the letter signed "Ashbury," appeared in the Christian Guardian in September, a few days ago. He does not deny that the question of dancing and card playing is a live issue in the Methodist Church of Canada. But he does deny that there is any misunderstanding in his church about the matter, which our informant said was the case. Our informant was a member of the church. However, we're in wrong, we apologize and leave the matter on the conscience of the member who told us.

NO TARIFF REDUCTION

When Sir Wilfrid Laurier was out west he was a great free trader. He was anxious to see the tariff lowered. The revision was to be downward. All was very pleasing to the low tariff sentiment of the prairies. With the Premier was Mr. E. M. Macdonald, M.P., for Picton, who duly made speeches backing up his leader. When the tour was over Mr. Macdonald went east to Pictou, was given a reception there, and lost no time in assuring the people of Nova Scotia that the talk of tariff reduction was all moonshine. The Halifax Chronicle, the leading Liberal journal of the province, reported this part of his speech as follows—

"Mr. Macdonald clearly enunciated the policy of the Liberal party as affecting the tariff question. They had the same policy in the west as in the east. The people of the west did not want free trade any more than those in the east, and they ascertained that the only shouting for free trade in the west came from the Tory camp. He believed that the future of Nova Scotia was wrapped up in its manufactures, and there would be no tariff changes to disturb them.

"The motto of our neighbors to the south had been to look out for number one, and previous to fourteen years ago it had been almost the annual custom of the Conservatives to send delegates on tariff missions to Washington. Now the order was changed, and the missions were from Washington to Ottawa and Canada, through Sir Wilfrid, intended to look out for number one. Some rough spots in the tariff would be smoothed out; but no change will be made that would interfere with the British preference, or with the vested interests of men who had put their money in the east. The policy he declared was that the tariff would be maintained as it is, only remedying where it unduly presses."

There you have the Liberal policy. Promise revision downwards in Saskatchewan. Promise maintainence of the tariff and full protection for manufacturers in Nova Scotia.

TURN ON THE SEARCHLIGHT

In these days of reported graft and knavery and of investigations that are often superficial and only serve to cover up instead of disclose, there is one instance, right under the control of the Laurier Government. That such graft could have gone on in the printing department, almost passes belief. So far the true facts, only, have been made public, and Printer and Publisher, the trade paper of the publishers of Canada, calls for further information, and says:—

"The printers and publishers of Canada have a peculiar and vital interest in the investigation at the Government Printing Bureau at Ottawa, and are anxiously awaiting an announcement from the Government of the names of the manufacturers or supply houses who are implicated in the scandal, together with full particulars in connection therewith. It has been admitted that a cleverly arranged system of fraud and rake-off has been in operation for a number of years in the purchase of paper and other supplies for the Bureau, but beyond this, little information of value has been given.

It is true—and thankful we are for the knowledge—that no Canadian house has been mentioned in connection with these disclosures. It is altogether probable, however, that in these days of close international commercial relations, some of the foreign houses implicated in the scandal number among their customers many Canadian printers and publishers. The printers and publishers of Canada are therefore entitled to specific information in connection with these disclosures for their guidance and protection in future purchases of supplies.

Nor is the interest in this phase of the question confined to the members of the craft in Canada. The eyes of the printing fraternity of the United States are upon Ottawa in this matter, for a reflection has been cast upon the supply houses of that country. The individual printer of the United States is interested with his Canadian confrere in the identity of the firms who are willing to stoop to fraud, and possibly to bribery, in the sale of their product.

Commenting editorially upon a statement in our July issue that United States concerns were implicated in the disclosures, the Inland Printer, one of the leading United States trade journals, says, in part:

"If this be true, humiliation should burn into the soul of every honest American. It were enough to shoulder the rottenness unearthed within our own borders, but to be accused of extending the graft market into the dominions of our neighbors is, or should be, the last straw.

"It is to be hoped that our Canadian colleague is mistaken, and that a further investigation will clear our skirts of any connection with the corruption of the Printing Bureau at Ottawa. But, be that as it may, printers should be the first in the fight to purge the nation of its corrupting influences! Every vestige of party prejudice should be swept aside in the interest of honest men and honest measures, and a supreme effort put forth, not only in the defence of the printing industry, but of every other business, andof our country."

Considerations of policy and expediency may have prevented the Secretary of State from taking the public into the confidence of an earlier date. But if the investigation has been conducted with the vigor and aggressiveness demanded by the exigency of the case, it should now be sufficiently advanced to permit of an announcement along the lines herein suggested. We have suffered, as Canadians, the humiliation of these disclosures in our Government Printing Bureau. We are entitled as Canadian printers and and publishers, to the knowledge that will enable us to show through our individual purchasing departments our opinion of the manufacturer or dealer who becomes an active party in the contemptible practices that have been the source of this humiliation."

I know that others wait like me,
But, oh their eyes! They strike me blind.
'Tis when they're kindest that I see,
Now she's away, how hers were kind.
The word each heart with good intent
Speaks from the sorrow it knows,
Reminds me that the sweetest scent
Comes with the wind that strews the rose.
And every clasp they reach to still
The ache, and show they understand,
But proves the whole world cannot fill
This hand that's empty of her hand.

The Real Bargains Go to Those Who Read the Ads

Ninety-nine per cent. of the real bargains in the stores go to those who read the store advertisements.

The other one per cent. go to those who casually drop on the bargains in the rush of shopping.

If you can't afford to be one of the "one-chance-in a hundred" people, read the store ads, and learn of the bargains straightway.

And as 99 per cent. of the bargain getters are ad. readers, so 99 per cent. of the real bargain givers are advertisers. When you read all the advertised bargains, you know about all the bargains in town that are really worth while.

The Round-Up

A Romance of Arizona

Novelized From Edmund Day's Melodrama

By JOHN MURRAY and MILLS MILLER

Copyright, 1908, by G. W. Dillingham Co.

With the thought of the evening in the garden when he heard Jack and Echo pronounced man and wife surging over him Dick murmured, "What God hath joined together let no man put asunder."

"That's what the book says," answered Jack. "But when hands alone are joined and hearts are asunder it can't go on record as the work of God."

Dick bowed his head in his hands. "I don't understand."

Stubbornly Jack pursued his message to Dick. "She doesn't love me. I thought I had won her, but she married me with your image in her heart. She married me, yet all the while you were the man she loved—you—you—and in the end I found it out."

Jack's voice sank almost into a whisper as he finished his revelation to Dick, who raised his head and cried, "And yet she broke her faith with me"—

Jack arose in his misery. His task was harder than he expected. Dick was forcing him to tell all without concealing even the smallest trifle of his shame.

"She thought—you were dead. I never told her otherwise. I lied to her—I lied to her."

"She never knew?" asked Dick joyfully. "The letter"—

"I never gave it to her," answered Jack simply.

Dick leaped to his feet, pulling his revolver from his holster. "And I thought her false to her trust!" He aimed his gun at Payson's heart. "I ought to kill you for this!"

Jack spread out his arms and calmly replied, "I'm ready."

Dick dropped his gun and slipped it into the holster, with a gesture of despair. "But it's too late now—too late!"

In his eagerness to tell Dick the way he had solved the problem Jack spoke nervously and quickly. "No, it isn't too late. There's one way out of this—one way in which I can atone for the wrong I've done you both, and I stand ready to make that atonement. It is your right to kill me, but it is better that you go back to her without my blood on your hands."

"Go—back—to her?" questioned Dick as the meaning of the phrase slowly dawned upon him.

"Yes," said Jack, holding out his hands. "Go back with clean hands to Echo Allen. It is you she loves. There's my horse up yonder. Beyond there's the pack mule loaded with water and grub—plenty of water. We'll just change places, that's all. You take them and go back to her, and I'll stay here."

Dick walked toward the spring, but a spell of weakness came over him, and he almost sank to the ground. Jack caught him and held him up.

"It would be justice," muttered Dick, as if apologizing for his acceptance of Jack's renunciation.

Leaning over his shoulder, Jack said: "Sure, that's it, justice. Just tell her I tried to work it out according to my lights. Ask her to—forgive—to forgive, that's all."

Jack took off his canteen and threw the strap about Dick's neck. As Lane weakly staggered toward the mouth of the canyon, where the horse had been staked out, Jack halted him with a request:

"There's another thing. I left home under a cloud. Buck McKee charged me with holding up and killing 'Ole Man' Terrill for $3,000. Tell Slim Hoover how you paid me just that sum of money."

"I will, and I'll fix the murder where it belongs and then fix the real murderer."

Jack stepped to Lane's side and,

"I ought to kill you for this!"

holding out his hand, said: "Thank you. I don't allow you can forgive me?"

"I don't know that I could," coldly answered Dick.

"You'd better be going."

Again Dick started for the horse, but a new thought came to him. Pausing, he said, "She can't marry again until"—

"Well?" asked Jack. His voice was full of sinister meaning, and he fingered his gun as he spoke.

Dick realized at once that Jack's plan was to end his life in the desert with a revolver shot.

"You mean to"— He shuddered.

Jack drew his gun. "Do you want me to do it here and now?" he cried.

Staggering over to him, the weakened man grappled with his old friend, trying to disarm him. "No, no! You shan't!" he shouted as Jack shook him free.

"Why not?" demanded Jack. "Go! There's my horse—he's yours—go! When you get to the head of the canyon you'll hear and know—know that she is free and I have made atonement."

Dick slowly moved toward the mouth of the canyon, still hesitating.

From the hillside a rifle shot rang out. The ball struck Dick in the leg. He fell and lay motionless.

Pulling his revolver, Jack stooped and ran under the overhanging ledge, peering about to see where the shot had come from. He raised his gun to fire when a volley of rifle shots rang through the canyon, the bullets kicking up little spurts of dust about him and chipping edges off the rocks. Jack dropped on his knees and crept to his rifle, clipping his revolver back into his holster.

Crouching behind a rock, with his rifle to his shoulder, he waited for the attackers to show themselves.

Experience on the plains taught them that the fight would be a slow one unless the Apaches sought only to divert attention for the time being to cover their flight southward. After the one shot which struck Dick and the volley directed at Jack not a rifle had been fired. Peering over the bowlder, Jack could see nothing.

Dick had fallen near the spring. He struggled back to consciousness to find his left leg numb and useless. When the ball struck him he felt only a sharp pinch. His fainting was caused by a shock to his weakened body, but not from fear or pain. With the return to his senses came a horrible, burning thirst and a horrible sinking sensation in the pit of his stomach. He lay breathing heavily until he got a grip on himself. Then he tore the bandanna handkerchief from his neck and bound up the wound, winding the bandage as tightly as his strength permitted to check the blood flow.

"What is it?" asked Jack over his shoulder.

"Indians. The Apaches are out. I'm bit!" gasped Dick. He crawled painfully and slowly to Jack's side, dragging his leg after him. He pulled with him his rifle, which he picked up as he passed from the spot where it had fallen in his first wild rush for water.

"The soldiers told me at Fort Grant about the Apaches being out," Jack whispered hoarsely. "I thought they'd cross the border into Mexico."

Seeing a spasm of pain over Dick's face, he asked, "Are you hurt bad?"

"I don't know. My left leg is numb."

Both men spoke scarcely above a whisper, fearing to betray their positions by the sound of their voices. Dick lay on his back, gathering strength to ward off with rifle and revolver the rush which would come sooner or later.

Jack caught the sound of a falling stone. Peering cautiously over the rock, he saw an Indian creeping up a draw toward them. Throwing his rifle to his shoulder, he took quick aim and fired. The Apache jumped to his feet, ran a few steps forward and fell sprawling. A convulsive shudder shook him, and he lay still.

"I got him!" cried Jack exultantly as he saw the result of the shot.

But the exposure of his head and shoulders above their barricade had drawn forth more shots from other members of the band.

The bullets struck near the two men, showing that the Apaches had the range.

Dick's wound was bleeding freely, but the shock of the blow had passed away, and his strength returned. Drawing his revolver, he crept closer to Jack, crying, "I can shoot some!"

"I reckon you haven't more than a flesh wound," encouraged Jack. "Can you crawl to the horse?"

"I think I can," answered Dick.

"Then go. Take the trail home. I'll keep these fellows busy while you get away."

An Apache had crawled to the head of a draw and crossed the butte into a second ravine, which led to the trail down the cliff side. On his belly he had wormed his way up the pathway until he overlooked the rear of the defensive position the two men occupied. Screened by a ledge, he waited a favorable shot.

Jack again cautiously raised his head and peered over the barricade. Still not an enemy was in sight. As the Apaches had ceased to fire, he knew they were gathering for another simultaneous rush.

In the breathing space which the Apaches had given them, Jack, who had resigned himself to die, took a new grip on life. His dream of atonement had worked out better than he had planned. Selling his life by bravely fighting in a good cause was far, far better than ending it by his own hand. It was a man's death. Fate had befriended him in the end.

He waited a favorable shot.

Reaching his hand out to Dick, he touched his shoulder, rousing him from a stupor into which he was sinking.

"Quick, Dick. They're coming closer. Go," he ordered. "Don't be a fool. Only one of us can escape—one of us alone. Let it be you, Dick. Go back to her—back to home and happiness."

Dick struggled to a sitting posture, offering a fair target for the Indian hidden behind the ledge on the cliff trail. The Apache took full advantage and fired, but missed. Dick returned the shot with his revolver before the warrior could sink back behind the rock. The Apache lurched forward in his death blindness with the last convulsive obedience of the muscles ere the will flees. Then his legs crumpled up beneath him, and he toppled forward off the ledge. His breechclout caught in a rocky projection, causing the body to hang headlong against the side of the cliff. His rifle fell from his nerveless hands, clattering and breaking on the rocks below.

Dick returned the shot.

Apaches. A volley crashed up and across the canyon. Both men fell locked in each other's arms, then lay still.

The Indians awaited the result of the shots. The strange actions of the men might be only a ruse. Silence would mean they were victorious.

The sight served as a tonic to Dick. His success braced his strength and will. The old battle spirit surged over him. Only with an effort did he suppress the desire to laugh and shout. He would have left Jack to fight it out alone but a minute before, but the one shot drove all such ideas from his mind.

"No, I'll be hanged if I'll go!" he shouted. "I'll stay and fight with you," and, seizing his rifle, he joined Jack in stopping a rush of the Apaches.

"We stopped them that time," Jack cried, with satisfaction. In the lull he again urged his comrade to escape to the horse and return to Echo. "Take the horse," he insisted. "Go while there's a chance."

"No!" shouted Dick determinedly. It was as much his fight as Jack's now.

Jack thought more for Echo in that moment than he did for himself. Here was the man she loved. He must go back to her. The woman's happiness depended upon it. But Jack realized that while he was alive Dick would stay. One supreme sacrifice was necessary.

"Go," he cried, "or I'll stand up and let 'em get me."

"No; we can hold them off," begged Dick, firing as he spoke.

Swiftly Jack Payson arose and faced the Indians.

"Goodby!" he cried to his comrade.

Dick struggled to his feet and threw himself on Jack to force him down behind the barricade. For a moment both men were in full view of the

To Oppose Howitt.

Guelph, Sept. 27.—Organizer Inwood of the provincial Liberal party headquarters at Toronto was in the city yesterday conferring with Liberals with respect to the convention Wednesday afternoon. It is understood local Liberals are forced into a contest by orders from Toronto that every riding is to be contested.

William Laidlaw, secretary of the Guelph and South Wellington Agricultural Society; Nicol Jeffery, a prominent Liberal lawyer, and Mayor G. D. Hastings, are among the probable candidates, and Mayor Hastings says that, as his second year's term as mayor was almost concluded, he may accept the nomination, if honored with it.

Swedish Girl's Love Tragedy.

Vancouver, Sept. 27.—The finding yesterday of the body of a woman on Bowen Island, has cleared up the mystery surrounding the disappearance of Esther Johnson. She and Peter Pearson were engaged three years ago in Sweden, and the man came to the Canadian West to prepare a home for her. Here he met another woman, and when Esther arrived she found herself supplanted in Pearson's heart. She asked for a last meeting on the night of Aug. 17. Nothing had been seen nor heard of the broken-hearted girl since.

Entire Cadet Corps Arrested.

West Point, N.Y., Sept. 27.—With the entire cadet corps of the United States Military Academy under close arrest for administering the "silent" affront to Capt. Rufus E. Longan, instructor in tactics, a military board of enquiry is investigating the mystery surrounding the cadets' action.

No report of the finding of the board will be made public until the return to West Point of Major-Gen. Thomas H. Barry, the new superintendent of the academy, who is expected to-day or to-morrow.

LADIES' SKIRT.

All Seams Allowed.

The skirt we show above is one we use for dressy occasions and will develop very handsomely in any of the soft and sheer materials. The skirt is made in the five-gored model, the front gore being perfectly plain and a close fit; the side and back gores are gathered at the waist line and several rows of shirring may be used if desired. The back gore falls to the bottom of the skirt, while the front and side gores are fitted into a band. A box-plaited flounce near the bottom completes these gores. This skirt may be made of voile, chiffon or any of the soft satins. A very stylish one would be of pale green messaline satin, with a band of velvet of the same shade. The pattern (5147) is cut in sizes 22 to 30 inches waist. To make the skirt in medium size will require five yards of material 44 inches wide.

The above pattern can be obtained by sending 10 cents to the office of this paper.

RELIEVED OF HIS MONEY

Lakefield Resident Had $15.00 Taken from His Pockets at Street Car Barn.

A resident of Lakefield came to the city yesterday and last night fell among thieves.

During the day, he imbibed of too much "trouble fluid" and according to his statements, was taken to the street car barn on King street, by several companions and relieved of $15.

During a scuffle in one of the cars a window was broken. A telephone message to the police station brought an officer and the visitor was found very drunk.

He was taken to the station and this morning pleaded guilty to a drunk charge.

The Magistrate thought that as he had lost the $15, he was entitled to go free.

A September Bride

SUTTON—EDMISON.

The residence of Mr. and Mrs. Moses Sutton, was the scene of a fashionable and charming wedding on Wednesday, September 21st. when their daughter, Miss Mabel Sutton, formerly of Peterorough teaching staff, and Rev. A. K. Edmison, B.A., of Demorestville, were untied in holy matrimony. Rev. J. N. Clarry, of Cavan, officiated at the ceremony, which was performed in the presence of a large number of guests, mostly relatives of the contracting parties.

The bride was very prettily attired in a beautiful suit of cream peau-de-soie with the bridal veil and orange blossoms, and carrying a bouquet of white astors. She wore a black picture hat, Miss Purser, of Port Hope, who was bridesmaid, was also attractively gowned in pele black silk organdie and carried pink astors.

Miss Kathleen Smith made a very pretty flower girl. The bride was given away by her father. The ceremony was performed on the lawn and immediately afterwards a dainty wedding supper was served. About fifty guests were present. The house was prettily decorated with choice white blooms.

Dr. Turner of Millbrook, conveyed the party to the station, where they took the five o'clock C.P.R. train for a weddingl trip to Toronto and Western Ontario. On their return they will reside at Demorestville and be at home to their friends after October 14th.

Before leaving on the trip a snapshot was taken of the bridal party on the lawn. Both were the recipients of numerous presents.

Some of the guests present were Mr. Mrs. and Miss Edmison, of Toronto; Dr. Edmison, of Hastings; Mr. and Mrs. Purser, of Port Hope, and Melville Staples, Toronto.

Have your films developed and printed by McDermid and Jury. They will be done promtly and at reasonable prices. Try them and see.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

The Review does not hold itself responsible for opinions expressed by its correspondents

To the Editor of the Review.

Sir,—"Fair Play" is certainly unfortunate in his choice of a disguise under cover of which he would strike as a society and a work that is honored and respected by every section of the citizens of Peterborough when he ingeniously attempts to identify social work with strictly church work he is clearly astray. To say he is in good faith is to pay but a poor compliment to his intelligence. If to contribute to the T.A.S. be equivalent to aiding Catholicism, then our friends of the local option movement and the License Commissioners must be Jesuits in disguise. Would "Fair Play" have us infer that to make people temperate is to start them on the road to Rome? If so the other deduction is not very flattering to "Fair Play's" co-religionists. Your correspondent, in his solicitude for the T.A.S., fears Father McColl's action will not "elevate" that Society. Put your own house in order, my friend. Why not try and "elevate" the Y.M.C.A. above collecting and circulating? Why not "elevate" St. John's above asking money for the chimes? And he thinks Father McColl is inconsistent! Poor consistent (?) "Fair Play". After all, what's in a name?

ANTI-HUMBUG.

P.S—Will "Fair Play" play fair and give us his name?

$50.60 Collected in Fines at the Police Court — Rode on the Sidewalk.

In all of the eleven informations, a plea of guilty was entered and judgment in each case was a $2.00 fine and $2.60 costs.

Several paid the amount and those who did not have the necessary, were given ten days grace.

An incident was furnished through two of the offenders not having the correct change. Each had a five dollar note and both were graciously allowed out of the court room by the chief to make the change.

The offenders were:—N. Camille, red Weir, Murray Miller, Arthur Winston, Thos. McCarthy, Rayford Kelly, Wm. R. Turner, Sid. Revoy, Geo. Gray, Reuben Alexander, Bertram Read.

TO-MORROW NIGHT'S THE NIGHT

If the campaign for 500 new members, which has been the talk of the city for the past two weeks, has done nothing else, it has done a big thing in the way it has enlisted the services of a dozen of the young men of the city in an effort worth while. It has been stated frequently in these colums that the men are working. And that means that these men are being developed in executive ability. It means more than that, in the fact that these young men feel that they have a part in a great enterprise, and that they are responsible for this very important part of the life of Peterborough.

The reception to-morrow evening promises to be a very pleasing part of the campaign. Arrangements are now, all but completed for this great event. The physical work will be of unusual interest, for besides the regular class work there will be a fast game of basketball potatoe races and a host of other things in the gymnasium. The swimming will be in charge of the Association swimming instructor, and a fine new springboard has just been installed by Mr. Thompson. An exhibition of life-saving will be on the program, which ought to be seen by every young man who ever takes a young lady out in a canoe.

Mr. Gray is again in charge of the bowling alleys and will see that the bowlers are well looked after. Those who have played on the alleys say that they are in first-class shape.

The applicants for the Educational Classes are now being enrolled. Any young man who would like to take up Mechanical Drawing or Shop Arithmetic should get his name in right now. There is also a chance of a class in electricity being formed and taught by a competent teacher. Get your name to the secretary at once if you would like to get into that class.

There is no doubt that the Debating Club will be a huge success this season. The men who are interested in this department are extremely enthusiastic about it.

The new members are still rolling in, but there will have to be some hustling if the 500 mark is to be reached.

Young men, keep in mind the reception on Thursday night. You can drop in at any time in the evening and go out when you please. You will be made welcome, and you will not be worried. Neither will you be patronized. You will be treated as a man by as manly a body of men as you will find in Peterborough. Drop in and see.

SUFFERED FOR YEARS

Says Pe-ru-na Completely Restored Health.

MRS. CHAS. GROS LOUIS.

MRS. CHAS. GROS LOUIS, Indian Lorette, Quebec, Can., writes:

"For years I suffered from a disease that the doctors did not understand.

"One day I read in the paper about your excellent remedy, Peruna. I procured a bottle of it and took it according to directions. It was not long until I observed a change for the better.

"I can say that Peruna has cured me. I could not take any nourishment except milk.

"I will at all times say a good word for Peruna. I hold it in the highest esteem."

Not only women of rank and leisure praise Peruna, but the industrious, useful women engaged in manual toil would not be without Dr. Hartman's world-renowned remedy.

The doctor has prescribed it for many thousand women every year and he never fails to receive a multitude of letters like the above, thanking him for his advice, and especially for the wonderful benefits received from Peruna.

THAT TANTALIZING TUNE OF THE BELLS AND WHISTLES

A request for aid to assist her till she was able to work, was received from Mrs. Warner, 699 Harvey steet, was referred to the Charity Board by the Manufacturers' Committee last night. A letter was received from Mrs. Warner in which she stated she was walking along Smith street east Harvey, on Sunday, Auugst 10th, when a board sprang up and she was thrown to the ground and injured.

Mr. E. H. D. Hall had a letter before the committee on behalf of the tenants of Fleming Terrace, who objected to the whistling of trains at the rear of the property. Mr. Clarkson, of the street, also filed a letter of objection. Miss Peck wrote to the committee objecting to the incessant bell-ringing by the trains in Ashburnham at hours when the people wanted to sleep.

In connection with the first complaint, it was moved by Ald. Duffus, seconded by Ald. Gillespie, that a bylaw to restrict the whistling be prepared, but as much as the committee regretted the annoyance of the Ashburnham people, owing to the bell-ringing it was thought that it was impossible to remedy the trouble as the company were quite within their rights in ringing the bell.

A petition was read headed by F. J. R. Mitchell, was presented on behalf of the residents of Dublin street, objecting to the sawmill as a nuisance. No action was taken and Mr. Mitchell will be communicated with to this effect.

A SCATHING JUDGMENT

Magistrate Expresses Himself Strongly in Pronouncing Sentence for Revolting Crime

Prisoner Had Nothing to Say and Broke Down On Receiving Severe Sentence

In the matter of the King vs. Samuel Oliver:

On the twentieth day of September, 1910, at the Court House in the city of Peterborough, the prisoner was brought before me charged with having at the Township of Smith, in the County of Peterborough, on or about the month of June, 1908, then being the father of one Jessie Oliver, had criminal intercourse with the said Jessie Oliver, his daughter, and did thereby commit incest contrary to the provisions of the Criminal Code.

R. E. Wood, County Crown Attorney, appeared on behalf of the Crown to prosecute, and Mr. Kerr appeared for, and on behalf of the prisoner, and the charge having been read over by me to the prisoner, I explained to him that he might with his own consent be tried by me, and that if he desired to be tried by a jury he was entitled to be so tried, and after consultation with his counsel he consented to be tried by me, and stated he did not wish to be tried by a Jury. I then again read over the said charge to him and asked him to plead thereto, and he then pleaded guilty, and was convicted on his own confession, and was remanded for sentence until to-day, and before pronouncing sentence, I now ask the prisoner if he has anything to say why sentence should not be pronounced, and as no good cause is shewn, I pass sentence as follow:

You SAMUEL OLIVER, now stand convicted on your own confession of the abominable revolting crime of incest with your own daughter, Jessie Oliver, who at the time was only between fifteen and sixteen years of age, and from all the information I have been able to obtain regarding her, it appears that she was not a girl of strong mind or will, but scarcely competent to take care of herself, and one liable to be led astray by any evil minded companion, and instead of watching over and protecting her, as it was your duty as a father to do, you, in order to gratify your own beastly lust, took advantage of her weakness and debauched and led her to ruin, and she has borne a child, of which you admit you are the father—the very thought of such a thing is enough to cause one to shudder. The unfortunate child, through no fault of its own, but owing to the close relationship of its parents, can scarcely be expected to be otherwise than defective in mind and body, and you have made no provision for the care or maintenance of this unfortunate child, which is now, and likely will be so long as it lives, a burden upon the general public, to be cared for and maintained, and by your conduct you have not only hopelessly ruined your daughter, but have also brought disgrace upon your wife and your other children, and I am advised that your wife for a time was so stricken with grief over you conduct that she actually went insane and had to be cared for in an asylum for some time. Fortunately, however, she has recovered, and for all this horrible state of affairs you, and you alone, are properly being held responsible, and it is now my very unpleasant and painful duty to pronounce such sentence against you as the law demands for this horrible crime you have committed—the maximum penalty fixed by the Criminal Code for such offence is fourteen years' imprisonment and also to be whipped, but fortunately for you, the law gives me a discretionary power if I think it right to exercise it, to reduce this penalty, and although there appears few, if any, extenuating circumstances, I have, in the exercise of my discretion, determined to reduce the maximum period of imrpisonment by one-half. The sentence of this Court, therefore, is that you are to be imprisoned in the Provincial Penitentiary at Kingston at hard labor for the term of seven years, and that besides such imprisonment are to receive thirty strokes with the cat-o-nine-tails, fifteen of such strokes to be administered some time during the last three months of the first year, and the other fifteen some time during the last three months of the second year of your said imprisonment.

Dated this 27th September, 1910.
GEO. EDMISON,
Police Magistrate, County of Peterborough.

"THE BOHEMIAN GIRL"

In speaking of a production of such high standard as "The Bohemian Girl," it seems almost sacreligious to refer to the elaborate staging and effects and other methods which are so prominently featured in advance in connection with everyday musical productions, but it would not be doing justice to the artistic stagecraft of the Messrs. Milton and Sargent Aborn if a tribute were not paid them for the beautiful background they have given Balfe's masterpiece, which appears at the Grand this evening.

The piece is magnificently set, the stage dressings lending the proper environment to this beautiful opera, rich in tunefulness and romance.

Until the present engagement of "The Bohemian Girl," Peterborough has never been privileged to witness one of the celebrated Aborn productions, and the large sale for the offering at the Grand to-night indicates that the public are fully aware of the splendid production that awaits them.

The principals of "The Bohemian Girl" are among the most prominent operatic stars of the continent, and are assisted by a picked chorus of brilliant singers.

A feature of the performance of the opera is the fine accompaniment and assistance of the specially selected orchestra of eleven pieces.

PETERBOROUGH LOCK COMPANY

(Want Assessment of $25.000 for Ten Years)

ASKED FOR FIXED ASSESSMENT

Hon. J. R. Stratton, President of the Peterborough Lock Co., and Mr Thomas Fortye, manager of the company, waited on the Manufacturers' Committee last night and made application to have a fixed assessment of $25,000 granted the company for ten years. Mr Stratton said that the Lock Company had made considerable improvements to the plant, the cost of which, when completed, would amount to $40,000 or more, and had also increased the staff of employees by at least forty.

Mr. Fortye said that Mr. Stratton was conservative when he mentioned forty as the number.

"It's the first time that Mr. Stratton was ever conservative," ventured Ald. Duffus

Mr. Stratton said the company hoped with the new facilities to triple the output.

After careful discussion it was moved by Ald. Bradburn, seconded by Ald. Duffus, that the committee recommend to the council that a fixed assessment for $25,000 for 10 years be granted for municipal purposes, including business assessment.

A blue print was submitted by Messrs. B. F. Ackerman, Son & Co., showing the course of the proposed railway siding to their factory at Dalhousie street, and the committee was requested by the company to have the blue print before the railway commission at an early date.

The city will consent to the building of the siding on the usual terms.

THE COMING OF THE CHIMES

The William Hamilton men yesterday joined the procession for the chimes fund, fifty three giving donations totalling $19.00 The visitor to this big iron works cannot but be impressed by the large operations of the company, and by the advantage to the city of its creditable reorganization in late years, after its honorable career in times gone by.

A full report has come in from the girls' department of the Quaker Oats Co. through Miss M. Godfrey, showing seventy-eight subscribers and $12.75 in cash. This is a fine showing.

Eighteen employees of J. J. Turner & Sons sent in $5.50 through Miss Daisy Kingdon. This is the second instalment received from this company.

These returns, including so large a number of individuals, brought the fund at noon to-day up to $4,468.95.

BOARD OF TRADE.

At a recent meeting of the Norwood Board of Trade when the possibilities of the future of our village was fully discussed by the business men of the place, it was suggested by some that in view of the nature of the soil and climate to the production in large quantities of garden vegetables and small fruit that it would be a good thing if a canning factory could be started here. Mr. Yourex has a splendid site on the old Cummings carding mill property with plenty of water and a limited waterpower. Some are of the opinion that a joint stock company could be formed and the canning business carried on with a substantial profit. However, before any-
Mr. O. Johnston has gone to Peter-thing definite should be done it was deemed wise to make full and careful inquiries as to the probable cost and to the general details of the business. Mr. Yourex and Mr. John Fennell were appointed to visit some of the factories at present in operation and report the results of their investigations to the Board at an early date. Consequently Messrs. Yousex and Fennell left on Tuesday morning to carry out the directions of the Board of Trade.

WHY NOT.

If any body of patriotic men went to blow themselves to boom Norwood why not buy Rotten Lake, situated about six miles north of here, which is a marl bed of almost unlimited extent and start a cement factory?

Suffragettes Rotten Egged.

London, Sept. 28.—The Suffragettes opened their first campaign Monday at Ashton-under-Lyne. Thousands of men and boys surrounded the market place where the meeting was to have been held and pelted the women with rotten eggs and vegetables. SPORTING

HAL CHASE A MANAGER

New York, Sept. 26.—Hal Chase, peerless first baseman, is the manager of the Highlanders, vice George T. Stallings, deposed. President Frank J. Farrell made this formal announcement this afternoon, at the end of a three hours' conference with Stallings, at the club's offices. Mr. Farrell issued the following statement;

"Mr. Stalling has been relieved of the management of the team, and I shall notify Captain Chase that he is permanently in charge of the Highladners, with absolute authority. The charges lodged against Chase by Stallings have been investigated thoroughly, and have been shown to be unfounded.

"The elevation of Chase to the management of the team is not an experiment. He is a great player, and I think he will make a splendid leader."

"I do not care to say anything," remarked Stallings. "I am out of the club, and Chase is the new manager. That is all the fans want to know, so what's the use of talking any further."

KEN OVEREND IN DEMAND

The team is in danger of losing one of last year's scrimms in Ken. Overend, who was here trying supplementary exams. If Overend does not take classes he is not eligible for the team. It is reported Hamilton Tigers are after him for their scrimmage. If Overend goes, Queen's loses a man who held his own with any scrimmage in the Intercollegiate last year. Ken. is, in addition, a sure tackle and a good runner.—Kingston Standard.

CONNIE MACK'S DOUBLE PLAY

The wedding will take place after the world's series. Connie intended keeping it a secret, but couldn't refrain from whispering the glad tidings to Eddie Collins who informed his teammates. Then the news leaked out and Connie has since been busily engaged in opening messages of congratulations on his two big wins.

A HINDU LEGEND.

How the First Man and the First Woman Lost the Garden of Eden.

Brahma made up his mind to make the world and a man and woman. He made the world, and he made the man and then the woman and put them on the island of Ceylon. According to the account it was the most beautiful island which man can conceive—such birds, such songs, such flowers and such verdure! And the branches of trees were so arranged that when the wind swept through them every tree was a thousand aeolian harps.

Brahma when he put them there said, "Let them have a period of courtship, for it is my desire and will that true love should forever precede marriage."

Then they had their courtship, with the nightingale singing and the stars shining and the flowers blooming, and they fell in love. Imagine that courtship—no prospective fathers or mothers in law, no prying and gossiping of neighbors, nobody to say, "Young man, how do you expect to support her?" Nothing of that kind. They were married by the supreme Brahma, and he said to them: "Remain here. You must never leave this island." Well, after a little while the man said, "I believe I'll look about a little."

He went to the northern extremity of the island, where there was a little narrow neck of land connecting it with the mainland, and the devil, who is always playing pranks with us, produced a mirage, and when he looked over to the mainland such hills and vales, such dells and dales, such mountains crowned with snow, such cataracts clad in bows of glory, did he see there that he went back and told his wife: "The country over there is a thousand times better than this. Let us migrate." She, like every other woman that ever lived, said: "Let well enough alone. We have all we want. Let us stay here."

But he said, "No; let us go." So she followed him, and when they came to this narrow neck of land he took her on his back like a gentleman and carried her over. But the moment they got over they heard a crash and, looking back, discovered that this narrow neck of land had fallen into the sea. The mirage had disappeared, and there was naught but rocks and sand, and then the supreme Brahma cursed them both to the lowest hell.

Then it was that the man spoke. "Curse me, but curse not her. It was not her fault. It was mine."

The supreme Brahma said, "I will save her, but not thee." And then she spoke out of her fullness of love, out of a heart in which there was love enough to make all of her daughters rich in holy affection, and said: "If thou wilt not spare him, spare neither me. I do not wish to live without him. I love him." Then the supreme Brahma said, "I will spare you both and watch over you and your children forever."

Ready to Talk.

A very brilliant Irish lady some years ago arranged that Mr. Lecky should meet an able and famous Irishman of very advanced opinions in politics. It was intended that they should exchange views, and the Irishman had a good deal to say about Mr. Lecky's later work and was well able to put what he had to say in the most effective language. The door opened, and Mr. Lecky was announced. He was introduced to the Irishman, and before the latter had time to say anything the historian began a political harangue which he kept going without cessation the whole time he was there. The Irishman at first tried to break in with a word, but he was swept away, as it were, in the unceasing flow of Mr. Lecky's language, so after a time he sat in amused bewilderment, waiting until nature gave out. But when Mr. Lecky felt he was getting exhausted he rose from his chair and shook hands with the hostess and her guest, keeping on talking all the time. They came out with him to the top of the staircase, but could not get a word in edgewise even then, as he talked all the way down to the door and was even in an unfinished sentence when the door was shut behind him. They looked at each other and roared.

First English Book on Sport.

The first book on sport ever printed in the English language was a rhymed treatise called the "Boke of St. Albands," it author being a woman, Dame Juliana Berners. Its second edition was printed by Wynkyn de Worde in 1496. A descendant of her family, Lord Berners, was the translator of Froissart's "Chronicles." It is true that old manuscripts existed, such as the "Venerie de Twecy" of the time of Edward II., but it was Dame Juliana who was the real ancestress of sporting literature in England, for she also composed an essay on hawking and another on "Fishing With an Angle," the last being of such excellence that Izaak Walton himself did take a hint from its pages.

A Titled Kleptomaniac.

A titled kleptomaniac almost a century ago was the Countess of Cork. She had a reputation for stealing any thing she could lay her hands on, whether it was useful or valuable or not. Once, when leaving a country house where she had been staying, she saw and quietly picked up a hedge hog that was crossing a hall, a pet of the porter's, and took it away in her carriage. Finding it an uncomfortable foot-warmer, she decided to dispose of it at the first town where she changed horses and then offered it to a confectioner in return for a sponge cake.

Before Marriage.

Fuddy—There would be fewer unhappy marriages in the world if men and women would try to find out each other's disposition during courtship instead of doing their best to deceive one another.

Duddy—Yes, I guess there would be, as you say, fewer unhappy marriages. In fact, there would be fewer marriages of any kind, I guess.

THE CAR TO BUY

Russell-Knight

The Car Noted for its Great Power, Flexibility, Quietness and Endurance

Russell-Knight 1911 Models: 22, 26 and 38 H.P.

CRITICS CONFOUNDED

Interested critics said a year ago: "Do not buy a Knight motor, it is an experiment—in a year or two it may be all right."

Partly this is true—the Knight engine will be improved. Quite frankly we venture to hope that each Knight engine and each Russell car we make will be better than the one before. We believe that our 1914 cars will be better than those of to-day.

But this is the fact that must be borne in mind :—

The Knight engine built in its first year, by the first firm building it in a commercial way, under official observation, put up a performance which no valve motor made by any firm after years of experience has been able to equal.

Is not this conclusive proof of Knight superiority?

Then consider that since that time the engineering skill of five of the leading engineering firms of the world have worked for the improvement of the motor, and have been aided by the experience of over 2,000 users.

To-day the Knight motor stands on its record in all quarters of the globe as a tested, tried-out product of superlative excellence.

In the 1911 Russell "38" you get the culmination of this work in engine design.

Send your name to receive new catalogue of Russell 1911 models with prices.

Wanted to Leap Into Niagara.

Niagara Falls, Ont., Sept. 27.—Otto Williams, who essayed to slide across the river on a tight wire during the carnival here in June, landed in the Police Court over the river yesterday, because he declared he would leap from the upper bridge into the river. "Just to show that I can go Larson and Leach one better." He was fined $5 by Judge Piper, who advised him that his feats might be appreciated more in Toronto, and he had better go back there.

Williams is a former Toronto steeplejack, who spent the latter part of the summer in a Toronto amusement place under the name of Great Houdin. When the police interfered with Williams he was dressed in tights ready for the leap.

SOCIAL CONDITIONS IN BELGIUM

In a letter addressed to the Hon. Sidney Fisher, Minister of Agriculture, Mr. Thomas Cote, Assistant Commissioner-General for Canada at the Brussels Exhibition, analyses certain features in the Statistical Year Book of Belgium, of which the volume for 1909 has just been published. The analysis deals principally with the movement of population in Belgium as indicated by the statistics in the Year Book of births, marriages, deaths, emigration and immigration. By the courtesy of Mr. Fisher we are able to make the following extracts from Mr. Cote's communication:

POPULATION OF BELGIUM.

On December 31, 1908, the population of Belgium had risen to 7,386,444, or 650 per square mile. During the decade, 1890 to 1900, the population of Belgium has increased at the rate of about 10.28 per cent Belgium, thus, as regards increase of population, taking fifth place amongst European countries, and after Germany, Holland, Italy and Switzerland. This proportion of 10.28 per cent in Belgium is reduced to 1.61 per cent in France.

In point of density of population Belgium comes next to Saxony, which has 778 per square mile and leaves far behind those other countries whose rate per square mile is still very high, viz., Holland 460, Great Britain 458 and Germany 290. If the figures be examined by region or by arrondisement, we make some curiuos discoveries, for we find that the population follows a regular movement of decrease in the arrondisement of Philippeville, Virton, Ath and Marche, while in a dozen arrondissements the increase is over the average. This is especially marked in the arrondissements of Antwerp, Ostend, Brussels and Charleroi. We find therefore, a growing concentration in urban industrial centres to the detriment of those that are mainly agricultural.

EMIGRTAION AND IMMIGRATION.

The growth of a country's population depends upon three factors: Migration births and deaths. In Belgium the first of these factors has but a relative significance. In 1908 the excess of immigrants over emigrants was 5 861. There were then altogeth 38.155 immigrants, chiefly from France, Holland and Germany, compared with a total of 32,294 emigrants. Belgians emigrate little In 1908 32,294 persons quitted Belgian territory, but 82 per cent of these emigrants went into France, Germany and Holland. It is not probable that all the remaining 18 per cent went to America. The statistics of the Canadian Government agent at Antwerp show that an average of from 1,800 to 2,000 Belgians proceed annually to Canada. If therefore, Belgium in 1908 lost 32,294 of its citizens she had an immigration of 38,155, or an excess of 5,861 immigrants over the emigrants.

A DECLINING BIRTHRATE.

Births play another important part. In 1908 the absolute number of births was 183,834, a decrease of 15,243 from the figures of 1901. This is the more noteworthy since the total population of 1908 exceeded by 585,445 inhabitants the total population of 1901. Since 1901 the number of births has constantly, and the extent of this decline becomes more marked if the births be compared with the total population. The proportion of births to population, which was 32.47 per 1,000 during the period 1867-1876, fell to 28.29 during the period 1897-1906. At present it is 24.89. The four provinces of Limburg. Luxemburg and Western Flanders give us the highest birthrate in proportion to population. Elsewhere there is a decrease which is especially marked in the provinces of Liege and Brabant. Thus in Belgium, as in most Europen countries, there is a fall in the birthrate.

INFLUENCE OF THE MARRIAGE RATE.

This phenomenon of a falling birthrate causes uneasiness, because it does not correspond with any decrease in the number of marriages. From 1907 to 1908 there was, it is true, a certain decline, 57,564 marriages in 1908, against 58,560 marriages in 1907, but the proportion of marriages per 1,000 inhabitants was higher in 1908 than it was, for example, in 1890 or 1870, which were the periods of high birthrate. While therefore, statistics do not explain, they are not without interest in proving that countries with a high marrirate. While therefore statistics do not explain, they are not without interest in proving that countries with a high marriage rate, are not necessarily those of a high birth rate. Thus France has recorded as many as 80 marriages per 100 inhabitants, and yet we know what appaling results are indicated by the French annual statistics. At any rate in Belgium, side by side with the maintenance of a satisfactory marriage rate, there is a decline of births. whilst there is also a relative decrease in the number of illegitimate births. In 1881 the number of illegitimate births was 7.20 per cent. It rose during the period 1891 to 1900 to 8.40 per cent. At present it is 6.16 per cent.

Notice now the increasing number of divorces. In 1908 there were 892, or one divorce for every 65 mariages. In 1840 the proportion was one divorce for 1,175. Since 1890 the increase in the number of divorces has made laarming progress.

STATISTICS OF MORALITY.

When we come to deaths the official statistics are more reassuring. The absolute number of deaths in 1908 was 121,964, or 16.51 per 1,000. In fact the proportion of deaths shows a constant decline. The fall is especially striking if we consider that Belgium had formerly the proportions of 24.47 (1855) and 28.50 (1871.)

DECREASE IN EPIDEMIC DISEASES

Analyzing these statistics more closely and comparing them with medical statistical information we find that since 1880 epidemic and infectious diseases have diminished in intensity. The number of deaths caused by smallpox scarlet fever, croup and typhoid have materially decreased. But epidemic diseases, chronic diseases of the lungs and respiratory organs, continue to exact a large toll. Moreover, there is a regular increase in the deaths due to violent causes.

LARGER PREVALENCE OF SUICIDE

The number of suicides increases. There was from 1871 to 1880, upon the average, one suicide per 12,146 inhabitants. Belgium had sadly lowered this proportion to one suicide per 7,616 inhabitants. Belgium had sadly lowered this proportion to one suicide per 7,616 inhabitants. In 1908 the absolute number of suicides was 970. At the same time we must take account of the uncertainties which govern this matter and of the difficulties experienced in determining the wilful or accidental nature of the deaths.

JUVENILE SUICIDES.

What is most lamentable to find is the growing frequency of suicide amongst young people or young girls under 16. Thirteen young people in 1908; 11 young girls. From 1907 to 1908 the number of suicides in this category has doubled. The figures reveal an evil more alarming than is shown by similar symptoms in Germany and France.

THE BRUSSELS EXHIBITION.

What has here been stated as to emigration does not indicate that our participation in the Brussels Exhibition has not been greatly useful to Canada, although in my opinion it will do little to bring us Belgian colonists. Our participation in the Brussels Exhibition will have the effect of making us better known in all the countries of Europe, such as Holland, Germany, etc., whose citizens have come in great numbers to visit our pavilion. It will also have the result, I am sure, of considerably extending the commercial relations between Canada and Belgium.

SAMUEL OLIVER WAS A MISER HID HIS MONEY

Samuel Oliver, who received the heavy sentence yesterday, and supposed by all to be practically a penniless man, confessed after his trial to having a sum of money hidden beside his house close to the brick wall. High County Constable Cochrane and the accused, with a couple of others, immediately went up and unearthed a large quantity of money at the place where Oliver said it was buried.

The money was taken to Mr. F. D. Kerr's office and counted this afternoon, and the sum amounted to eighty-five dollars, all in silver.

The money will be handed over to the Children's Aid Society, by which two boys, children of Oliver, have been kept.

The oldest boy, who is fourteen, is now employed in the country, while the youngest, who is two and a half years' old, is still at the Shelter. The money will go towards meeting the expenses which the Society has been under in keeping the children.

AN INTERESTING PROGRAM

The 57th Regimental Band, under the direction of Mr. R. Gliddon, will give the first of its series of popular concerts at the armories on Friday night by kind permission of Lieut.-Col. Stevenson and the officers of the regiment.

The band will be assisted by Miss Lavina Hallihan, Miss Katie Leary, reader, and the Ark Quartette. A silver collection of ten cents will be taken to defray the expenses incidental to the concert.

The programme will be as follows—

March—Semper Fideles.......... Sousa
Overture—Semiramide.......... Rossini
Soprano Solo—Killarney..........
Miss Lavina Hallihan
Idyll—Mill in the Black Forest.......... Eilenberg
Reading—Selected..........
Miss K. Leary.
Selection—Lauder's Songs..........
Selection—(Humorous.)..........
Indian Intermezzo—Silver Bell.......... Wenrich
Soprano Solo—Selected..........
Miss Lavina Hallihan
Grand Descriptive Overture—.......... La Fremersburg

The following is the synopsis of this interesting standard number—

The margrave's (knight) horn, echoed by the mountains, is heard summoning the huntsmen and the fanfare heard first in the distance, then drawing nearer, indicates their approach. Signal for the hunt to commence. During the rustic scene which follows, the horns are heard both near and in the distance. Song of the country folk (solo with refrain and dance). During dance a storm approaches, wind rises, and the peasants' dance becomes more animated. A peal of thunder stops the dance—the peasants rush shrieking away to seek shelter. The lightning flashes—the storm grows in intensity—at last it bursts forth in full fury—rain falls in torrents—thunder crashes.

The Margrave, who has been overtaken by the storm, is heard crying for help—in vain—the noise of the storm drowns his appeal. Overcome by weariness, the Margrave falls to the ground. Suddenly he hears the monastery bell and the chant of the monks. Following the sound, he finds the Fremersberg. The storm ceases, and the retainers, who have been seeking the Margrave, find him at the monastary. All join joyfully in the "Te Deum."

YOUNG MAN WAS FINED FOR DISORDERLY CONDUCT

A young man who disbehaved himself on George street last Thursday night was assesed $2.

His explanation was to the effect that two companions were on their way to meet a couple of young ladies and he endeavored to persuade them against this step and tried to pull them down George street.

P. C. Newhall told a different story. The officer stated that there was a gang of young fellows on the Brock street corner, who by their jostling about made it unpleasant for passers-by. They were told to move on and when some distance away, the young man passed a profane remark.

Tell the truth the next time, was the magistrate's advice to the defendant.

Ambulance Class

Much interest and enthusiasm was evinced last evening at the Young Women's Christian Association, when the details were arranged for the forming of an ambulance class, under the direct teaching of the St. John's Ambulance Association, of London, England. A large number registered, and the first lecture under Dr. M. McCullouch will be given on Thursday evening, October 6th, in the parlor at the above institution, at 8 o'clock sharp. As the first lecture has not yet been entered upon, further members may be registered in the class, and it is hoped a large number will steadily avail themselves of this opportunity. The classes will be held weekly on Thursday evenings at the above place and hour. There is no better way to gain such useful information and knowledge, and it is what every young person oftentimes has great need for in after years.

There are 70 elementary Board schools in Glasgow.

PRESENTATION IN SMITH TOWNSHIP

The following address was read on Thursday evening at the home of Samuel Rosboro, Smith Township. The recipient of the address and present was Arthur E. Rosboro. Mr. Rosboro left for Toronto on Monday. He will attend Victoria College.

The gift consisted of a handsome suit-case and a brush.

THE ADDRESS.

Dear Fellow Worker,—It is with sincere regret that we learn of your intended departure from among us, but we congratulate you on the success which has attended your studies, and made this move possible, although we know it has been achieved by diligent study and perseverence.

During the time you have been among us as an active Christian worker your energy and sincerity have been the means of helping to uplift many of your associates. We realize it has not always been easy for you to take the stand you have. The discouragements and difficulties have been many, and the encouragements, we fear, have not been what you deserved, but through it all, by your zeal and faithfulness, you might well have put to shame some of us who have carelessly ignored many opportunities to help some one. When we remember how faithfully and regularly you have attended the Sunday and mid-week service, and how carefully and efficiently you have performed the duties which fell to your lot, and then remember some of the flimsy excuses we have given for staying at home, we feel we are about to lose a valued worker.

We believe, however, that though we can not always have you with us a larger field of labor is opening to you, and we trust your influence may be a power for good among your new associates.

And now, we feel we cannot permit you to leave us without showing you some mark of our appreciation. Therefore, we ask you to accept this little gift as a token of our regard for you, and as you make use of it in future years, think of those whose wish it is that you may make many staunch friends, whose acquaintance will prove of mutual benefit.

Signed on behalf of Fairview Epworth League and Sunday School,

J. ELLIOTT.
CECIL GRAHAM.
HAROLD BELL.

SIX TON BOILER CARTED TO LOCK CO. BY WHITE BROS.

The cartage firm of White Bros. undertook a big proposition yesterday and carried it out with much more success than many interested spectators thought possible.

The proposition was the removal of a six ton boiler from Wm. Hamilton's foundry to the Peterborough Lock Manufacturing Co. This was brought about by a truck and one team of horses. Bets were freely offered on the arrival of the boiler at the entrance of the Lock Co. that the load would not be taken over the sidewalk and into the yard, but right here the job was done, and done well for with Mr. Maurice Tobin on the controlling end of the ribbons, the team produced the goods and the boiler is now resting in the yard awaiting a further disposal.

PADDED HIS BOOKS; NEILSEN TAKEN BACK

Harry Neilsen, the man arrested here at the request of the Philadelphia police, was taken back to that city to-day at noon, by Detective Le-Strange.

Neilsen is wanted on a charge of embezzlement, to the amount of $2,000, and also for jumping his bail of $1,500, which was furnished by Dr. W. Kelsey, of Philadelphia.

Neilsen, it is charged, while in the employ of Peter Thompson & Co., of Philadelphia, as a clerk, made false returns in his books. This was in March and in May he left for parts then unknown.

It is now known that he worked as a waiter for some time in Toronto before coming here.

Originally, Neilsen was a bank clerk. He is a Dane, is married and 37 years of age.

It is rumored that the Montrose ship building yard is likely to be closed again soon.

GODERICH MURDER IS AS MUCH AN ENIGMA AS EVER

Police Are at Work on a Line of Inquiry Which They Are Keeping a Strict Secret, and Hope to Have a Prisoner When the Inquest Resumes.

Goderich, Sept. 29.—There is a lack of sensation in the Anderson murder mystery to-day. The police are working quietly on some clue of their own, and expect to have someone to answer to the startling evidence that is promised by the physicians who made the postmortem examination when the inquest meets again next week. They are agreed that the girl was first stunned by a blow on the forehead, while the stains on the clothing show the throat was cut before the garments were removed. The clothing was cut away with a knife. The doctors are reasonably certain that the murderer did not accomplish the evident purpose of his crime.

What seemed yesterday to be preliminary to sensational developments, is declared by Crown Attorney Seagar to have flattened out. This was the discovery of a blood-stained robe in a buggy, which had been hired at a livery at 10.30 from the night of the crime, and was not returned until 3 a.m. A barrister in the town, who returned the rig, while unable to explain the presence of the bloodstains, told a straight story of what had happened. He and a showman, manager of a troupe of actors at the fair, had met a couple of young women, who had suggested a drive about town. At midnight the actor and one of the women had gotten out at the hotel, while the lawyer and his companion went for another drive.

The crown attorney telephoned to Seaforth yesterday about a tramp who had been seen around there with a scratched-up face. Nothing resulted from that investigation, however.

It is learned that the missing Frank Smith has been in Seaforth and worked there till Saturday night when he left. There is nothing doing in that direction, said Mr. Seagar. There was a report that the body of Smith had been found in the lake at Port Albert, but this is wrong.

The girl's body was taken from the undertaking rooms to her home in Saltford last night. The funeral took place to Dungannon this morning.

M'NULTY IS ON TRIAL; MARY DOLAN ON STAND

Girl, Who Has Been Convicted of the Murder of Her Child at Barrie, Breaks Down as She Tells Story of Her Wrong—Feeling Against Man Runs High.

Barrie, Sept. 29.—Little new evidence was brought forward yesterday in the trial of Thomas McNulty for having advised Mary Dolan to strangle her child, the same witnesses who gave evidence in regard to the girl repeating their stories. Mary Dolan, who is being used as the chief witness against McNulty, was in the box four hours, while being put through a rigid cross-examination. Counsel for the defence endeavored to show that McNulty was not the only one who had had intimated relations with the girl. Instances of other men being cited, but this the girl denied.

Her story was practically a repetition of what she told Tuesday, with some details added.

McNulty wrote telling her to take the child to Hawkstone, and to strangle it between there and Orillia, he enclosed $5 with the letter.

When she informed McNulty of what she had done, he advised her not to worry, but warned her not to say anything to anybody, adding: "They cannot do anything to me, as I never saw the child." After the baby's body was found in July, McNulty urged her not to give him away.

The witness said she would not have killed the child if she had not been told to do so by McNulty.

At an allusion to the killing, she became incoherent, and the proceedings were frequently checked by her cries.

Lucy Lamb, who visited at the Dolans, swore she slept with Mary one night in the same bed, and woke up towards morning in time to see McNulty leaving by the window.

The girl's father swore he did not know she was a mother until she was arrested. He vehemently declared he did not turn her away from home.

After four hours, the witness broke down completely and screamed aloud: "Oh my darling baby; my darling baby, McNulty killed him; he did, he did." She had to be carried from the court house, which rang with her cries.

An effort was made to resume her examination at 5 o'clock, but the distressing scene of the morning was repeated. Her jaws were rigid and had to be forced to administer an opiate.

Feeling against McNulty and sympathy for the girl runs high.

McNulty's indifference to the girl's condition has continued. A number of letters from him, containing the terms of endearment: "Dear sweetheart," "Dear Mary," were read, in which he continually begs her to meet him secretly, and continue their illicit interests.

In reference to the girl's condition, Justice Britton said no one was responsible, it growing out of the necessary steps of those in charge of the case.

The trial will be continued to-day.

ROOSEVELT'S CANDIDATE NOMINATED FOR GOVERNOR

Ex-President Administers Another Stinging Defeat to the Bosses in New York State, When Harry L. Stimson is Chosen by Convention.

Saratoga, N.Y., Sept. 29.—The Republican State Convention last evening nominated Henry L. Stimson, New York, as its candidate for governor. The nomination of Mr. Stimson was one more victory for Theodore Roosevelt, who personally led the fight for the nomination of his candidate.

The rest of the ticket folows: For lieutenant-governor, Edw. Shoenock, Syracuse; secretary of state, Samuel S. Koonig, New York (re-nominated); state comptroller, James Thompson, Valley Falls, Rensselaer County; state treasurer, Thomas F. Fennell, Elmira; state engineer, Frank M. Williams, Oneida (re-nominated); attorney-general, Edw. R. O'Malley, Buffalo (re-nominated); associate judge of the Court of Appeals, Irving G. Vann, Syracuse (re-nominated).

The vote for governor: Henry L. Stimson, 684; Wm. S. Bennet, 242; Thos. B. Dunn, 38; James B. McEwan, 28; Scattering, 23.

The slate, as made up yesterday morning by Col. Roosevelt, Senator Root and their advisers, went through without a hitch. Except for governor and comptroller, there were contests. Representative Bennet, who conducted the only open campaign for the nomination for governor, kept up the fight to the end, and his persistency and his strength with the New York delegation threatened yesterday afternoon to break up the slate.

It is understood that Roosevelt will stump the state for the ticket. He is reported to have said yesterday that he would.

At the close of the convention, Jas. W. Wadsworth, jr., speaker of the assembly, announced his withdrawal from the Legislature.

Democrats After Roosevelt.

Rochester, N.Y., Sept. 29.—E. W. Shepard of New York, James S. Havens of Rochester, and Herman Ridder of New York are the three names being mentioned most to-day as candidates for first place on the ticket which the Democratic state convention will name Friday. And their relative chances appear to rank in the order in which their names are mentioned.

The most important planks in the platform will have to do with direct nominations, tariff reform and a denunciation of Rooseveltism, or what is called the "New Nationalism" It looks as if the Democratic platform builders were determined to go the Republicans one better so far as the direct nomination question is concerned. Forecasts of the platform declare that the direct nominations' clause will be about as radical as language can make it.

PROTESTANT SCHOOLS FOR HEBREWS

Montreal, Sept. 29.—The difficulties of educating the Protestant population here was shown strongly yesterday, when twenty children were refused admittance to Rosemount school because they did not know their alphabet. The accommodation is so small, according to the number of children, that this rule has to be put into force to have some basis of selection. The reason of the congestion is largely that the Hebrew population of 30,000, very many of whom are children, have the right to say which schools they will pay their taxes to, and the whole colony voted Protestant.

SAFE ROADS FOR INEBRIATES

Montreal, Sept. 29.—Whether a man is drunk or sober, the municipalitiy is bound to provide him with a safe road, is in effect the decision of the Court of Appeal yesterday in the case of Dame Ostigney of St. Hubert, who sued the municipality for $15,000 damages for the death of her husband. The council peaded that the man was drunk. The woman lost in the lower court, but the Court of Appeal reversed the judgment on the above grounds.

SURE THING, IT'S DEAD EASY

Atlantic City, N.J., Sept. 29.—Sitting as a board of strategy on the problems of a trans-Atlantic journey by airship, Walter Wellman, Melvin Vanimanna and Murray Simon went over the chances for disaster. They concluded the chances of escaping alive in case of an accident were more than 90 in 100, and the chances of successfully getting across more than 4 in 5. They decided on a 20-knot gait.

Hunters May Be Lost.

Kenora, Sept. 28.—Charles Jones, foreman in the Canadian Pacific, and a young companion named McCannon left last Tuesday in the latter's launch for a hunting trip down the lake. They were due back on Friday, but not returning, a search party was sent out. The party found their launch, containing Jones' coat, and provisions almost untouched, at Rich Bay, 25 miles down the lake.

CANADA'S MORALS ARE VERY GOOD

London, Sept. 29.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—At the church congress at Cambridge, Canon E. A. Welch, formerly of Toronto, in the course of a discussion on Christian unity, speaking from a Canadian viewpoint, testified to the amount of co-operation for moral and social reform among the religious denominations of Canada in consequence of which the general morality, at least in some respects, was better than in England. He referred to the snobbishness which some times characterized relations between the church and nonconformity here. It rarely happened in the case of Canadian Methodist or Baptist that a substantial increase bank balance gave birth to convictions of the truly apostolic character of the Anglican Church. Intemperance in Canada was an almost negligible factor. There was no divorce court and the Lord's Day was observed far better than in England.

NO COAL, BUT IRON ORE FOUND

Kingston, Sept. 29.—Prof. M. B. Baker, professor of geology in Queen's University, has returned to the city after spending the summer in a geological examination of the alleged "coal finds" of New Ontario for the Bureau of Mines, Toronto. They are non-existent. Prof. Baker reports, however, that about twenty miles farther down the Metagami, at Grand Rapids, a promising area of limonite iron ore is found. This red or brown iron ore is of excellent quality, being free from sulphur and with only the smallest traces of phosphorous.

Want Electric Franchise.

Kingston, Sept. 29.—The Seymour Power & Electric Co. wants a franchise to sell power in Kingston. It proposes that the city shall supply all customers using less than 25 horsepower, the company to supply those who take over that amount. There will be opposition to giving any franchise at all to the company. The members of the City Council favor receiving the power from the company at the city's switchboard, the city to do all the distributing.

BISHOP FALLON AT BUFFALO

Buffalo, Sept. 29.—The fifth biennial national convention of the United Irish League closed last evening amid a remarkable scene of devotion to the motherland and fealty to the leaders of the Irish Nationalist movement who have attended the gathering. A recommendation by the committee on ways and means, that $100,000 be subscribed to the work of the Irish Parliamentary party for the next two years, was raised to $150,000 by the committee on resolutions. The latter report was unanimously adopted and within half an hour a total of $151,000 had been paid in or pledged. While the secretary was recording the the amounts given, the delegates in their enthusiasm several times doubled and trebled their original subscriptions, many of which ranged from $1,000 to $20,000.

WAREHOUSES WERE BURNED

Iroquois, Sept. 29.—Two large warehouses belonging to A. J. Ross of the firm of Ross Bros., were totally destroyed by fire yesterday afternoon. It is supposed a spark from the engine of No. 7 westbound train caused the fire. A strong north wind was blowing, which carried the flames across to the residences of James Flanagan, Mrs. Adams, and the English Church sheds and rectory, but the efforts of the fire brigade and the good water pressure saved these buildings.

The loss to the warehouses is about $3,000; insurance $300 on one and $350 on the other building.

MAY PROTEST APPOINTMENT

Ottawa, Sept. 29.—An important conference of French-Canadians from all over the Province of Ontario will be held here on Oct. 4 to consider the question of Archbishop Gauthier's appointment to the archdiocese of Ottawa.

It is allagede that certain documents, which should have reached Rome, and which were in the interests of French-Canadians, here especially, have not reached there, and French-Canadians want to know the reason why. It is possible that a cable of protest against Archbishop Gauthier's appointment will be sent to the Vatican.

South Wellington Liberals nominater Mr. Nichol Jeffrey for the Legislature.

It is reported at Washington that legislation will be sought at the coming session of Congress to place a prohibitive import duty on power.

King Victor Emmanuel of Italy and the Count of Turin narrowly escaped being struck by an aeroplane in flight on the aviation grounds at Milan.

The U. S. steamboat inspectors have declared themselves unable to understand the cause of the wreck of the Pere Marquette car ferry on Lake Michigan.

Andrew Hickey, a market gardener, taking produce to the Ottawa market, was instantly killed by a train at an unprotected level crossing on the Russell road, about two miles from the city.

The Royal Society at Ottawa elected the following officers: President, Prof. Ramsay Wright, Toronto; vice-president, Dr. W. F. King; hon. secretary, Dr. W. D. Lesueur; hon. treasurer, Prof. Lawrence V. Lambe.

CAPT. MOODIE WAS INJURED

Hamilton, Sept. 29.—A serious accident happened to Capt. Roy Moodie of the 91st Highlanders last night. While on his way to the armories in his automobile to attend the weekly parade of the regiment, one of his arms was broken, as the result of the steering gear breaking. He was making a sharp turn of a corner, when the stearing rod gave way. His arm was thrown so hard against the guard that it was broken. He was taken home.

BUNCOED BY A BRIDEGROOM

Prescott, Sept. 29.—The Methodist minister here was the victim of a pretty smooth bunco trick Tuesday evening, whereby he was done out of a fee. A young couple came over from Ogdensburg, and were married by Rev. A. E. Runnels. The bride stepped out and down the street while the groom stood talking with the minister after the ceremony. The groom suddenly told Mr. Runnels his wife had all the money, and he would hurry after her to get the fee, but he did not come back.

ARRESTED; ENDS LIFE

Bay City, Mich., Sept. 29.—Alex. Crowe of Ottawa, the victim of a girl's revenge, died last night from the effects of eating a quantity of paris green Saturday.

The police received a tip from a woman in Saginaw, with whom Crowe was infatuated, but had trouble with, to the effect that Roberts, the man who had escaped from the London, Ont., county jail, was arrested for another robbery at Bad Axe, and made his escape, was living here under the name of Crowe.

Crowe was promptly arrested and lodged in jail, where he remained for 48 hours before he was given a chance to vindicate himself.

His mother and sister arrived here just before he died, but he was unable to recognize them.

TWO DROWNED IN GULL LAKE

Port Arthur, Sept. 29.—W. M. Coleman of Renfrew, and Albert Dixon of Saskatoon are reported as having been drowned in Gull Lake, 150 miles north of Sioux Lookout, on the G.T.P., on Saturday. The sole survivor of the drowning was Nick Ellwood, who clung eight hours to the upturned canoe, and then walked sixty miles without food to report the fatality to Sioux Lookout. The three men were going to Rat Lake to trap for the winter.

America's Model Port.

St. John, N.B., Sept. 29.—With Courtenay Bay properly developed, St. John will be the model port of America. This was one of the striking statements made by M. J. Butler, general manager of the Dominion Iron & Steel Co., Ltd., and formerly Deputy Minister of Railways, in his address before the Canadian Club.

BROTHER AND SISTER HAD NEVER MET

Detroit, Sept. 29.—A man and woman, brother and sister, who have lived less than 150 miles apart, each believing the other dead, met for the first time in their lives at Pontiac, Mich. Mrs. Katherine Howard, of London, aged 58 years, became separated from her family before her brother, Charles D. Sievers, aged 50, was born. Sievers lives in Pontiac. She was told of Sievers by friends, who remarked on the resemblance. She went to Pontiac and the relationship was established.

Co-operative Stores Bill.

Ottawa, Sept. 29.—It is expected by many that a bill authorizing co-operative stores will be passed this session by the Dominion Government. It was defeated last year. If this goes through the civil servants of Ottawa will take up co-operative stores at once.

No Grain Moving.

Montreal, Sept. 29.—The elevators are full of grain at this port. Prices rule so low on the other side that the owners refuse to ship just now, consequently the Dundonian had to leave port yesterday empty, and proceed to Three Rivers and load lumber.

AUTO PLUNGED INTO THE CANAL

Dunnville, Sept. 29.—Frank Hyde, proprietor of the Victoria Hotel here, was driving his automobile along the bank of the feeder to the Welland Canal, about four miles east of Dunnville, yesterday afternoon, in which were his mother and brother, Sidney, of Courtright, Ont., and his niece, Miss Eva Richardson of Detroit, when in trying to avert a mudhole he steered too near the edge of the bank, and was unable to stop the machine before it skidded and plunged into the water, about seven feet below, the car tumbling turtle with its occupants.

Sidney Hyde and Miss Richardson were thrown out when the car first turned over. Frank Hyde, who was thrown into the water, luckily, reached shore, and, with the assistance of his brother, turned over the car, which was partly floating owing to the tires buoying it up.

Mrs. Hyde, who was sitting on the rear seat, was pinned down into the mud by the weight of the car for about three minutes before she was released.

The assistance of Mr. Mumby, a farmer living near-by, was secured, and, after reviving Mrs. Hyde as much as possible, he drove the party to town. Dr. Clark was called, and found that Mrs. Hyde had two ribs broken, besides numerous bruises. The others escaped uninjured.

DEATH TO THE POISONERS

Rome, Sept. 29.—The official report issued last night states that during the past twenty-four hours thirteen new cases of Asiatic cholera have appeared in the city of Naples, with nine deaths, four new cases, and one death in the province of Naples, outside the city, and three new cases and one death in the province of Bari. These do not include the so-called cases of gastro enteritis.

A despatch from Naples says that two strangers seeking lodgings in a poor quarter yesterday aroused the suspicion of the residents, who cried out that they were spreading the cholera. The strangers were attacked by the mob, when they attempted to give candy to some children, with cries of "death to the poisoners," and were severely injured before the police could come to their rescue.

TO CHECK AMATEUR SHOOTERS

London, Sept. 29.—Local hunters are organizing a movement to have the game laws amended so that everyone owning a gun must have a license. They claim that the amount of indiscriminate shooting that is done by amateurs is exterminating many of the real useful varieties of birds and putting discredit on the real hunters. A petition is now being prepared for presentation to the authorities.

Prosecuted for Immoral Publication.

Winnipeg, Sept. 29.—Charles E. Coling, formerly on the police force, is being tried for publishing and circulating obscene matter. Coling had literary aspirations and left the police force, starting a weekly publication known as The Live Wire, which the crown prosecutor described as leud, obscene, immoral and filthy.

WAITED FOR THREE WEEKS

Edmonton, Sept. 29.—In giving judgment for wages to six G.T.P. laborers, Magistrate Byers declared that the treatment of its employes who come under his notice is disgraceful.

"I myself have known men to have to wait for three weeks before they could leave town when they had other situations ready for them at some other place," he said. "During this time they had to pay their board and wait around for their money, besides suffering the loss of that time. While this may not be very much to a wealthy company like the G.T.P., it is a very large item to the poor workingman, who has to work from day to day in order to live."

It appears that the G.T.P. has no pay office here, and authority must be secured from Winnipeg before pay checks can be endorsed. Since last spring over a hundred of these cases have been settled in the Police Court.

VANNUTELLI AT THE FALLS

Niagara Falls, Ont., Sept. 29.—His Eminence Cardinal Vannutelli, special legate of Pope Pius X., and cardinal protector of the Carmelite Order, and twelve other notable priests connected with the Pope's household, were guests at the Monastery of Mt. Carmel, yesterday morning. Bishop O'Connol of California, Prince In Croy, Rev. Dr. Kelley of Church Extension Society, Chicago, Mgr. Tampieri, Mgr. Liza, Father Ugiute, Count Vannutelli, and Bishop Muldoon were among the party. The distinguished party arrived at 6 o'clock, when the cardinal celebrated mass in Our Lady of Peace Church. At 2.30 o'clock yesterday afternoon the party went to Buffalo, where they were entertained by Bishop Colton, leaving at 10.45 for Washington, where they will spend some time.

H. BOURASSA COMING BACK

Montreal, Sept. 29.—It is stated on excellent authority that H. Bourassa, M.P.P., told a friend the other day that he would return to the House of Commons at the next federal elections. It is now well understood that the Nationalist leader is disappointed with the result of his offer to dislodge Sir Lomer Gouin, and will get back to the larger field at the first opportunity.

Brakeman Died a Hero.

Swift Current, Sask., Sept. 29.—Brakeman James Cairns of Medicine Hat was killed under his freight train at that point. He gave his life to save a passenger train from colliding with the rear end of the freight, which was about to foul the main line. As he turned the anglecock to set the air brakes, he fell beneath the car and was crushed to death.

Longest Interurban in West.

Vancouver, Sept. 29.—The last spike in the 60-mile interurban tram line from Vancouver to Chilliwack, the longest in Western Canada, will be driven on Monday. The line and equipment have cost over three millions. It traverses the entire valley of the Lower Fraser.

Joint Service to Jamaica.

London, Sept. 29.—The Royal Mail Steam Packet Co. and the Quebec Steamship Co. have mutually agreed to a joint service between New York and Bermuda.

GOOD MAN GONE

In the death of Rev. Dr. Lambert there has passed from this existence a man who dared. Years ago when that master orator and writer, Bob Ingersoll, was in the height of his fame he stepped forward and championed the cause of the Christian religion. He was then unknown. His logic was sound and his manner fearless. Protestants as well as Catholics applauded. The Y.M.C.A. distributed his literature. Rev. Dr. Lambert was a Catholic priest.

SIXTY YEARS MARRIED

To Mr. and Mrs. Janvier Souliere, of Ottawa, who surrounded by their descendants yesterday celebrated the sixtieth anniversary of their wedding day all Ottawa will wish many future days of happiness and content in the twilight of life. In a million marriages only the fraction of a dozen reach the diamond jubilee, and when such occurs in a neighborhood it has a wide human interest outside the circle of the family's acquaintance.

It gives us fresh faith when we read a little article like this clipped from the editorial columns of the Ottawa Journal. How much of joy they have known how much of sorrow they have shared as through life they went as one, and now with their feet moving down the valley towards the end, how peaceful they are. Mr. and Mrs. Janvier Souliere here in the heyday of life in this the hour of divorce and separation and unhappy wedded life you are an inspiration and a stimulous towards good. Yes and some of us who know pains and sorrows in the ties of marriage envy you and fain would know your secret.

NO FRILLS

The Ontario Department of Agriculture in crop bulletin No. 105, has the following note—

Corn—THE CORN CROP GOT OFF TO A BAD START, the weather turning cold and wet just after planting, rotting some of the seed.

Now, isn't that shorter and more concise than a column explaining the spring weather and the phenomama of the season. The speech of this day is simple language. The leading writers clothe their most majestic thoughts in simple words. In simplicity is power. We don't want frills any more, we want the real thing. Be natural; be simple, and be true to your friends and best instincts, and you cannot fail. We are sorry that THE CORN GOT OFF TO A BAD START, but we are glad to see the writer cut out the frills in describing it.

ANOTHER GRIST

Kingston, Sept. 27.—As a result of the supplemental examinations in medicine at Queen's, the following have secured the degree of M.D., C.M.: J. G. Bailey, Rosemonton; J. M. Carnduff, Carnduff, Sask.; G. L. Cooke, Kingston; G. M. Gibson, Douglas, Ont.; E. R. Graham, Kingston.

Where do the young doctors go to when they have been ground out in the mill? Where do young lawyers go when they have received the power to practice. They disappear in the vortex of humanity and pass into the ranks of the unknown. Once in a while we hear of a rare surgical case or of a discovery in medicine, once in a while we hear of the learned lawyer moving judge and jury almost against their will. But it is only once in a while. In every walk of life we are crowded with ordinaries, content to remain ordinary, to die ordinary and be buried in the ordinary way. But say, people, we don't need to.

OUR LITTLE TRIBUTE

If there are flies around or in your house either, you or your neighbor is careless with regard to absolute cleanliness. And until the flies are got rid of, as they can be with care and watchfulness, a positive danger to your own health and the health of your wife and children confront you.—Boston Herald.

However, this doesn't make any difference to the Council or the Board of Health, and garbage is being burned or buried daily in this, the Electric City—Peterborough.

WHAT ABOUT CAMPBELLTON?

There is a big problem of the heart before the people of Canada to-day, which they do not seem to recognize. It is as to what the people of Campbelltown, New Brunswick, are going to do this autumn and winter.—Ottawa Free Press.

Where are we at? Will this country allow their fellow countrymen, their wives and children to suffer the rigors of a winter? Why, certainly, what do we care in Peterborough? The home is warm here, the rent is paid, the job is good, we don't care. Yes we care, but we can only send them a sympathetic thought or wing up a paper on their behalf. Besides its a long distance away. The Review made an appeal for aid, the Bank of Nova Scotia to receive and forward the money to the authorities in charge of the relief fund. One kind soul responded, the rest—why we prayed, but sat tight on our pocket books.

NOTHING DOING

There will be no tariff changes to disturb the manufacturers. — E. M. Macdonald, M. P., at Pictou.

After Parmelee's scalp

It is understood here that the coming session will witness a determined effort by Mr. Charles Murphy to have Mr. Charles Parmelee, former member of Parliament, for Shefford, deprived of the position of King's Printer. Mr. Parmelee was a newspaper publisher in the eastern townships with a lifelong experience of the printing business; he was a member of the House of Commons for a dozen years; and when the office of King's Printer became vacant the Laurier Government selected him for the post. Mr. Murphy came into politics just as Mr. Parmelee left them, found himself the Minister responsible for the Printing Bureau, of which Mr. Parmelee was the permanent head, and took a violent aversion to him. When Mr. Murphy found himself obliged to investigate the Bureau he studiously snubbed Mr. Parmelee, bringing in another Deputy Minister over his head to help him with the investigation. Indignities have been heaped upon Mr. Parmelee all summer, and now it seems that Mr. Murphy is demanding his dismissed. If Mr. Murphy is right, the Laurier Government, and particularly Mr. Sydney Fisher as Mr. Parmelee's local leader, are to blame for having made a very bad choice for so important a post, a post which involves the spending of about a million dollars a year. If the Laurier Government was justified in appointing Mr. Parmelee, young Mr. Murphy may conceivably have made a mistake.

MEN

The great moral movements of the day are left to a very few. Young men are from time to time added to committees. They may or may not attend a meeting or two, then, if the position does not carry some social promotion, they drop off. They are needed to and their personalities to the five thousand who attend a hockey match. They are needed at the bridge party or at the theatre, but business duties forbid them to take a hand at the winch where the object is to uplift mankind. So long as this is the ordinary attitude of citizens at the age of enthusiasm, and in the prime of their strength, how can we expect public functionaries to do anything but likewise evade duty? The man who has prefect confidence in those who are carrying on good works, and who thinks he is not needed, is only one step removed from the open opponent.—Montreal Witness.

Yes and the man who has an aim in life, an object in view, will never be popular. It is sometimes well to be cordially hated. If the man's aim is money, he will get the money, but some one whom he has beaten will hold him a grudge. If a man's ideal is power or office, he will likely achieve his ideal, but the defeated ones, the workers will be sore. If a man is a renovator of public morals and is a worker for good he is hated by the evil minded. But the worst class of all is the man who tries to please everyone and who in the end pleases no one. The opinionless molecule, he, poor devil, is to be pitied. From pestilence and plague and spineless men good Lord deliver us.

WORTH MOUNTAINS OF GOLD

During Change of Life, says Mrs. Chas. Barclay

Graniteville, Vt. —"I was passing through the Change of Life and suffered from nervousness and other annoying symptoms, and I can truly say that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has proved worth mountains of gold to me, as it restored my health and strength. I never forget to tell my friends what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me during this trying period. Complete restoration to health means so much to me that for the sake of other suffering women I am willing to make my trouble public so you may publish this letter."—Mrs. Chas. Barclay, R.F.D., Graniteville, Vt.

No other medicine for woman's ills has received such wide-spread and unqualified endorsement. No other medicine we know of has such a record of cures of female ills as has Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

For more than 30 years it has been curing female complaints such as inflammation, ulceration, local weaknesses, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, indigestion and nervous prostration, and it is unequalled for carrying women safely through the period of change of life. It costs but little to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and, as Mrs. Barclay says, it is "worth mountains of gold" to suffering women.

TAKE A LOOK IN

Spit out that chew, chuck that booze and stow away the pipe for a little while and visit the Y.M.C.A. to-night. Here you will find a bunch of fellows who believe in a Sound Mind, in a Sound body. This is an evening when all men will be welcome. Go and see for yourself. You'll be convinced. Yes, and more, you'll be surprised. Take a look in to-night's the night.

PUT ON THE BRAKES

A commercial philosopher remarks that this is a amazing era of progress and productiveness. Day by day a great drama is being unfolded—the greatest in all the history of the world. From one end of the country to another we are rushing forward our development at a pace at once terrific and bewildering. The roar of conquest is in the air—the conquest of a continent's resources. It is magnificent, enthralling, inspiring. Individually we are glowing with the exhilaration of it. It is a very wonderful, forceful, in some ways admirable spirit; but with calm deliberation over it a very pertinent question arises and will not down. Is it altogether sane? Facts and figures say distinctly that it is not; moreover, they present some very vital and momentous charges:—That our vast productiveness is evolved hand in hand with excessive waste. That, expressed in our own apt slang, our most characteristic mottoes are. "Hang the future!" adn "Cash in quickly!" That we are plundering a continent and burning our bridges behind us. That the generations of the future will look back upon us as "pirates" of the country's wealth and spendthrifts of our private means. This is a scathing arraignment. If it is true—even in a measure—then it sets one policy high above any other in our national and private life to-day—the policy of rational retrenchment and sensible economy.—Canadian Trade Review.

To all of which we say amen and amen.

However, we will not stop. If Angel Gabriel was to come from the skies and toot on his horn, "Halt, Beware," there would be millions who would never hear him. Their ears are filled with the din of commerce, their eyes are fastened on that next dollar. They are grubbing away, forgetful of the fact that the best things are free—without money, without price. The millionaire can corner his market, but there is no corner on contentment, on happiness on the love of a wife and the peaceful mind. Rush on your money grabbers and some day you will die and become the centre of attraction at a funeral and your heirs will dispute over the will and people will forget you save for the good you have done, or the good fellowship you have created when you were here a walking, talking, toiling man.

A large new pulp mill will be established at Newcastle, N. B.

The Round-Up

A Romance of Arizona

Novelized From Edmund Day's Melodrama

By JOHN MURRAY and MILLS MILLER

Copyright, 1908, by G. W. Dillingham Co.

Both Jack and Dick had been struck. Jack was the first to recover. Reviving, he struggled out of the clasp of his unconscious comrade. "He's hit bad," he said to himself, "and so am I. I'll fight it out to the last, and if they charge they won't get us alive."

Dick groaned and opened his eyes.

"I'm hit hard," he whispered. "You'd better go."

Jack was on his hands and knees crawling toward his rifle when his comrade spoke.

"Listen," he replied. "We're both fixed to stay now, so lie close. I'll hold 'em off as long as I can, but if they rush save one shot for yourself—you understand?"

"Yes, not alive!" answered Dick weakly, his voice thin and his face ashen and white with pain.

Jack reached the bowlder and, with an effort, raised himself and peered over the edge.

"They're getting ready. Will you take my hand now?" he asked as he held it out to Dick.

"I sure will!" his wounded comrade cried, grasping it with all the strength he possessed.

Jack smiled in his happiness. He felt he had made his peace with all men and at last was ready to meet death with a clear conscience.

"It looks like the end, but we'll fight for it."

The shrill warwhoops of the Indians, the first sound they had made in the fight, showed they felt confident of overcoming the men in the next rush.

Jack and Dick had abandoned the rifles and were now fighting the Indians off with their revolvers as they closed in on them.

Hardie had halted the night before at Clearwater spring. Finding it but mud and alkali, he had merely rested his men and horses for a few hours and then pushed on for Apache spring, where he hoped to strike water. The troop rode through the early morning hours, full of grit and keen to overtake the Apaches, traces of whose flight were becoming more evident every mile. All weariness had vanished. Even the horses felt there was something in the air and answered the bugle call with fresh vigor and go.

A scout first heard the firing at the spring. He did not wait to investigate, knowing he could do nothing alone. The volleys, the difference in the reports of the rifles, proved to him that a fight was on. He knew that the Apaches were being held off. Galloping back to the troop, he reported the fight to its commander.

The bugles sounded. The horses were forced into a gallop. With clashing accouterments and jingling spurs and bits they dashed across the mesa to the head of the trail. Here they met Slim Hoover and his posse coming from an opposite direction.

The firing in the canyon was more intermittent now. Dick and Jack were saving their revolver shots. The Indians were closing in for the last rush.

Hardie dismounted his men and threw his troop as groups of skirmishers down the draws leading into one side of the canyon. Slim and his posse were on the left flank, armed with revolvers. Hardie, with a section, dashed down the trail.

They came upon the Apaches with the rush of a mountain torrent, striking them in the front and on the flank. The cavalrymen fired at will, each plunging from one cover to another as he picked out his man.

The Indians for a few moments replied shot for shot. Their stand was a short one, however, and they began to fall back.

Slim entered the canyon at the head of the scouts, driving the Apaches before him. Both Jack and Dick had fallen. Across the bodies a wave of the battle flowed.

Once the Indians rallied, but so sudden was the attack, so irresistible the forward dash of the cavalrymen, that they became discouraged and broke and fled toward their horses, with the soldiers in pursuit.

Slim hurried to Dick's side, seeing he was the worst hurt. As he knelt beside him the dying man opened his eyes and smiled. Leaning over him, Slim heard him gently whisper, "Tell her I know she was true and not to mind."

With a deep sigh, his eyelids fluttered, and all was still.

The scouts had taken charge of Jack, who was unconscious and bleeding freely.

Carved his name on a bowlder.

From the spring the fighting had drifted southward. Few of the Indians reached the horses, and fewer still got away. Scattering shots showed the hunt for those who fled on foot was still on.

Then soft and mellow over canyon and mesa and butte floated the bugle call, recalling the cavalrymen to the guidon. Back they came, cheering and tumultuous, only to be silenced by the presence of their dead.

They buried Dick's body near the spring and carved his name with a cavalry saber on a bowlder near by.

At dawn the next day they began the long march back to Fort Grant.

Slim took charge of Jack, nursing him back to life.

CHAPTER XV.

It is dawn in the valley of the Sweetwater. The outfit of Sweetwater ranch has gathered for the round-up and the drive to the railroad. In the absence of her husband Echo Payson had assumed complete charge of the ranch and with the help of Sagebrush had carried on the work just as she thought Jack would do, hoping against hope for his return in safety and hiding her sorrow from those about her.

Under a clump of cottonwood a chuck wagon has halted. Many of the boys on the round-up are still asleep, the night herders returning to camp. The cook, Parenthesis, has started his preparations for breakfast.

Parenthesis is mixing dough in a dishpan set on the tailboard. Sagebrush kneels near him, putting on his spurs preparatory to saddling up, as he goes on the first relief.

"Wake up Texas an' the other boys, Fresno," ordered Sagebrush. The Californian threw away the butt of his cigarette and shook each man by the shoulder. With much yawning and rubbing of eyes the men crawled from their sleeping bags. Dashing cold water into their faces from a basin beside the water barrel, they drank copiously of the coffee which Parenthesis poured out for them.

"Mostly all the boys are in now, ain't they?" asked Parenthesis, looking about the group.

"Yep," answered Sagebrush. "We'll finish brandin' the calves today. I reckon Fresno will have to take charge of the drive. I can't leave the ranch until Jack gets back."

Show Low was the only sleeper who had not responded to Parenthesis' call. That worthy walked over and gave him a kick which brought forth a grunt, but no other sign of an awakening. Returning to the fire, Parenthesis took a tin cup and poured himself out a cup of coffee.

"Heard any word from him yet?" he asked as he gulped the beverage.

"Nothin'," replied Sagebrush grimly. "Slim wrote from Fort Grant he was on the trail, but the 'Paches were out, an' they wouldn't let him leave the fort till the soldiers went with him."

"Slim hadn't oughter gone an' left things the way he did. Buck McKee is gettin' a lot of bad men together an' 'lows he is goin' to run fer sheriff himself," growled Fresno. "I got my eye on that Peruna."

"Peruna! Who's he?" asked Texas.

"One of Buck's outfit," answered Fresno. "He is mighty slick with the runnin' iron an' brandin' other folks' calves."

"We can't be too careful," warned Sagebrush. "Things is strained to the bustin' point, an' any promise of gun play is goin' to set off a whole lot of fireworks."

Show Low was on the verge of waking up. This he did by gradually increasing the volume of each snore and breaking it off with a whistle.

At the very moment Sagebrush suggested gun play Show Low snorted his loudest.

"What's that?" asked Sagebrush, grabbing his revolver.

"Show Low. He's a regular brass band when he gets started—from the big trombone down to the tin whistle," laughed Fresno.

"It's a wonder he can sleep alongside of that noise."

"He can't," Fresno volunteered. "He'll wake himself up in a minute. He's off now."

The snores of Show Low grew more frequent until he climaxed his accompaniment of sleep with one awful snort, which awakened him. "Eh, what's that?" he yelled as he bounded to a sitting posture.

"Didn't I tell you?" queried Fresno.

Sagebrush grinned and slowly arose, gathering up his saddle and rope.

Swinging one over each arm, he started toward the corral, saying: "Come on, boys; we got a lot to do today. Git your hosses."

The night riders were coming into camp, meeting their comrades with grunts or in a few words telling them what to guard against in some particular part of the grazing herd.

The sun had risen. The cattle were on their feet browsing the short, sweet grass, moving slowly toward the river.

"Work!" growled Show Low. "Darn me if I ain't commenced to hate it!"

Fresno picked up his saddle to follow his foreman, but paused long enough to fire this parting shot at the cook: "Say, Parenthesis, if them biscuits you're makin' is as hard as the last bunch, save four of 'em for me. I want to shoe that pony of mine."

Parenthesis threw a tin cup at Fresno, who dodged it. Punching the dough viciously, he said: "Darn this housekeepin'! Gets a feller's hands all rough. It's enough to spile the disposition of a saint."

His soliloquy was interrupted by Buck McKee riding up to the wagon from the Lazy K outfit, which was camping a mile below them.

"Hello, cookie! How goes it?" was his greeting.

"You wind it up, an' it goes eight days," Parenthesis bellowed, his temper fast reaching the breaking point.

"Jack Payson ain't back yet?" Buck asked, paying no attention to the bad humor of Parenthesis.

"Not that I knows on."

The cook rolled the dough with elaborate care.

"Nor Hoover?"

"Ain't seen him," he replied curtly.

"Well, they hain't comin' back, either

"Eh, what's that?" he yelled.

They pulled it off pretty slick on us fellers. Hoover he lets Payson go an' makes a bluff at chasin' after him. Then they gets off somewhere, splits up the money an' gives us the laugh."

Parenthesis turned on him in anger and shouted: "I'll bet my outfit against a pair of green socks that either one of 'em or both will be back here before this round-up is over."

"You will, eh?" snarled Buck. "Well, we're jes' waitin' fer 'em. We'll swing Payson so high he'll look like a buzzard, an' as fer Hoover—well, he's served his last term as sheriff in this here county—you hear me shoutin'."

McKee cut his pony with his quirt and dashed away in time to escape an unwelcome encounter with several members of the Sweetwater outfit who were riding back to camp.

The men were riding out their new string of ponies today. As each passed Parenthesis flung a gibe at him. He had resumed his breadmaking when Polly rode up to the wagon.

"Yep, fer straddlin' a hoss."

"Hello, Parenthesis!" was her greeting. "What is the matter with you?"

"Nothin'. This here housekeepin' is gettin' on my nervous system some fearful." Parenthesis struck the dough a savage whack and added, "I ain't cut out fer housekeepin'."

"You've been cut out all right," retorted Polly, glancing at his legs, "whatever it's for."

Parenthesis was not abashed. "Yep, fer straddlin' a hoss," he proudly replied, as if that were the chief end of man.

THE DAILY REVIEW PATTERN SERVICE

Every day we will print and illustrate a new pattern. These are the very latest and thoroughly up to date.

On receipt of order, giving the number of pattern desired and 10 cents, along with name and address, the pattern will be mailed.

Be careful as to the right number.

LADIES' SHIRTWAIST.

All Seams Allowed.

The shirtwaist which is tucked across the front will always be popular and can be made up in almost any soft material; a soft flannel will look well, but any heavy goods would spoil the design, as the waist would be too bulky. This one is made with the closing in the center of the front in the regulation box-plait style and may be closed with studs or buttons. The back is also tucked, but here the groups extend from shoulder to waist line and are stitched all the way down. The regulation shirt sleeve completes the garment and a neckband finishes the neck. The embroidered linen collar, or the fancy stock, may be worn with this waist. The pattern (5151) is cut in 6 sizes—32 to 42 bust. To make the medium size requires 2¼ yards of material 36 inches wide.

The above pattern can be obtained by sending 10 cents to the office of this paper.

Irish Now Compulsory.

When the news reached Roscommon that Irish had been made compulsory for matriculation in the Irish University for 1913, bonfires were lighted in and round the town. The tower of the old castle was lighted up, and a large number of Gaelic Leaguers present cheered and sang Irish songs. Bonfires were also lighted on the hill of Carraun and on Rathbrennan and Mullaghambrick.

DANCING AND THE THEATRE

Rev. G. W. Henderson Explains His Views To His Congregation--Dancing Dangerous, Clean Stage May be an Educator--Christian Conscience A Safe Guide

The congregation of Charlotte St. Methodist Church assembled in the church last evening to welcome back their pastor, Rev. G. W. Henderson, and to enjoy a social time together. Musical numbers, furnished by local talent, and refreshments afterwards, constituted the programme.

The pastor gave a very interesting account of the General Conference, which he was privileged to attend recently at Vancouver, and clearly outlined the stand which he took in it in connection with the much discussed question of the abolition of the foot-note. Mr. Henderson said that although the foot-note restricting dancing, card playing, gambling, etc., in the Methodist church had been abolished, a new foot-note had been inserted, which, while not forbidding Methodist people to participate in such amusements, left it to their own conscience, and he was certain that a professed Christian member of the church would know in his own heart that these amusements were harmful and they would have not the least desire for them.

THE DANGER OF DANCING.

While not entertaining any bigoted or prejudiced opposition to dancing, and asserting that it was sinful and dangerous, "still," he said, "it encouraged the promiscuous intermingling of the sexes, and many an abandoned woman of to-day owes her downfall to the ball-room."

STAGE MAY BE EDUCATOR.

The stage, also, can be used as a source of education. The trouble lies in people not discriminating between the good and bad presentations. "I do not need to attend such places," said the speaker, "to know that some of the things witnessed and said are an insult and disgrace to the womanhood of our land."

After the address everybody adjourned to the Sunday school room, where refreshments of cake and coffee were served.

A vocal duet by Mr. R. F. Downey and Miss Edna Pringle added much to the pleasure of the evening, as did also a solo given in splendid voice by Mr. F. Skitch.

BIG SUCCESS SCORED AT THE LAKEFIELD EXHIBITION

Ideal Weather Prevailed And Attendance Was Over Two Thousand--Better Than Last Year--Horse Races Were Feature Events On Afternoon Programme

By Our Own Reporter.
Lakefield, Sept. 28.

Flags are flying. The sun is shining at its best, and its just the kind of weather to make one feel like kicking up like a three months' old colt. Crowds of people are passing through the entrance ways, and the officials at the gates are kept busy in their attempt to gather in all the tickets.

Inside is a great spectacle. People are moving here and there. Large numbers are leaning over or against a fence. Others take the grandstand. Those who are still coming hear the old familiar, "Here's where you get the worth of your money and the right change back." The smart looking youth behind the counter gives an invitation. There are all kinds of refreshing liquids, and everything else from a candy cigar to a ham sandwich. Yonder is the wheel of fortune. A nickel, a dime, is placed on the favorite letter. The big wheel goes round. It stops and you are a winner—maybe. Further on, there is a squeal, a cackle, a grunt, and other well-known salutations. Back up, everybody is making for the fence. "First heat of the Green Race," cries the starter; "Get your horses ready, boys'." In a few minutes they are on the track. Then behold the steeds. There is the trim and likely looking bay mare, and the big award (unknown). There are outfits that would make Maud S. laugh. The horses go up the stretch, but the first attempt at a getaway is called back. Another try and still another, and they are away. Topsey Hal has the post and is going nicely and well in advance of Nellie Direct. Bill Barlow is breaking on the first round and is losing ground. The second round sees the horses in pretty much the same positions. Topsey Hal has the race well in hand and a safe second comes Nellie Direct. Billy Barlow, Mack and Nellie Keswick are bringing up the rear. On the stretch for the wire there is great excitement. The little chestnut is working like a machine and the first heat is her's. The big megaphone is grabbed by the starter and the crowd is informed that the standing of the first heat is Topsey Hal, first; Nellie Direct, second; Billy Barlow, third; Mack fourth, and Nellie Keswick fifth. And Lakefield's big fair is on again in full swing.

The attendance was over the two thousand mark, and an increase over last year. Better weather could not have been wished for, and the exhibition was, according to the officials and some of the old kinds, well in advance of other years. In the exhibits building was a splendid array of farm produce. There were apples, potatoes, cabbage, pumpkins and numerous other products of the farm. Then, too, there were the exhibits of needle work, and these were of a high order.

A visit to the Lakefield Exhibition Grounds makes an impression on the visitor. Good management and evidences of success and prosperity are to be found. The buildings are new and up-to-date. Everything looks neat and clean. The Citizens' Band furnished the music for the afternoon, and the organization did its work well. The horse races and competitions were the main attractions, and the programme was carried out, with a system that permitted no long waits for the spectators. There was something doing all the time.

THE RACES.

The green race was the first of the three events, and in the first two heats Elmhirst's Topsey Hal showed her heels to the other four horses Nellie Direct was her closest competitor, but her inclination to break occasionally kept her in second place. In the third heat on the first round Topsey Hal broke a hobble and had to give way to Fitzgerald's horse, which was now being driven by Gerald Dunsford. This mishap sent Bill Barlow up to second place. The big chestnut was not behaving any too well, but when steady, was putting up a pretty race. Nellie Keswick and Mack were the trailers. In the fourth heat, with Nellie Keswick out of the race, and Topsey Hal going to the bad, Fitzgerald's and Huls horses were dishing up the excitement. Billy Barlow was giving the little mare a stiff argument, but they passed the wire in the same positions as in the preceding heat. The fifth and last heat saw the two first horses at their best, Nellie Keswick was not running, and Topsey Hal had fallen back, giving big Mack third place.

The standing was—

Nellie Direct (Fitzgerald)	2	2	1	1	1
Topsey Hal (R. Elmhirst)	1	1	5	4	4
Bill Barlow (Hull)	3	3	2	2	2
Mack (Rosboro)	4	4	3	3	3
Nellie Keswick (White)	5	5	4	dr

FREE-FOR-ALL.

This event went to Harry Direct in three straight heats, with Queens Baron chasing him all the way. The two horses were working in a manner that caught the grandstand. May Sphinx, too, was doing grand work, but was never able to get right up on either of her neighbors. In the first heat Queens Baron, with Gerald Dunsford on the ribbons, held the lead until the stretch, when he was nosed out by Merton Storey with Harry Direct. The second heat was a pretty one. Harry Direct breezed ahead, but at times the two horses were running neck and neck, with May Sphinx always dangerous. The wire saw Harry Direct a winner by a head. The last heat was a repetition, and all three horses were going strong at the finish.

The standing—

Harry Direct (Dr. Johnston)	1	1	1
Queens Baron (Dr. Johnston)	2	2	2
May Sphinx, (Dr. Pulkinghorn)	3	3	3

NAMED RACE.

May Sphinx had this event well in hand at all times. She took the lead from Molly O in the first lap, when the latter became unruly and broke. Darkie was the second horse to pass her, and while Bickel's Nellie B looked good at times, she had to be content with fourth. The second heat found May Sphinx at the front, with Molly O a close second. Nicholl's Darkie was continually losing her head, and fell back, when she looked likely to forge to the front. Nellie B hung on to last place, and dropped out for the last heat, which went May Sphinx, Molly O and Darkie. The work of Molly O in a game attempt to overhaul the leader was interesting, but she was too unsteady at critical points. May Sphinx came in with a tire off the bike.

The standing—

May Sphinx, (Dr. Pulkinghorn)	1	1	1
Molly O (Northey)	3	2	2
Darkie (Nat Nicholls)	2	3	3
Nellie B (Bickell)	4	4	dr

Harry Winch made a very efficient starter.

Each of the events was one mile on a three-lap track.

During the intervals between the heats of each race the harness horses were shown and judged. Mr. A. J. Johnston's tidy little pony, with carriage, took first prize. The outfit was a particularly natty one, and caught the fancy of the crowd in the grandstand.

A novelty race, one of the last events on the programme, was won by Reg. Hendren, of Lakefield, with Markus Dean, of Selwyn, a hot second and Wm. Rosborough third.

Many Peterborough people took in the exhibition, which was a success financially, and from other standpoints.

It will require a derrick or some powerful hoisting machine to move the steam road-roller from its position at Charlotte and Reid streets. It was impossible to get up enough steam to extricate it from its position.

JOBE CAUGHT

Much Sought After Suspect Was Arrested

Pleads Guilty to One Charge---Prisoner Faces Six Others

Edward Jobe, for whom the police have been looking in vain since latter part of August, was taken into custody last night about nine o'clock on Stewart street, while he was on his way, it is presumed, to meet his brother.

It will be remembered that during the month of August a number of stores in the centre of the city, suffered from an unknown thief. Suspicion was attached to Jobe, who had left the city. Sometime later word was received from Rochester that a man answering to his description was in the toils, but when an officer arrived there the man was not Jobe.

Tuesday Jobe came back to this city and the local police learned of his whereabouts and also that he was to be on Stewart street last night. Accordingly two officers were waiting for him and he was placed under arrest.

PLEADED GUILTY.

Before Magistrate Dumble he appeared this morning and to the charge that he stole three pairs of boots from the store of T. J. Hickey, pleaded guilty.

Mr. R. E. Wood was present in the interests of the Crown. A remand of one week was ordered.

SEVEN CHARGES.

There are six other charges which will be preferred against Jobe and to these it is understood he will plead guilty.

On August 15th, he is charged with taking from the premises of George Evans, Hunter street, one grey coat, two pair of trousers, one black coat, one vest and one fur coat. Value $90.

Under the same date he is charged with the theft of $6, three pair of clippers, twenty-nine razors, and a quantity of tobacco and cigarettes. Value $70.

Another charge is for the theft of twelve fountain pens, on August 12, from the store of F. C. Cubitt. Value $38.

For August 8th, the charge is for the theft of one watch from Johnston Fair. Value $20.

From the premises of James R. Bell on August 13th, he is charged with stealing fifteen boxes of sardines, and a quantity of pickles, cheese and other articles. Value $5

The seventh charge is that of Aug. 8th, he stole one bicycle, the property of F. Pearson. Value $30.

Dear Sir,—Your editorial of "The Scandal Mongerer" in Tuesday's Review interested me a good deal.

I could not refrain from expressing my great approval at the spirit shown by your paper in extolling the want of "over the fence and front door step," wireless amongst the Peterborough "Do as you would be done by." I am one of those who have perhaps suffered from an over plus of attention to my small affairs, in such places as Montreal, Hastings, Toronto, Chicago and even Millbrook, and your kindness leads me to suspect you have been charitable, let alone in Peterborough, or can it be possible that the Review is pleased to be sarcastic? (it has been so hinted to me), but I feel sure the Amiable Editor would never dream of that, rather he would follow the directions for treatment by a local physician for an already half flayed patient and don't rub it in.
A FELLOW SUFFERER.

THE LATE THOMAS BURNS

At his late residence, 331 McDonnel street, Thomas Burns, a lifelong resident of this city, passed away at 7.30 o'clock this morning. Thirty years ago, while in Rochester, the late Mr. Burns was stricken with a paralytic stroke, and while he recovered at the time, his demise was due to a great extent to the attack. He had been confined to his room for the past three weeks. The deceased was 52 years of age, and a carpenter by trade, having served his apprenticeship here with Mr. Arthur Rutherford. He had never married. Surviving him are his mother, three sisters and three brothers. The brothers are Messrs. John, James and Michael, and the sisters are Misses Katherine and Julia and Mrs. J. M. Donovan, all of this city.

The funeral will take place Saturday morning at nine o'clock from the late residence to St. Peter's Cathedral and thence to St. Peter's cemetery.

INJURED IN FALL FROM BICYCLE

Austin O'Brien, the youngest son of Mr. M O'Brien, Gilmour street, Inspector of Separate Schools for the province, fell off his bicycle this morning and was severely shaken up. He was rendered unconscious for a short time.

A valuable horse belonging to Mr. Fred Eason came near drowning itself in the marsh on Sunday morning. The animal, which Mr. Eason had recently purchased at Mr. Allan's sale in Douro, had been pasturing in a field alongside of the river. Evidently it was trying to get back home as it swam up the river under the bridge, but attempted to land in the marsh and got mired. When discovered it was almost completely sunk belowt he surface. It required the combined effort of a number of men to extricate the animal, which had cut itself badly in its efforts to get out.

The directors of the Agricultural Society have got the racetrack put into shape and have cut the grass and got things generally cleaned up in preparation for the fair next week. The young people of Lang held a basket social and dance in the town hall on Monday evening, which was a very successful affair. The death occurred Wednesday, October 21st, of one of the oldest residents of the township in the person of Mrs. Stewart. The deceased, who was in her eighty-fourth year, had been in ill health for some time and the end was not unexpected. The funeral was held from the late family residence of the deceased and was largely attended. Rev. Mr. Johnstone, pastor of the Methodist church, of which Mrs. Stewart was a member, conducted the service at the house and grave. Three sons, Alexander and James, of Otonabeem and William, of Detroit, Michigan, and three daughters, Mrs. Thomas Howson, Otonabee; Miss Eliza, at home, and Mrs. Johnstone, Toronto; are left to mourn her loss.

The Village Improvement Association have made arrangements for a concert to be held in the town hall on the night of the Keene Fair.

The Indians who are camped at Sugar Island held what they advertised as their fiftieth annual rice harvest picnic last Friday. As to this being the fiftieth, no one seems to know exactly when the first rice harvest picnic was held. While some claim that the custom originated so recently as fifty years ago others of the older members of the band say that fifty years ago the same uncertainty existed as to the date of the original picnic as does today. But that is comparatively unimportant. The Indians, once they started that annual picnic, realized that it was too good a thing to drop and it will likely be celebrated annually as long as there are Indians and wild rice on Rice Lake.

The steamer "Monarch" brought a large crowd from Gore's Landing, Harwood, Hiawatha and Keene. Besides, a great many people came in canoes, skiffs and launches. There were in all about three hundred people on the island. A good programme of sports was run off during the afternoon. Following is the list of winners of the various events;

Senior double canoe race—First Madden Howard and Alfred Crowe; second, Fred Simpson and Johnstone Paudash.

Junior double canoe race. — First, Willima Smoke and John Smoke; second, Ebenezer Blake and Levi Smoke.

No entries in the ladies' double or single canoe race nor in the men's single canoe race.

200 yd. dash—First William Smoke, second. Smith Comego.

100 yard dash—First, Fred Harris, Gore's Landing; second, W. Smoke, Alderville.

Girls' race—1, Lucy Paudash, Hiawatha; 2, Mary Shipegaw, Alderville.

Putting shot—1, William Smoke, Alderville; 2, Alfred C. Crowe, Hiawatha.

Mr. Fred Simpson, the famous Indian runner, who is a member of the Alderville band, also did an exhibition two miles.

The committee in charge of the picnic, while pleased to see such a large crowd, were somewhat afraid at one stage of the proceedings that they would be unable to feed all the picnickers, but they managed nicely, and put up an excellent dinner, a feature of which were the wild duck soup, roast wild duck, 'lunge, black bass and wild rice pudding.

The Alderville brass band was in attendance, and their music did much to liven up things. The Indians had a good surplus over paying all the expenses and giving handsome prizes to the winners of the various sporting events.

The boat returned at five o'clock, but left the scow, which served as a good dancing platform, and with Prof. Enoch Crowe as fiddler and Mr. Arthur Simpson as floor manager, the dancing was kept up till three o'clock next morning, many of the young people who came on the steamboat remaining for the dance.

The rice harvest is about over, but the Indians are all on the island yet, parching and winnowing the rice in preparing it for culinary use.

Mr. J. Lowe, Marion, Ohio, who has been for the past week a guest at the Victoria House, returned to the other side Saturday, having had a very successful wook's fishing. During his stay here he captured eleven good maskinonge.

Montreal Live Stock.

MONTREAL, Sept. 28.—(Special.)—There has been no important change in the condition of the export live stock trade of late, prices in all the leading foreign markets having ruled remarkably steady, with the exception of Glasgow, which has been stronger. The demand for ocean freight space is fairly good, and all the space to Liverpool for the month of October has been booked up at 30s to 32s 6d per head, which rates show an advance of 2s 6d per head over what steamship agents realized for September. The rates to London rule about steady at 22s 6d to 25s per head, and the bulk of the space to that port has also been let for October. There is only a limited demand for Glasgow space, altho the agents have agreed to limit the numbers on each vessel to 300 head. The Manchester vessels are carrying very few cattle, for which they are getting 25s per head.

At the Canadian Pacific Live Stock Market offerings this morning were 700 cattle, 900 sheep and lambs 1500 hogs and 300 calves. Choice steers sold at 5½c, good at 5¼c, fairly good at 5c, fair at 4½c to 4¾c per lb., and common at 4c to 4¼c per lb. Cows brought from 3½c to 5c and bulls, 2¾c to 3c per lb. There was also a weaker feeling for sheep and lambs. Sheep sold at 3½c to 4c, and lambs, at 5c to 5½c per lb. Calves were scarce and stronger at from $3 to $15 each. The run of hogs was fairly large and sales were made at $9 per cwt. At the Montreal Stock Yards West End Market, there were offered 500 cattle, 600 sheep and lambs, 600 hogs and 100 calves. Prices realized much the same as quoted above with the exception of hogs, which showed an advance of 10c to 20c per cwt., since Monday, and sales of selected lots were made at $9.50 to $9.60.

A Sure Way of Saving.

An ingenious method of putting his savings beyond his own reach was adopted by a German writer who found from dire experience that all his profits melted away as soon as earned. Having made $80,000 by a fortunate literary speculation, he placed the whole of the money, together with his will, in the Imperial Deposit bank at Berlin and on receiving the receipt from the cashier deliberately tore it up. The cashier thought he was mad and told him angrily that it would take fully three years before he could expect to obtain a duplicate receipt. "That is just why I have torn up the original," calmly remarked the depositor, "and now the money is safe for that time."

Nine head of valuable cattle were stolen from the property of W. E. Westby, West London, Ont.

LATEST Y. M. C. A. NOTES

To-night being open house at the Y.M.C.A. the regular programme of gymnasium classes will be carried out, and no special features of any kind will be put on, so that every visitor to the building to-night will be given a chance to see for himself the work being done in the gymnasium every night in the week. The classes that are scheduled for to-night are two of the regular classes. The Business Boys will hold their class session from 7.00 to 8.15 p.m., and will be in charge of G. L. Galley.

At 8.15 the intermediate class will be held, and at 9.00 p.m. two teams will be picked from the intermediate class, who will give a demonstration of basketball.

After the basketball game the intermediate class will adjourn to the bath room, where a game of water tag will be indulged in. If you intend to be a spectator of this game, and wish to get close enough to see the fine points of the game, better get into a bathing suit. However, come along and see the acrobats perform off the spring board. And if you are under the impression that there is nothing doing up here, come along and see one night's work. There will be nothing doing to-night that will not be carried on throughout the season. A hearty welcome is extended to you.

THE DOG QUESTION

Toronto Globe—The hunters have not lessened their efforts to secure the raising of the ban on the shipment of hunting dogs outside the area now under the muzzling order. Through a deputation that waited upon Hon. W. J. Hanna they have received an assurance that if the Federal Government is willing to allow dogs to be taken out of the "rabies zone" the Provincial Government will not offer any objections.

As a result another effort is being made to bring about a change of sentiment at Ottawa, and last night a petition containing about five hundred names was sent on its way to Hon. Sydney Fisher.

Wiarton, Sept. 28.—Tom Longboat beat three local runners in a three-mile race at the Fall Fair here day. The Indian showed some of his old-time form. His competitors ran in half-mile relays, but Longboat beat the last man about twenty-five or thirty yards, coming from behind in the stretch. The time was announced as 14.50, but it is suspected that somebody had a trick watch.

For the first time in the history of this district potato bugs have made their appearance. They have been discovered on many fields in town and district, and there is no mistaken identity. Many of those who have discovered the pest are from eastern Canada, and now recall the days when father used to make them "pick" the bugs. There is likely to be a big demand for the old reliable Paris green and sprinkling cans.—Wolseley, Sask., News.

Semi-ready physique type features will be most strongly appreciated by odd-sized men, of different type from the ordinary—men with short legs and full waists—men with long legs and medium or small waists—men with arms longer or shorter than the average—men who have previously had to accept "stock" sizes, which went with the waists and chest sizes, and which have in most cases proven too long or too short to be worn with comfort or good form. There is the security of a correct fitting and high quality of cloth materials which cannot but appeal to the man who has heretofore been compelled to have his clothes made to order by a retail tailor.

HAVELOCK HAPPENINGS

Fire—Drunk Again — Boy Hurt — Death Calls— Council Meeting—Drilling for Water—Personals

Special to the Review.

Havelock, Sept. 27.—The west end of the town was visited by fire again on Saturday evening last, when the residence of Mr. Willard Hubble, which stands behind the Belmont Roller Mills, was consumed by fire with a large quantity of household effects. The residence was covered by insurance, amounting to $500, and the furniture $300.

The fire was first noticed at about eight o'clock in the evening, and there was soon a large number of hand. Mr and Mrs. Hubble were both away when the fire commenced, so the cause is not known. The fire first broke out on the roof of the back kitchen, and if there had been any ladders or pails available it could have easily been extinguished by the neighbors as the building was wet on account of the recent rain.

There being no appliances with which to work, the crowd had to be contented with standing and watching the building slowly burn up. On account of the dampness of the building and the fire starting on the building, and the fire starting on the roof it took a long time to burn and a crowd remained until far into the night watching the spectacular scene which provided them with sightseeing for a few hours at an expense of about $800. It was rather an expensive affair even for the railroad town.

A barn which stands about 15 feet to the west was enveloped by the flames at times and a constant stream of sparks kept lighting on it but a couple of boys with the aid of an old broken ladder and a few pails kept it from burning.

The town is supposed to have a large number of pails and ladders on hand, but it is very seldom that they make their appearance at a fire. Havelock has a stalwart band of fire fighters, and they have done excellent work in many fires before, but they cannot be expected to work wonders. It is up to the village council to at least supply pails and ladders, and to have some system that they will be on hand at the required time.

DRUNK AGAIN.

Local option, but nevertheless it is inflicted a nasty wound. At first it was thought that the young lad's jaw was broken, but it turned out that only a bad cut had been inflicted.

DEATH CALLS

The death of Mrs. Wm. Henshall took place at the family residence on Saturday at noon. Although the deceased had been ailing for some time, death came very suddenly. The funeral took place to Toronto on Tuesday, services being conducted at the home on Monday evening by the Rev. C. W. Holdsworth, of town. The deceased, who was 65 years of age, has been a resident of Havelock for twenty-two years. She leaves to mourn her loss a husband and daughter, to whom the sympathy of the village is extended in their bereavement.

The machines are being operated by Jones and McKeckine, of Marmora, one being run by gasoline and the other by steam.

Parisian Sage is the favorite hair dressing of refined people, and since its introduction into America it has met with wonderful success.

However, his outfit seemed to be in excellent condition in the evening. It was then Mr. George Weir's turn to be unlucky A very important buckle of his harness gave way, and his fair passenger was forced to alight. THE CAR TO BUY

Russell-Knight

The Car Noted for its Great Power, Flexibility, Quietness and Endurance

Russell-Knight 1911 Models: 22, 26 and 38 H.P.

CRITICS CONFOUNDED

Interested critics said a year ago: "Do not buy a Knight motor, it is an experiment—in a year or two it may be all right."

Partly this is true—the Knight engine will be improved. Quite frankly we venture to hope that each Knight engine and each Russell car we make will be better than the one before. We believe that our 1914 cars will be better than those of to-day.

But this is the fact that must be borne in mind :—

The Knight engine built in its first year, by the first firm building it in a commercial way, under official observation, put up a performance which no value motor made by any firm after years of experience has been able to equal.

Is not this conclusive proof of Knight superiority?

Then consider that since that time the engineering skill of five of the leading engineering firms of the world have worked for the improvement of the motor, and have been aided by the experience of over 2,000 users.

To-day the Knight motor stands on its record in all quarters of the globe as a tested, tried-out product of superlative excellence.

In the 1911 Russell "38" you get the culmination of this work in engine design.

Send your name to receive new catalogue of Russell 1911 models with prices.

A FIELDING RECORD TO HOLD TO MIRROR

Mr. Walter Jayes, who is on a visit to his uncle, Mr. John Jayes, of the Munro House, has no cause to turn his picture to the wall.

During the past season Mr. Jayes looked after the left garden of the Green Bay, Wis., ball team in the Wisconsin-Illinois League, and with the exception of a solitary error, went through the season with a perfect fielding average. His batting average shows him around the 250 mark.

Mr. Jayes, who makes it a point to visit Peterborough after the ball seasons are over, leaves to-morrow for Toronto, and after a short visit with friends there, will go to Buffalo for the winter.

He will likely be with Green Bay again next year.

A RECEPTION OF REAL INTEREST

Will be Provided at Y. M. C. A. this evening—A Wide Open Invitation to Men of Peterborough—A Few of the Y's Many Advantages

The prospects are that the Y.M.C.A. building will be taxed to its utmost capacity to-night when the men of Peterborough will inspect the work.

There will be something doing right from the drop of the hat and there will not be a dull moment from start to finish. Yet there will be no hard and fast programme. The men will move about at their own pleasure. There will be members everywhere to explain and show and to make the men feel at home.

There will be music both in the gymnasium and and in the front part of the building. It will be an opportunity for a host of men to spend a very pleasant and profitable evening.

Mr. Thompson has assured us that the gymnasium will contribute enough interesting programme to keep the men in that part of the building all evening. But it will pay the visitor to make inquiry about the other departments. The Educational work is worth looking into. Few men realize that it is possible for them to get enough education in the Y.M.C.A. to the evenings to fit them to pass their matriculation and to enter college. What a boon to the fellow who feels reticent about going to the Collegiate because he is too old to goamong the small boys and girls. And every year makes it that much harder to study. Young man get in right now. Then there is the fellow who is being held back in his work in the shop because he can't draw a piece of work to scale. He sees the other men doing it and they ar the men who are going ahead of him. The association fits in here again. A man will be in in charge of that class who can give you just what you ned because he is right up against it every day at his work. The secretary would like to hear from all the men who want to take up this work. The classes should be going now and would be if he knew the men who are after the work.

Mr. Gilchrist would like too, to hear of any men who would like to take up the study of electricity. There are a few men who want this subject, but it would not do to take it up unless there were six at least. If you want this let him know.

The campaign is still jogging along and the office was kept busy last night taking in new members. One of the campaigners passed the remark last night that the people are just now waking up to the fact that the Y.M.C.A. is running a campaign. Some of the new men are more enthusiastic than some of the older ones and are bringing them in coupls.

Only two days left, but they can be the biggest days yet if good hard work is put on them.

Let thre be a good crowd of men at the Y.M.C.A. to-night

MISSIONARY SOCIETY MEETS

Opened this Morning at Mark St. Church—Judge Huycke to Speak this Evening

The annual convention of the W. M.S. opened this morning, the first session commencing at 10.45. There were about fifty delegates present. The chair was taken by the district-organizer, Mrs. J. K. Moore, who gave a very interesting Bible reading, after the opening hymn of consecration. Rev. C. H. Coon led in prayer for the workers at home and in foreign fields.

After the appointing of a secretary, the reports were read from the different auxiliaries, circles and bands. There was throughout a ring of thankfulness for past blessings, and a feeling that the coming year will be one of even greater success.

Encouraging reports were given from Bridgenorth, Warsaw, Bailliboro, Bethel, Charlotte Street and George Street auxiliaries.

From 11.15 to 12 a very impressive memorial service was led by Mrs. Allum, of Charlotte St. Auxiliary.

After the singing of a hymn which was followed by prayer by several of the delegates, the names of those members who had died during the year were read. At the name of Mrs. (Rev.) Kenner, Mrs. Campbell spoke at some length of the qualities and lovable disposition possessed by the departed sister. Her life had been spent in service for others, and the great love she bore her Heavenly Master led her to take a very active part in all work pretaining to the advancement of His cause. Her name will long be remembered and revered by those who were more intimately acquainted with her. During her last illness she never murmured or repined, but felt resigned to her Father's will. Another dear departed sister was Mrs. (Rev.) Kilgour, who for some nine or ten years labored in the Charlotte St. Auxiliary. Mrs. Allum spoke feelingly and lovingly of her.

After this service it was moved by Mrs. Campbell and seconded by Mrs. Kelly, that a letter of remembrance be sent to Mrs. J. Kendry and Mrs. Turner, who were unable to attend the convention.

To-night His Honor Judge Huycke will deliver an address. An interesting programme has been arranged.

September Nuptials

EDMONDSON—WOOD.

The residence of Mr. Harry Edmondson, 566 Weller street, was the scene of one of the prettiest weddings of the season, when his daughter Ethel, and Mr. Hy Woods were united in marriage by the Rev. I Couch, pastor of George street Methodist church. The wedding took place last evening.

The house was beautifully decorated for the occasion, and the ceremony was performed under a large arch of yellow and gold autumn leaves intermingled with astors and chrysanthemums. The arch was illuminated with electric lights, which emitted an attractive blending of colors.

The bride was given away by her father and looked very pretty in blue silk. Mendelssohn's wedding march was played by the sister of the bride, Miss Grace Edmondson. Both bride and groom were unattended. After the tying of the nuptial knot the party, including guests to the number of about thirty, did justice to a bountiful and dainty supper, after which the young couple drove to their future home at 310 Margaret avenue.

The bride is very popular amongst a large circle of girl friends, and was the recipient of numerous beautiful presents. Among the gifts of which the young couple received was a handsome cheque from Mr. W. T. Edmondson, brother of the bride, and also one of pleasing demonination from the groom's parents.

The groom is a prominent all-round athlete of the city. The heartiest wishes for a prosperous future are extended to the young couple.

BORLAND—KIDD.

A pretty house wedding took place at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Borland, Otonabee, when their eldest daughter Rubie, became the wife of Mr. Walter H. Kidd, of Indian River.

The bride, who was given away by her father, looked very dainty in a gown of embroidered baptiste and carried a bouquet of roses and lily-of-the-valley. Her sister, Miss Pearl Borland was bridesmaid, and looked very pretty in a gown of white persian lawn, trimmed with embroidered flouncing and carried a bouquet of pink asters and gladioius. W. Earle Kidd, of Toronto, brother of the groom, was best man, while the wedding march was played by Miss Maidie Post, of Belleville.

The ceremony took place in a bower of asters and asparagus, and was performed by the Rev. Wm. Johnstone, of Keene, in the presence of about 70 guests.

After dinner had been served, the bride and groom left on the evening train for Ottawa. The bride's going away costume was of plum colored diagonal serge and black hat with white mount.

Mr. and Mrs. Kidd will, on their return, reside at Indian River.

UTAH WILD DUCKS ARE OVERCOME BY PESTILENCE

Salt Lake, Utah, Sept. 28—Because of the strange pestilence that has struck the breed, wild ducks will not be sold in the markets of Utah this season. This announcement was made to-day following an investigation by the state food and game commissioners.

The commissioners visited several gun clubs and preserves near here and found that ducks and geese were dying in thousands. In one space five paces wide and 150 long, they counted 832 dead birds. As a result they warned hunters against shooting the fowl, and have advised that local sportsmen notify their eastern friends of the conditions here before the season opens.

At the famous Millionaire Duck Club, which was one of the points visited by the commissioners, the mouth of the Red river was found to be a sea of dead ducks and geese. Scientists are baffled by the disease among the water fowl, and are unable to diagnose it.

All Saints' Harvest Festival

All Saints' Harvest Festival will be held this evening at 8 o'clock. Rev. W. L. Armitage, of Picton, the first rector of All Saints', will be the preacher.

LATEST FASHIONS

"The fashionably dressed woman hereafter must wear two chemises, one underneath and one on top. This is the latest dictum of these who make clothes for women," said Miss Muller, of New York, and Paris authority on fashion, who has been preparing to lay the matter before the banquet of the dressmakers' convention to-night.

The thing is really an outside chemise, and has been invented to help out the top end of a contraption just as new, which is known in the dressmaking shop as the "bolster slip" gown.

One of the star demonstrators at the convention this year is Mrs. Middleton, who has spent sixteen years studying how fashions are created in Paris.

"The outside chemises fasten on the left shoulder," she said. "They are a part of the dress, not a cloak or wrap of any sort. They will be worn next year."

The "bolster slip" gown, which is coming along soon, say the modista, is the definite outcome of the hobble skirt. Among real dressmakers, it seems the hobble skirt never was taken seriously in itself, but "created a tendency," and the "bolster slip" is the result.

The "outside chemise" is to be hung over the "bolster slip" gown.

JURY BRINGS IN VERDICT OF MURDER AGAINST M'NULTY

Man Breaks Down When Finding is Pronounced and His Wife Clings to Him While She Abuses Mary Dolan —Judge Pays no Attention to Recommendation for Mercy.

Barrie, Sept. 30.—Thomas McNulty of Orillia was yesterday found guilty of murdering the unnamed infant of Mary Dolan, which he had never seen. The jury was out three and a half hours. Mary Dolan was found guilty of the same crime on Tuesday. The sentences will in all likelihood be pronounced by Justice Britton at the resumption of the assizes to-day.

It was one of the wildest emotional scenes that have ever been enacted in an Ontario court-room when the foreman pronounced the word "guilty!"

McNulty's wife, who had frequently interrupted the court with her crying, broke into ill-repressed shrieks.

Then, as the verdict was repeated, McNulty burst out crying, and his wife, leaning over the side of the dock, wrapped her arms around him. Thus they continued, moaning loudly, while the 12 jurors were polled, and their cries were supplemented by sobs from McNulty's sister-in-law and the whines of his dog, which somehow had pushed its way through the crowded aisles just as the foreman announced his finding.

As the constable tore the man from his wife's arms, she cried "My poor husband, and my poor little baby!" She had to be firmly escorted from the court-room. Outside, her screams could be heard, louder than before, while she poured forth a tirade of condemnation on the convicted girl.

"She was a bad, bad girl," she shrieked. "She went around the country ruining every home she could!"

Throughout the whole case Mrs. McNulty sat as close to the prisoners' dock as she could squeeze. Several times Crown Prosecutor Blackstock had to halt in his scathing arraignment of the prisoner because of her cries of protest, but when they tried to remove her, she stolidy refused to leave his side.

"No, he has not," she broke in when Mr. Blackstock informed the jurors that the man was not on trial for seduction, nor for wrecking the life of his wife. Again, when crown counsel was reading McNulty's ardent avowals of love in his letters to Miss Dolan, she hissed, "And to think I let the sneak stay in my house, and she was there all the time when I was having my baby!"

The case all through has been remarkable for its emotional scenes. The convicted Dolan girl had three frightful nervous spasms Wednesday, and every few minutes, while giving evidence yesterday, had to be restored by a physician. Constable Wright fainted in the witness-box on Tuesday.

The case will also go down in history as the first in Ontario at least, where the alleged father of an illegitimate child had been convicted of murder for counseling or procuring its death. Justice Britton charged the jury with the importance of this aspect. He also made reference to the "astounding prevalence of infantile murder."

A. E. Creswicke, K.C., for the defence, put in four or five young men witnesses in an endeavor to show that Miss Dolan had illicit relations with others besides the prisoner, to which Mr. Blackstock objected, and the judge ruled it out as evidence.

To Mr. Creswicke, Miss Dolan admitted she was infatuated with McNulty, and when asked why she didn't cease her relations with him, said he told her his wife wasn't going to live long, and he would marry her.

In a re-examination by Mr. Blackstock she told of McNulty having implored her not to give him away, when they were in the jail cells.

His final question to her was, "It is true that McNulty wrote you a letter telling you to strangle this child?"

"Yes," faltered the girl.

Mr. Creswicke asked the judge for a reserved case, as he intends to appeal. In the case of both Miss Dolan and McNulty the verdicts included recommendations to mercy.

In the former his lordship assured consideration, in the latter he made no comment.

Ottawa, Sept. 30.—Announcement is made that Dr. Kung, Chinese consul to Canada, has tendered his resignation, and will leave at the end of next month for China. He has not been in good health for some time, and desires a change. His successor will be Mr. Wong, who has been consul at Nagasaki.

Toronto, Sept. 30.—The police have learned that the accident insurance slip found upon the body of the mangled body picked up beside the tracks near Eastern avenue was issued at Ottawa to Frank George Hobbs, a C.P.R. dining-car waiter from Montreal.

U.S. COMMISSIONER MAKES RAID ON CURB BROKERS

B. H. Scheftels & Co. Charged With Using the Mails to Sell Worthless Mining Stock—Firm's Dealings Are Estimated at $5,000,000.

New York, Sept. 30.—Following one of the most sensational raids ever engineered by federal authorities in this city, directed yesterday against the firm of B. H. Scheftels & Co., curb brokers in Broad street, a number of members of the company, including B. H. Scheftels, its president, were held in heavy bail by U. S. Commissioner Shields, for hearing on Oct. 5, on a charge of using the mails to defraud.

Last night search was being made by the police and by Government inspectors, for George Graham Rice, whose real name is said to be Simon Herzig, who is declared to be the real head of the concern.

Simultaneously with the raid here, warrants were served on the managers of the company's branch offices in Boston, Providence, Philadelphia, Detroit, Chicago and Milwaukee. According to agents of the Department of Justice, the Scheftels' company had been engaged in promoting the sale of mining securities of doubtful value in all parts of the country. Estimates of the firm's dealings are placed as high as $5,000,000.

The seven arraigned here are: B. H. Scheftels, Charles F. Belser, secretary of the company; George T. Sullivan, Clarence McCormack, John Delaney, William T. Seagrave and Charles B. Stone. Warrants for 16 men had been issued, but the others, including Rice and Charles S. Perseg, eluded the raiders. Scheftels, Seagraves, Stone and Delaney secured bail, but Belser, McCormack and Sullivan were committed to the Tombs, as bondsmen were not forthcoming.

While the hearing was set for Oct. 6, it is expected that the federal grand jury will have taken action before that time.

The firm of B. H. Scheftels & Co. was organized about two years ago, and had conducted a large business, mainly through an extensive advertising propaganda. Mining specialties were its chief offering to investors. A weekly newspaper was published, to reach clients, and a corps of 35 stenographers is said to have been required to attend to its correspondence. After the arrest yesterday two patrol wagonloads of papers, books and memoranda were seized by the inspectors for examination.

The raid was made while the curb market was in full swing, and attracted great attention. Thousands rushed to the scene, and police reserves had to be called out to clear a path for the patrol wagons.

MR. FIELDING IS NOT WELL BADLY IN NEED OF A REST

Paralysis of Left Side of Face Has Taken a Good Deal Out of Him—His Illness May be Made Excuse for Delaying Parliament for Some Months.

Ottawa, Sept. 30.—It is stated, on what appears to be excellent authority, that Parliament will not meet in November, as was intended, and it may be months before it does meet. Mr. Fielding's illness may be made the excuse, but the real reason is that the Government dreads next session.

Disturbing questions, which will involve statesmanship of the highest order, are to be dealt with. There is the tariff, also the naval question, the elevators, and the multitude of promises made by the Premier on his western tour. No work has been done by the Cabinet yet, in the way of preparation for next session.

Hon. W. S. Fielding arrived in the city yesterday. The Minister of Finance seemed to be in a cheerful mood, but it was very evident that the paralysis of the left side of the face, which attacked him a few days ago, has taken a good deal out of him. His step lacked the brisk buoyancy that has always been one of his characteristics. His left eye was protected by a guard, which covered also a portion of his cheek, but his face was drawn, and he looked years older than when he left here for England last June.

It is stated that Mr. Fielding's condition is not serious, "The doctors' reports are very reassuring," is the statement made to-day. It is added that Mr. Fielding will have to take a complete rest.

Just how successful the Minister of Finance will be in overcoming the restless energy of his nature, may be forcasted by his failure to obey doctors' instructions already. In spite of his illness, he paid a visit to his office in the eastern block yesterday afternoon, and insisted upon looking into some matters of importance which have been awaiting his return. "He simply can't rest," was the remark of an official of the Department.

A despatch from Washington states that the U. S. Department of State, under the President's direction, has made preparations to act as soon as word is received from Ottawa indicating the intention of the Dominion Government concerning the proposed reciprocity negotiations.

It is understood in Ottawa that any move towards negotiations may be delayed until the Minister of Finance has had that rest which has been rendered necessary by his illness.

BOTH WILL HANG

Girl and Deceiver Will go to the Gallows on Wednesday December 14th --Justice Britton Pronounced Sentence in Barrie Infanticide Case.

Intense Feeling Against McNulty the Father of the Infant---The Final Word in a Sensational Trial.

Barrie, Ont., Sept. 30.—Mary Dolan was found guilty of the murder of her infant child.

Thomas McNulty was also found guilty of inciting the girl to commit the murder. They were both sentenced this morning by Mr. Justice Britton to be hanged, Wednesday, Dec. 14.

There was a profound sensation in the court.

The news spread like wildfire.

The feeling against McNulty is intense.

That for the girl is sympathy.

It is the opinion that the girl was a dupe and a tool in the hands of her betrayer.

SHORE FISHING WAS A FAILURE

St. John's, Nfld., Sept. 30.—Owing to the almost complete failure of the shore fishing, it is feared that the privations of the Labrador fishermen will be particularly severe during the coming winter. The season's catch is believed to be the smallest in the annals of the organized fisheries. It was estimated yesterday that the total fish export from Labrador will not reach 50,000 quintals, while last year, which was itself an exceptionally poor one for fishermen, the exports amounted to 160,000 quintals.

ROOSEVELT HOME AGAIN

Oyster Bay, Sept. 30.—Theodore Roosevelt returned early last evening from Saratoga with the scalp of the Republican old guard of New York State added to his big collection of trophies. He has placed his services at the disposal of the Republican state committee, and hopes to make at least one speech in every county in the state. He will try to inject into the fight all the fire and vigor of his personality and make the campaign one of the liveliest which New York state has seen in many a year.

Brantford Growing Fast.

Brantford, Sept. 30.—The figures issued by the assessors yesterday morning show Brantford's population to be 21,964, an increase of more than 1,200 over last year. The increase in the total assessment is $836,000, but this includes about $200,000 in exemptions on new public buildings and churches. Taking in the suburbs adjacent to the city, which will come in in a short time, the population would reach 25,000.

TOO INFIRM TO ATTEND

Eighty-Year-Old Bridegroom Unable to be in Court, Says His Lawyer.

Barrie, Sept. 30.—The celebrated case of Catharine McCormick, to annul the marriage of her 80-year-old second cousin, Michael Fraser, on the ground of insanity, comes before Justice Britton to-day. The first shot was fired last night, while the jury were out in the McNulty murder trial.

John King, K.C., counsel for Fraser and his new wife (Miss Robertson), asked his lordship to excuse the old gentleman from coming down to Barrie.

"We object very strongly to having him brought from Orillia, as he is in a very serious state with 'arteris sclerosis.' Dr. Raikes, his family physician, has been attending him regularly of late, and has made an affidavit that it would be a very dangerous thing to move him down here for the examination for discovery, and it was taken to Midland.

"I suggest, my lord, that you go up there and interview him, as it would be too great a risk to bring him down here."

Judge Britton: "Would it be a greater risk to him to come here than for me to go to Orillia? I certain do not propose to take a trip of that kind."

Mr. McDonald, K.C., counsel for Mrs. McCormick, also objected.

"It has been my learned friend's tactics all through to delay. I am informed that Fraser has been out in a canoe lately, and he goes out driving and riding in an automobile."

"Are you going to advance canoeing as an evidence of his insanity?" laughed the judge.

"Well, I certainly do object to those affidavits."

MUST IMPROVE TRAIN SERVICE

Chatham, Sept. 30.—Mr. Dixon of the Railway Commission was in the city yesterday in consultation with city and county officials in reference to the train service on the Pere Marquette, as a result of which that company will be compelled to arrange their schedule to provide better accommodation, and the C.P.R. also may be asked to install gates at all of their city crossings, with watchmen to guard over them.

MGR. FALLON'S TROUBLES

Montreal, Sept. 30.—A member of the school board of Notre Dame du Lac, Walkerville, Ont., writes La Patrie as follows: "I am afraid that Mgr. Fallon cannot get away from the accusation that weighs upon his head for having forbidden the use of the French language in the schools of his diocese.

"As a matter of fact, the bishop's edict has caused trouble in all the schools of the County of Essex. We have, for instance, had an interview with the Sisters of Notre Dame du Lac, and we asked the superior who gave the order to suppress the use of French in the schools, and even forbid the language to be spoken. The directress replied that the mother superior of the Convent de St. Joseph, London, had been called to the bishop's palace in London, and had received her instructions from Mgr. Fallon himself.

"In fact, it is my duty to add that all the troubles the French-Canadians of Ontario are now having came from London."

MONTREAL TO WELCOME T.P.

Montreal, Sept. 30.—Preparations have been going on here for some time to fitly welcome T. P. O'Connor, who will speak at the Monument National on Thursday evening, Oct. 6. Mayor Guerin will preside, if his worship gets back in time from New York, where he will attend the consecration of St. Patrick's Cathedral, and the Irish envoy will be introduced by C. J. Doherty, M.P. for St. Anns.

Acquitted on Shooting Charge.

Toronto, Sept. 30.—Victor Castilano, an Italian, was acquitted by the sessions jury of shooting with intent at Carle Ross in a row in a house on Chandos avenue, in August. There had been a general fight following upon a much mixed love affair, in which Castilano and another were rival suitors, and Ross an intending peacemaker.

Socialists Nominate Candidate.

Albany, N.Y., Sept. 30.—The state ticket of the Socialist-Labor party was filed by petition with the secretary of state yesterday. Frank E. Passano of Troy is the candidate for governor.

PREFERRED ALTAR TO JURY BOX

Ottawa, Sept. 30.—A novel case came up before Judge Champagne in the Hull superior court yesterday, when a witness wrote that he could not attend because he was being married. In his letter he says he laid the case before his fiancee, but she only smiled and said: "I need you more than the judge does." The excuse of the witness was accepted, and he will not be made liable for contempt of court.

BOURASSA IS SUSPICIOUS

Montreal, Sept. 30.—The little Canadian named Henri Bourassa sees imperialism in everything. Now Le Devoir wants to know what the Quebec Government is going to do about the Strathcona Fund, as it will be remembered that some time ago the Canadian High Commissioner gave a quarter of a million for the instruction of the Canadian youth in military and physical drill.

Le Devour reminds its readers that Lord Strathcona is an ardent imperialist, and says that this fund should be watched.

BOOKS WERE BADLY MUDDLED

Woodstock, Sept. 30.—A. McNeil, ex-secretary-treasurer of the Embro School Board, charged with embezzlement, was yesterday afternoon committed for speedy trial in Woodstock. The auditors, Porter and Sloan, were called and questioned regarding the state of the books for 1908 and 1909, but said that these were in such a muddle that an expert would have to examine them to get the truth.

THEY WANT NO CHANGE IN B.N.A. ACT

Montreal, Sept. 30.—Speaking for the Province of Quebec, La Presse says that Quebec does not want any part in the proposed modification of the B.N.A. Act, with a view to give to the smaller provinces a larger representation in the House of Commons. The French daily concludes thus: "When we sign a just and equitable arrangement, we are ready to support the consequences without complaint.

The chimes fund rose again to-day by subscriptions from Rev. Dr Langfeldt and Rev. W. L. Armitage, a former rector of All Saints' church,

LATE TICKS FROM WIRES

A great landslide filled up the Panama Canal ditch in Culebra Cut.

Sir Thomas Vezy Strong elected Lord Mayor of London yesterday.

The new British cruiser Bristol made 27 knots an hour in her speed trials.

Joseph Kaminiski, a Detroit Pole, out of employment, sold his four-year-old son for $25.

Eight workmen fell with a scaffold at Winnipeg and three of them were seriously injured.

Rough weather on the Atlantic failed to compel the Queen's Own men to discontinue drill on shipboard.

A Victoria company has bought 35,000 acres of land on Vancouver Island and will throw it open for settlement.

The wireless station at Triangle, B.C., talked with Honolulu, which is the Pacific record for long-distance wireless.

The Hamilton Property Committee refused to hear a deputation that attended their meeting to advocate license reduction.

Unless the employes consent to arbitration of the question in dispute 150,000 cotton operatives in England will be locked out to-morrow.

The funeral of George Chavez, the Peruvian aviator, who flew across the Alps, took place yesterday to a cemetery near where he fell with his machine in North Italy.

Great Britain and the United States will postpone the organization of the tribunal provided for in the fisheries award, and endeavor to reach an agreement on the questions involved through negotiations.

ANOTHER BOXER RISING FEARED

Washington, Sept. 30.—Advices have been received here from American officials in the Orient to the effect that a critical situation exists in China, and that an outbreak similar to the boxer rebellion of several years ago would not surprise the close observers of the recent trend of events.

Diplomatic officials in China have been instructed to maintain a close watch on internal conditions and to submit quick telegraphic reports as the occasion warrants.

The advices thus far received indicate that the unrest in China is so great that only a leader is needed to put the spark of life into an open rebellion.

The United States army and navy forces in the Philippines and in Asiatic waters, it was stated here yesterday, are prepared for any emergency. Four cruisers and six gunboats are available, and all of the vessels are within reach somewhere between China and the Philippines.

NEWSPAPER ARTIST MISSING

Montreal, Sept. 30.—Ralph Edward, an artist, employed on the staff of The Morning Star, has been missing since Tuesday afternoon, and there is every reason to believe that he has met his death on Lake St. Louis. On Tueesday afternoon, Richard South, a boy employed by Henry Dobell at his summer home in Dixie, saw a man rowing up the lake in the direction of Dorval Island. An hour later he picked up the boat near the Dixie shore, where it had drifted. The former occupant of the rowboat had disappeared, and subsequent search established the fact that he was not on the island.

HON. MR. FRASER LAID TO REST

New Glasgow, Sept. 30.—The funeral of the late Lieutenant-Governor, D. C. Fraser, took place yesterday afternoon with the simple ceremony of the Presbyterian Church. At the late Lieutenant-Governor's request, there was no official funeral, no display, but there was an outpouring of people from the surrounding towns. Gen. Drury, head of the Canadian forces in the maritime provinces, represented the Government and Governor-General, and Col. Page represented the Lieutenant-Governor of Quebec. Acting Premier McLean and the members of the Government were present.

WAITING WORD FROM OTTAWA

Washington, Sept. 30.—The Department of State, under President Taft's direction, has made all preparations to act as soon as word is received from Ottawa indcating the intentions of the Dominion Government concerning the proposed reciprocity negotiations.

With the return of Sir Wilfrid Laurier and the various Cabinet Ministers to the Canadian capital, and with the recent arbitration at The Hague, eliminating the Newfoundland fisheries dispute from all controversy, the ways have been cleared for negotiations for commercial agreements between Canada and Newfoundland respectively on one side and the United States on the other.

IMPRESSIVE "UNSOLVED" LIST

Another shocking murder has been added to the disgraceful record of violent crimes in this province.

It is a long list of unsolved mysteries that includes such well-remembered names as Barton township, Glory Whalen and Ethel Kinrade.

The record is already sufficiently impressive for those who respect the law, but are losing faith in its potency as an agency for the protection of human life in Ontario.

The public hope for the success of the provincial police in the Anderson case at Goderich.—Toronto News.

Perhaps we expect too much of our detective force. There are many detectives who should be hod carriers, and many policemen who should be butchers. But on the whole crime is fairly well run down in Ontario. If the criminal is not apprehended to-day he is to-morrow or next month or next year. When a man murders, when a woman destroys her illegitimate child, she takes all kinds of pains to cover the mystery up. But the law never sleeps. Sometime, somewhere, somehow, the criminal is apprehended. If not on this earth, Hell gets him.

A PICTURE NO ARTIST COULD PAINT

Who could paint a picture like the setting of last night's sun, as clothed in all its unspeakable magnificance it disappeared to rise and dispel the mists this morning. An orb which men have studied, wondered at and become confused over since the mind began, an orb of magnificence and mystery that in the summer we avoid, in winter we seek, but an orb eternal. Yes, the sun went down in full splendor last night; no artist could paint it; no poet could describe it; the blue sky, the trees on Smithtown hill; the harmony of Nature. Then came the dusk, and we saw the evening star; then came the dark, and the heavens lit up. And with their lighting we knew that the morning would bring the clear sky for the twilight told us so. And to-day the sun shines on September 30th, the last day of the month. And, say, friend, what kind of a month has it been? It will soon be gone, it's past recall. You promised, and broke your promise; you said you would slander no one; you said you would not waste your money; cut out the booze and tobacco; you would not lose your temper—but you did. Never mind, to-morrow will begin a new month, and with the month will come a host of opportunities.

GO IN AND CLOSE THE DOOR

The Harvest Festival at All Saints' church last night was timely. Half the people might have gone there to hear the music or the preaching, but the idea is good—gratitude to the God of the Harvest. We sometimes criticize our Catholic friends, but the Catholic is rare indeed who does not kneel at night and bow before the God who gave him life, who spared him through the day. "You, sir, have a fine house." I made it." You, sir, have a fine practice at law or in medicine." "You have brains, you teach or preach." "Yes, I know. I'm smart." "Fool, who gave you the ability to get money enough together to build a house, to work up a practice, to teach or preach?" Don't forget to thank that One. You needn't make a song and dance of it. Go in and close the door!

A LIE NAILED

No Clara. The Board of Health really exists. They are a walking, talking body with two eyes, two ears, a nose, and two arms and legs. It is not true they are dead. Meanwhile the garbage, the flies, the inconvenience are very live.

DID BETTER

We have been informed that Peterborough did better than was stated in these columns last night in regard to the offering for the Campbelltown, N.B, fire sufferers. Three people, whose lights have been hidden under a bushel contributed. Peterborough has 18,000 population, and Campbelltown received at least $18.00. That's a tenth of a cent per head, and no one will feel it.

THE MURDERER

The other day in Montreal Thomas Candy was sentenced to death. He was a double murderer. In sentencing him the Judge wept. Thinking of his family, his wife and his children across the ocean, the prisoner collapsed. In speaking of this the St. Thomas Times says:

The history of Timothy Candy's crime is not uncommon—except in its terrible termination in a sentence of death. How many men in positions of trust, and greater responsibility, have been led into crime—not perhaps by a desire to possess a $4.50 second-hand watch—but by a desire to "live up" to his neighbor, when he couldn't afford it—which amounts to the same thing;—or it may be lost money at the races, in an unlucky speculation, or in the gratification of a secret passion—took a small sum from safe or till. Of course he would return it! But he didn't; and the sum grew larger and larger, until repayment was out of the question. How many a suicide's grave and felon's cell are filled by men whose crimes had their birth in desire such as Candy's—an ambition to live beyond their means.

We are sorry to admit it, but its true, gospel true. The day was once that a man could have a patch on his pants and move in good society. Now he needs his trousers carefully pressed. Once we had our boots patched and were respectable, now we throw our footwear away when it needs the improvement of more leather. In the circle of the working man or the upper crust, we must keep up with our neighbor and our associates in the matter of clothes, house, horse and harness. Its a confounded shame. For the writer, one man's as good as another, black or white red or yellow, rich or poor. The clothes cut absolutely no ice, its the heart that pumps the blood, the brain that responds. The rich man may ride in his coach and be a shyster, and so may the poor, but the matter of clothes will never make or unmake the real man or woman.

The following singular wedding notice, inserted by the grandmother of the bride, appeared in the New York Times.—

MEYER-BODIN—Monday, Sept. 19, 1910, Edward Bodin to Laura Meyer. Quiet wedding, owing to objection of her grandmother, Mrs. E. E. Potter, 230 Sunnyside avenue. Omaha papers please copy.

Grandmother ought to know. She has been over the jumps. She knows all about the ardour of the first love, the ecstacies and the afterwards depression and disappointments, laughter and tears. And now, in the mellow hours of life, viewing it all, she has decreed marriage a failure, or at least that a wedding should not be made the scene of high carnival or shower rice, shoes and confetti. But love, it seems, not only laughs at locksmiths, but grandmothers, and the knot is fastened. When a girl loves she loves hard. Her lover is a perfect man, regardless of whether he has a glass eye, or a cork leg, a wig, or carries a crutch. But "They only, who have loved or hated,

Know the full meaning of mismated."

Laura Meyer may have the idea that her grandmother is fussy.

"Too many maidens think of marriage,
As of a journey in a carriage."

Laura may get her bumps, and then——

THE PROMISE BREAKERS

Canadian electors should always bear bear in mind that the Liberal party has broken practically every promise that it made when in opposition, and has gone back on every profession of principle. For instance—

It stood for purity of election.

In office it has stolen London, purchased Bonaventure, corrupted other constituencies by public works, and threatened constituencies that if they voted Conservative they would not get necessary public works. At Lethbridge, in the presence of Sir Wilfrid Laurier, Mr. E. M. Macdonald told the people that though they cruelly needed a post-office, and were absolutely entitled to it, they could not expect it as long as they voted Tory.

It demanded the reform or abolition of the Senate.

In office Sir Wilfrid Laurier maintains the Upper Chamber on the old basis. It is still the haven of partisans.

It preached economy.

In office the Liberals have trebled the annual disbursements. No previous administration began to be as reckless in the waste of public money as the Laurier Ministry. According to an exceptionally competent authority, it wastes ten millions a year in graft.

It denounced patronage.

In office it elevated the patronage system to a science. A few of the visible results were the nest of scandals in the Marine and Fisheries Department

THE ROYAL COMMISSION

That grave and learned body of men THE TECHNICAL EDUCATION COMMISSION will arrive in the city the first of the week. They are here with the object of learning the needs of the hour in the matter of education. Willie leaves school. He knows that Columbus discovered America, so does Maria. But he hasn't any idea how to handle a plane or work a lathe and the fact that he knows who discovered America, isn't worth a cuss. Maria is also wise, but can she put a patch on a hole or make a loaf of bread or keep a house tidy? "Aye! there's the rub." And it's to remove this rub and friction that this commission is touring Canada, and will then visit the old land, knowing our wants. To be a B.A. is a good thing, but oftimes to be a baker or butcher or capenter or moulder is better. To be a M.A. is fine, but often times to become a lawful mother is of more vlaue to the land.

BE BRIEF

Words are of value as they convey ideas; the fewer words the fewer words the better, if only the idea be clearly expressed. Sometimes in reading a book or listening to an address we are led to wonder why the writer, or speaker, took so long to say so little. When we come to analyze the book we find that the five hundred pages might easily and profitably have been reduced to fifty, and the tedious speech might easily have been reduced to one-fourth of its length. The power to talk without saying anything is a melancholy possibility to mortals. The tendency to prolixity seems to be unduly developed in certain persons, and it means a good deal of unnecessary weariness to those who are sure to suffer from it. It seems to grow upon people, until they can hardly tell the time of day without embodying it in a neat little speech.

One of the first lessons a young preacher or writer should learn is to get his ideas before he makes his speech or writes his article. If a man does not know what he wants to say he will probably talk a good deal before he says much. The ideas are all-important; any other kind of oratory must necessarily be of the soap-bubble variety.

We clip these excellent remarks from the Christian Guardian. Be brief. Be concise. Be terse. The advice in the Guardian is directed to the young writer and preacher. However, we have heard old preachers and middle age who have talked half an hour and said not a thing, or who have rambled miles from their text, only get back home to it in the "lastly and finally brethren" stage. We have read writers who have gone on chapter after chapter and written nothing whose ponderous editorials leave us mystified and beaten. Be brief. Be terse. The Lord's Prayer can't be beat for comprehensiveness. The story of the greatest tragedy the world has ever seen was told in simple words. We need a column to describe a hanging. The Crufixion was described in a few verses.

Polly, thus balked in her teasing, tried a new form of badinage.

"Say, the boys are all braggin' on your breadmakin'. Won't you give me your receipt?"

"Good cooks," said Parenthesis, "never give away their receipts. Brings bad luck to 'em next time."

"Aw, come now, Parenthy, tell me, an' I'll let you make my weddin' cake."

"Will you? An' let me put in whatever I want fer jokes on the boys?"

"Yep, everything goes."

"Oh, I'll give 'em somethin' to dream on, you can bet your sweet life—soap fer Fresno's finger, clothespin fer Show Low's nose, bottle of anty-fat fer Slim! It's a swop, Miss Polly!"

"Well, out with your great secret of breadmakin'."

"Well, Miss Polly, I take flour an' water an' sourin's an' a pinch of salt"—

"Flour an' water an' sourin's an' a pinch of salt!" repeated Polly, totting the list off on her fingers. "Why, so do I, an' so does every one. It must lie in the workin'. How long do you work the dough, Parenthesis?"

"It must lie in the workin'," repeated Parenthesis solemnly. "Why, I work it an' work it"— he continued with exaspering slowness.

"How long do you work it?" asked Polly impatiently.

"Till my han's look purty clean-like!" said Parenthesis, holding up his floury paws.

"Then you've got a day's work still before you!" snapped Polly, huffed at seeing herself the victim of a chaffing that she herself had begun. "I won't bother you any longer. So long!"

Parenthesis, however, desired to continue the conversation. "When is this here hitch between you an' Bud comin' off?" he asked.

Polly drew herself up proudly and, speaking with assumed haughtiness, replied, "We're figurin' on sendin' out the cards next month."

The cowboy's eyes twinkled. "Well, I'm a-goin' to give up cigaroot smokin'."

"What for?" asked Polly in surprise.

"Goin' in trainin' to kiss the bride."

"That's nice!" said Polly, beaming.

"Yep, have to take up chawin', like Bud Lane."

Polly was saved from having to answer by Sagebrush galloping up to the wagon.

"Put on your gun!" he shouted to Parenthesis.

Asking no questions, the cowpuncher obeyed his foreman. Trouble was brewing; that he could plainly see. All he had to do was to obey orders and shoot when any one tried to point a gun at him.

Turning to Polly, he cried, "Where's Mrs. Payson?"

"She come over with me, but stopped to look over the tally for those cows that are goin' with the drive."

More to himself than to Parenthesis or Polly, Sagebrush said: "I wish she'd stayed at the ranch. This range is no place fer women now. Buck McKee an' his outfit has tanked up with Gila whisky, an' they're just pawin' fer trouble."

"What's come over people lately?" asked Polly.

"It's all along of Hoover goin' away like he did an' leavin' us without a sheriff or nobody that is anybody makin' a bluff at law an' order!" cried Sagebrush.

"It's set this section back twenty years," observed Parenthesis.

"That's what it has," agreed the foreman. "Fresno reports that he found that Peruna of the Lazy K outfit slappin' the Lazy K brand on one of our calves. There ain't nobody can maverick no calves belongin' to this outfit, not so long as I'm ranch boss an' captain of the round-up. We've got to take the law in our own han's an' make an example of this bunch right now."

Sagebrush meant what he said. He was gathering re-enforcements from his own men. He knew that the boys of the Allen ranch would side with him, and he felt that there were enough lovers of law and order in the county to declare themselves against the high handed methods of Buck McKee and his followers.

"Come on, you fellows!" shouted Show Low as he rode past the wagon up the range.

"What is it now?" asked Sagebrush.

Over his shoulder Show Low shouted: "We all had a run-in with that Buck McKee's bunch. Fresno's laid out with a hole in his shoulder. Billie Nicker's cashed in. I've got some of the Triangle boys, an' we're goin' to make a clean-up."

"You ain't goin' to do nothin' unless I say so. We don't want no range

"Gee, I'll miss something if I don't hurry up!"

war. We'll git the man that did the killin'. Come on!" commanded Sagebrush.

Polly galloped after the men, saying, "Gee, I'll miss something if I don't hurry up!"

CHAPTER XVI.

WHEN Jack closed the door behind him to follow and find Dick Lane and bring him back to the woman who, the restorer believed, loved him, Echo Payson realized the supremacy over her soul—her pure ideals, her lofty sense of justice—of its tenement, the woman's body. The moral side of her desire toward Jack now became fixed in the purpose to lift him up to her own level.

Now that he had gone from her on a mission that was fulfilling this very purpose of regeneration, although she had not sent him upon it for his sake, but her own, Echo knew that, after all, she was a woman. She loved Jack Payson with the unreasoning and unrestrained passion that sways even the highest of her sex.

She very sensibly took refuge from her perplexing problems by jumping into the active life of the ranch.

Faithfully she tried to perform all that she thought Jack would have done. Her father and mother wanted her to come back to her old home until he returned. There she would have more company and fewer memories of Jack surrounding her. Each offer, each suggestion, was kindly but firmly put aside. When Jack returned she must be the first to welcome him.

Echo and her father, who was looking after his own cattle on the round-up, rode up to the chuck wagon after Parenthesis and Sagebrush crossed the valley to mete out justice to Peruna and fight out any attempts at a rescue.

Dismounting, Echo walked wearily to the fire and sat down on a box. Bravely though she tried to conceal it, the strain was beginning to tell upon her. The tears would come at times despite her efforts to fight them off. The burden was so heavy for her young shoulders to bear.

A note from Slim, written at Fort Grant with a lead pencil on a sheet of manila paper, told her briefly that he was going into the lava beds with the troops, as the Apaches were out. Dick and Jack, he wrote, were somewhere in the lava beds and he would bring them back with him. She dared not let herself think of the Apaches and the horrors of their cruelties.

"Better let me get you somethin' to eat," said her father, returning from picketing the horses.

Echo smiled wanly at her father's solicitude. "I am not hungry, dad."

Jim seated himself by the fire. He recognized his helplessness in this trouble.

"You been in the saddle since sun-up," he said. "You ain't had nuthin' to eat since breakfast. I don't see what keeps you alive."

"Hope, dad, hope. It is what we women live upon. My heart isn't here. It's out in the desert behind yon mountains—with Jack."

"There, there; don't take on so, honey."

Kneeling beside her father, she laid her head on his lap, as she did in childhood when overwhelmed with the little troubles of the hour. Looking into his eyes, she sighed: "Oh, dad, it's all so tangled. I haven't known a peaceful moment since he went away. I've sent him away into God knows what unfriendly lands, perhaps never to return, never to know how much I loved him."

Patting her head as if she were a tired child, he said: "It'll all come out right in the end. You can't never tell from the sody card what's in hock at the bottom of the deck."

Further confidences between father and daughter were interrupted by the boys of the round-up dashing up to the wagon, with Peruna in the midst of the group. Peruna had been disarmed. Dragging the prisoner from his broncho, they led him before Allen, who had risen from his seat.

"What's all this, boys?" asked the ranchman.

Sagebrush, as foreman, explained, "This here's Peruna of the Lazy K outfit."

Allen looked at the prisoner, who maintained a sullen silence. "What's he been doin'?"

"Mostly everything, but Fresno caught him red handed brandin' one of our yearlin's," cried Sagebrush.

"It's a lie!" broke in Peruna, glancing doggedly from one to another of his guards. He knew death was the penalty of the crime of which he stood accused. He felt that a stout denial would gain him time and that Buck and his outfit might come up and save him.

"Polite your conversation in the presence of a lady!" cried Parenthesis, nodding toward Echo.

"That calf was follerin' my cow," answered Peruna sullenly.

"It was follerin' one of our long horned Texas cows with the Sweetwater brand spread all over her!" shouted Show Low, moving menacingly toward the cowering Peruna.

"Fresno he calls him," continued Sagebrush, taking up the story, "an' this here bad man turns loose his battery an' wings Fresno some bad. Then little Billie Nicker comes along, an' Peruna plugs him solid."

Poor Billie had been Show Low's bunkie on many a long drive. That veteran now paid this last tribute to his friend. "Billie, who ain't never done no harm to no one."

"He reached fer his gun"— began Peruna. Sagebrush would not let him finish his lame defense.

"You shet up!" he cried. "We don't want your kind on this range, an' the quicker that's published the quicker we'll get shet of you. We're goin' to take the law in our own hands now. Come on, boys!"

Two of the boys seized Peruna, dragging him toward his horse. Echo halted them, however, with the query, "What are you going to do with this man?"

DEATH AFTER A SCRATCH

Morris Quatzam, an eleven-year-old Windsor boy fell off his bicycle and scratched his wrist. He thought nothing of the injury, but blood poison set in and he is dead.

Such incidents as these—by no means infrequent—ought to make people realize the danger that may lie even in the smallest flesh wound.

Take a simple illustration. When a knife, a rusty needle, a splinter of dirty wood, a barbed wire fence, or a thorn, scratches the hand, the latter is inoculated with germs, of which the air about us is full. Directly these germs are introduced through the breach in the skin, a battle royal ensues between them, and certain organisms in our blood.

The way to avoid serious results is to cleanse the wound and apply Zam-Buk. Zam-Buk is a powerful, yet painless germ killer, and when applied to the broken skin is absorbed into the tissue, instantly destroying the germs that spread disease and inflammation.

As soon as applied to a sore or a cut Zam-Buk stops the pain and smarting. That is why it is so popular with children.

The flesh thus soothed and purified, the wound is made perfectly healthy, and all poison and cause of festering removed. Having done this, Zam-Buk then proceeds to heal the wound or sore, and new healthy tissue is built up in a quick, painless and perfect manner.

Zam-Buk must not be confused with ordinary ointments. Zam-Buk is a unique preparation, possessing antiseptic, soothing, and healing qualities that are not to be found together in any other preparation. GIRLS' DRESS.

All Seams Allowed.

A practical model for a school dress is the one we illustrate. The sailor blouse and plaited skirt are always popular and serviceable. The blouse has two tucks at the shoulder in each side of the front, and the same in the back at each side of the closing, and the fullness is gathered into a belt at the waist. The sleeves are bishop, tucked at the hand and finished with a cuff. A sailor collar completes the blouse. The skirt is side-plaited the plaits turning away from the center-front. Cashmere, serge, cheviot are all good for a dress of this kind, with a trimming of braid or bands of contrasting material. The pattern (5136) is cut in sizes 6 to 12 years. To make the dress in medium size will require 3⅛ yards of material 36 inches wide, or 2½ yards 44 inches wide, with 1⅜ yards of contrasting goods 27 inches wide.

The above pattern can be obtained by sending 10 cents to the office of this paper.

FIRST RECTOR OF CHURCH PREACHED HARVEST SERMON

The interior of All Saints' Church was a picture of harvest joy last night with its rich and beautiful decorations. It was the occasion of the annual harvest festival, and every nook and corner of the church was profusely adorned with grains of the field and the fruits of the orchard. An effective idea was employed in the decorating of the aisles with high stalks of corn, from which were strung banners of oats in profusion. A very large congregation attended. The church was so crowded that chairs had to be placed in the aisle.

Service was conducted by the rector and Rev. C. Carpenter and Rev. Dr. Langfeldt. The sermon was preached by Rev. W. L. Armitage, of Picton, the first rector of All Saints'.

The choir was heard to splendid advantage in the anthem "While the Earth Remaineth."

Rev. Mr. Armitage prefaced his sermon by expressing the great gladness it gave him to be with his old friends, in the old city, and in the old church.

BEWARE, LEST WE FORGET

Deuteromy, 8th chapter 11th verse "Beware that thou forget not the Lord thy God in not keeping His commandments, and His judgments, and His statues, which I command thee this day."

This was the text that formed the basis of a timely and eloquent sermon. Rev. Mr. Armitage referred to the fact that the congregation of All Saints' were leaving the old church for a new and more commodious one, and told them it was well to remember their earlier progress at All Saints', and that God had been with them, for fear they might think in the time to come that the new was the only thing.

The new had such an attraction that it seemed to carry with it the idea that the past held nothing. He hoped the occupancy of the new church would carry with it a greater desire for the things of God, and the teaching to walk in the footsteps of the Master.

But we must not forget the blessings of the past.

Could the children of Israel forget? Could they forget the bondage in Egypt? Could they forget that God gave them one that led them triumphant out of Egypt? Could they forget the parting of the waters of the Red Sea? Could a people forget these things at that time it was impressed upon them that God was their leader, and that they were coming into the sunshine of the land that was flowing with milk and honey? But did they forget? The scriptures showed that they had forgot God, He that had been with them in the promised land, and had done wondrous things for them.

There were many things which we never forgot. Some of these were good, but many were evil. We remembered the injuries and insults, but forgot the mercies and blessings. The Son of God had looked up to His Father and said, "Forgive them, for they know not what they doeth."

The preacher said he trusted the atmosphere was filled with thanksgiving. The hymns, the prayers and the service had been thanksgiving to God, and we must not forget the Lord of Harvest, who said "While the earth remaineth seed time and harvest shall not cease."

Dear Sir,—I have the honor to intimate to you that the Royal Commission on Industrial Training and Technical Education proposes to visit places according to the itinerary outlined in the sheet which is enclosed herewith. On behalf of the commission I am to express our earnest desire and hope that the work of the commission may be fruitful of benefit to each of the localities which it is able to visit, as well as to the Dominion of Canada as a whole.

Our commission will give particular attention to the manufacturing industries, to agriculture, to domestic occupations, to mining, to the fisheries, to the lumber interests, to the building trades, to the transportation services, as well as to the technical training required for commercial operations.

I should be grateful for any information or suggestions or lists of names of institutions or establishments which you may kindly cause to be furnished for the use of the commission, and which would doubtless assist it to ascertain the needs and present equipment of your locality respecting industrial training and technical education.

The commission will also make inquiry into (a) the needs of existing industries in respect of labor (b) the quality of labor which is available, and (c) the needs of such labor for industrial training and technical education. The commission will appreciate your co-operation in any manner which you may consider appropriate regarding any or all of these matters.

A reply to this might be addressed to me at Ottawa.

I have the honor to be, Sir,
Your most obedient servant,
JAS. W. ROBERTSON.
Chairman.

AN INTERESTING SPEAKER

Mr. J. L. Lovell Will Address Young People's Missionary Institute Which Meets Here Oct. 10, 11, 12—Delegates Sending in Their Names in Large Numbers.

The prospects are that a large attendance will mark the Young People's Missionary Institute that will meet in Peterborough on October 10th, 11th and 12th, in St. Paul's and George St. Methodist churches. Delegates are sending in their names in large numbers. There is reason for a large attendance in the personnel of the speakers.

One of these is Rev. J. L. Lovell Murray, M.A., educational secretary of the Student Volunteer Movement of North America. He occupies one of the most important positions among the Christian leaders of North America. He is the educational secretary of the Student Volunteer Movement, and has as his field the students of the Universities of North America. Through his work the students of the colleges are influenced in their relation to the world wide Missionary Movement. Mr. Murray is a Canadian by birth, a son of the Rev. Dr. Murray, late of Kincardine. He was educated in Toronto University and took a theological course in Knox College. He was in the active ministry but a short time when his attractive qualities and energy brought him to public notice.

He is regarded as one of the most important leaders in the coming institute, and his messages, given in his own attractive manner, will be an inspiration to all who enjoy the privilege of hearing him.

MR J. LOVELL MURRAY M. A.
He is Educational Secretary of Studen Volunteer Movement and Will Visit Peterboro on October 12th to Address the Young People's Missionary Institute.

THE PROPOSED ELECTRIC LINE

Mayor Mulholland has received a communication from Mr. A. E. Honeywell, re the Toronto and Eastern Railway. A map of the proposed route for the main line from Toronto to Cobourg is enclosed. It also shows branch lines running northerly from Port Hope to Peterborough and from Oshawa to Lindsay. Application has been made to the Minister of Railways and Canals for the approval of this route and the matter will come up at Ottawa on October 4th.

A special meeting of the town council will be held this evening to appoint a deputation to attend this meeting at Ottawa. This is a very important matter for Port Hope and we are pleased to see the Council taking it so well in hand.—Port Hope Guide.

STEADY GROWTH OF CHIMES FUND

The chimes fund is now reaching the last stage of its interesting progress. Over $4,500 is now enlisted.

The chief feature of yesterday was a cheque for $10, voted by the Belmont Club for the enterprise, and given in the most kindly way. The donation is much appreciated. From the Rapid Tool Co. $4.75 was received—a goodly sum in proportion to the number. Several kind personal contributions including one of $10 were handed in yesterday. A handsome joint gift was received this morning from Victoria, B.C., from Lieut.-Col. H. C. Rogers, Mr. D. M. Rogers and Mrs. H. Robertson. The formerly highly esteemed postmaster of Peterborough expressed his warm sympathy with the wide support being given the movement.

It is to be hoped that a substantial patronage will be given the entertainment being held this evening at St. John's school house in behalf of the fund, which now stands at $4,534.65.

SPORTS AT THE Y. M. C. A.

RUGBY — ATHLETICS

There will be a meeting of Y.M.C.A. members in the club room next Tuesday night to organize a rugby club. There is some excellent material available among the members of the "Y" and a good team can be selected to represent the association on the "gridiron." A hearty welcome is extended to every member or anyone wishing to join with us on Tuesday evening at 8 p.m.

The Howden and Eastwood athletic trophys will be competed for Saturday, October 15th. The events will be announced in a few days. The Eastwood trophy will be for boys who have not yet reached their 18th birthday. The scoring will be by points, each competitor will get credit for his performance in each event, and the man with the highest number of points will be declared the winner. Any further particulars will be cheerfully given by Mr. Thompson, the physical director.

FRED WHITCROFT IS HEARD FROM ONCE AGAIN

Says Edmonton Will Send Another Team This Way for the Stanley Cup.

Edmonton, Sept. 29.—Fred. J. Whitcroft, who is "rawnching," at Wabamun and incidentally taking on flesh from leading the simple life, was approached yesterday as to the prospects for a professional team in Edmonton this winter.

"Well," said Fred, lolling back in a comfortable leather chair in the King Edward rotunda, "there will be a team go east, but everything is being kept very dark at present, and I am not at liberty to divulge the names of the players."

"Where is the money coming from?" was the next question from the inquisitive reporter.

This drew one of Fred's famous winks and a mysterious look appeared upon his face. So the source of money is also one of the facts that is to be kept secret for the present.

Whit is at present undecided whether he will don skates again or not. He has entirely recovered from the effects of his accidents last year in Renfrew. Officers of the Renfrew club have approached him already this fall, trying to get his monicker to a contract, but Fred is coy and may be holding back in order that he can lead another Edmonton Stanley Cup expedition into the promised land of hockey.

"Whit" had a letter from Frank Patrick this week, and the sterling player has practically made up his mind to sign with Renfrew for another season.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

The Review does not hold itself responsible for opinions expressed by its correspondents

To the Editor of the Review.

Sir,—The following extract regarding Vancouver, B.C, from the correspondence of that great English non-conformist journal, "The British Weekly," will be of interest:

Yours, &c.,
CITIZEN.

If one were to ask some of the leaders of local politics what were the further causes of its prosperity, they would at once refer to the "single tax," and the principle of taxing unearned increment on land. Vancouver has been working with these partially for the last fifteen years, and now has adopted them without reserve. All the municipal services, and they are more numerous and better performed than in many English towns, are supported by the proceeds of a tax which is called "single" because it is a tax on land alone, not on the land and buildings. And the land is reassessed at short intervals, so that the community loses little time in drawing its share of the enhanced value which, according to the theory, is largely due to the growth and energy of the community itself. Other towns have adopted the system wholly or in part. Prince Rupert, the destined terminus of the Grand Trunk Pacific, has adopted it from the beginning. But none of the others approaches Vancouver in importance; none is more satisfied with its success. The tax is at the rate of twenty-two mills, which works out at about sixpence in the pound on the capital value of the land. The system is attracting attention and enquiry from economists and municipal governments all over the continent. The official reply to enquiries is that the "Vancouver experiment," which, indeed, may no longer be regarded as an experiment at all, has resulted in such a rapid upbuilding of the city that no one, not even the extensive land owner, has any desire to return to the former non-progressive scheme of taxation. The benefit to the city is seen in part in the determination of the owners of land to put it to the best possible use. Undeterred by the fear that the capital cost of improvements will become the basis of future assessment, they build with a new freedom; they readily "scrap" old buildings, and already much of the old property in the heart of the city has been replaced by structures of a very different kind. On the other hand, those who are not prepared to make economic use of their sites are discouraged from "holding them up." Urban land that is unproductive to the community soon becomes too expensive for the owner to keep. In some directions the system works inequitably. Churches and charitable institutions situated in industrial districts may find their sites assessed on industrial values when they have no corresponding opportunity of increasing their revenue. If they are not to be driven from such districts, some modification in their favor will be required. But while it is difficult to apportion the credit for Vancouver's prosperity among the various contributing causes, the voice of the local authorities would claim a large share for the "single tax."—The British Weekly.

Hung Himself In Root House.

Wingham, Sept. 30.—Yesterday Donald Ross, a young farmer of about 30 years of age, who resided with his mother and sister in the Township of Kinless, near Whitechurch, committed suicide by hanging. The young man left home to assist a neighbor threshing, and being wanted, it was found that he had not been there. A search was instituted and the dead body was found suspended from a beam in the roothouse. He must have been dead some hours. No reason can be assigned, as he was of a very cheerful disposition.

Made False Reports.

Montreal, Sept. 30.—The ex-Convict Woods, who, with his chum, O'Sullivan, has been employed by Secretary Roberts of the Dominion Alliance to watch the hotels who sell whisky after hours, had a bad comedown yesterday, having been sent to the King's bench for trial, charged with making false reports against places they had never visited. It transpired that Woods had deceived his employers at every turn.

Patten Left Large Fortune.

Chicago, Sept. 30.—George W. Patten, the millionaire grain operator, who died Wednesday night of tuberculosis at the home of his brother, James A. Patten, in Evanston, left a fortune estimated at $5,000,000, the greater part of which, it is said, will be left to public charities, including a large donation for the furtherance of the anti-tuberculosis campaign.

A Softened Expression.

"Father," said the small boy, "what is a 'euphemism?'"

"It is something, my son, that enables a man to say he is a free lance instead of admitting that he is out of a job."—Washington Star.

CONVENTION IN SESSION

Interesting Proceedings at Mark Street Church.—Evening Meeting.

At the evening session of the Women's Missionary Societies' convention yesterday the chair was taken by Rev. C. H. Coon.

A selection by the choir was thoroughly enjoyed.

Rev. I. Couch delivered a most interesting address. He spoke of missions as a great success, and of the position the W. M. S. holds with regard to it. No woman could afford not to be a member of the W.M.S. He emphasized the great need of the gospel in heathen lands, for without the knowledge and love of Christ they would die. As Jesus Christ came to save us from eternal death, He came to save them also, and it lies with us to send it to them.

The rest of the programme was as follows;

Mission Band selection by nine little girls.

Solo—Mrs. (Dr.) Middleton.

Address—Judge Huycke.

Selection by the choir.

In closing Mrs. Moore moved a vote of thanks to all those, who, in any way, had helped to make the convention the success which it had proved to be.

Rev. Mr. Coon closed the meeting with prayer.

LOCAL ARTISTS AT BOBCAYGEON

Bobcaygeon, Sept. 29—A grand concert was held at Bobcaygeon last evening to mark the close of a successful fair. The town hall was crowded to suffocation a large number being unable to gain admittance. A galaxy of artists had been engaged for the entertainment, and the programme provided was an excellent one. Mr R. J. Devey, organist of St. John's church, Peterborough, was the pianist, and Miss Lavina Hallihan, of Peterborough, soprano soloist, contributed a number of selections which stamped her as an artist of the highest order. She leaves on Oct 16th to complete her musical education in New York. Mr Lee, also of Peterborough, tenor soloist, delighted the audience with his vocal numbers, as did also Mr. Joe Halpany, from the same city, in story, song and recitation. Mr Wilson, of Toronto, was the comedian engaged, and he carried the house by storm.

Prisoners Too Comfortable.

Made Her Funeral Pyre.

St. Louis, Sept. 30.—Kneeling in the midst of a bonfire, which she had made of pages of religious books and magazines and saturated with coal oil by her own hands, Mamie McCarthy, 18 years old, slowly burned to death in the rear of her home Wednesday, while she prayed.

An Important Feature in Your Stove is a Well Proportioned Flue

If, because your range is not satisfactory, you are advised to pull down your chimney and build a taller one, or put a stack on the one you have—or something else that involves expense and trouble—

Don't do it until you have examined your Range flues—where nine out of ten times the cause of failure lies.

HAPPY THOUGHT

If your flues are too large, the products of combustion are carried quickly past the point where they should be efficient. Result—an enormous fire to do little work.

Whereas—if the flues are undersize—the oven refuses to work, and the natural result is dissatisfaction.

In a "Happy Thought" Range this feature has been thoroughly studied and mastered—there is no trouble of this kind whatsoever.

SIX NEWSPAPER MEN

JIM PURCELL IN BRANDON SUN

When the hand of death fell upon E. King Dodds, at Toronto, the other day, the soul of the last of probably the greatest sextette of newspaper men that Canada has ever known went out to its Maker.

In 1878 and for a few years later, King Dodds, Jim Fahey, Alex. Pirie, Andrew Pattulo, Ned Clarke and Nicholas Flood Davin were the journalistic stars of Ontario and Canada.

All six had been on the press gallery at Ottawa together or upon the stump in the fierce political battles when the contending forces were lined up behing Sir John Macdonald and Hon. Alexander Mackenzie.

Ed. Farrar was shaping the policy of one party or the other in those days and was probably the greatest force on the newpaper end of the political game. But, Davin, Pirie, Pattullo, Fahey, Clarke and King Dodds were a coterie of brilliant men who fought the battles on the platform or in the press with all the energy that each could muster and daily met between the rounds in a social way to chat about the features of the struggle.

They were the closest of friends, fair fighters and every one of them a "white man" in every sense of the term.

Brilliant, brainy and clever as these men were, none of them ever got beyond being a pack horse for his party, and probably all suffered the pang of disappointed hope.

They made and unmade members of parliament, and governments, too perhaps; for in those days cash or graft was not the factor in politics that it is to-day. By their oratory or brilliant writing in countless political contests these men turned victory into defeat or defeat into victory —and someone else got whatever there was in it.

Any one of these six men was of cabinet calibre—and even better than that, when one considers the average of those who have one seats on the treasury benches at Toronto and Ottawa.

Jim Fahey was probably the greatest paragrapher and one of the wittiest speakers Canada has produced. He was the first to disappear from the scene. It was said that rye got him, and perhaps it did, but Fahey good soul that he was, harmed no man.

Davin, his spirit broken by disappointment shot himself in his room in a Winnipeg hotel.

Pattullo, the maker of the greatest country newspaper in Canada, the Woodstock Sentinel-Review, suicided in London, England.

Ned Clarke succumbed to a sudden illness at his home in Toronto.

Alex. Pirie, a prince of good fellows, warm hearted, an eloquent after dinner speaker and one of the cleverest of writers, driven to despair by domestic troubles and political ingratitude, put a bullet through his brain in his home at Dundas.

And now, King Dodds, the silver-tongued orator of thirty years ago, and one of the truest of friends of legitimate sport, after five years of blindness has crossed the bar.

Each man of the six gave the best that was in him for his party and his country. Countless thousands owe to one or other of them a debt of gratitude, for what each did was not done for himself, but for someone else.

Bright, clever, brainy, true and great Canadians were Fahey, Davin, Pattullo, Pirie, Clarke and King Dodds. Let us foret how some of them died, for we know nothing of their heartaches; but some of us saw their work and know something about what they did, and we know that the world is better because these men lived.

DEPARTING BASS SOLOIST HONORED BY THE CHOIR

The choir, the music committee and representatives of the congregation assembled last evening in the Sunday school room of Murray street church, to honor and bid farewell to Mr. Ferguson, the bass soloist of the choir, who left on the midnight last night for Montreal and from thence to Scotland, the land of his birth.

Mr. Ferguson had not the slightest inkling as to the meaning of the gathering, and at the conclusion of a banquet that delighted all present, Mr. Cunningham read the following address and Dr. Scott, with a short speech in which he paid tribute to Mr. Ferguson's faithfulness and zeal for the success of the choir, presented him with a plush case containing a handsome Elgin gold watch.

The address was as follows;

Dear Fellow Worker,—We have asked you to be our guest this evening, before taking the midnight train for Montreal en route for Scotland, that we may have an opportunity of expressing our sincere regret at your departure, and also our appreciation of the splendid service that you have rendered for some time in our choir.

You have always been willing, cheerful and capable. Both the members of the choir, as well as the congregation, will miss your splendid work, and we desire to express the hope that while in your native land, however much you may delight in the hills and the heather, that your mind will revert frequently to the land of the maple leaf, and that it may not be long until we have you amongst us once more, in the church that is so dear to us, and that we trust has a goodly place in your own heart. Will you kindly accept this gold watch as a reminder of our fellowship with you. As often as you look at it let it speak for your friends on this side of the sea.

Signed on behalf of the choir,

J. P. CUNNINGHAM,
W. D. SCOTT, M.D.,
W. J. DUNLOP,
Music Committee.

The presentation, as intended, was a complete surprise. Mr. Ferguson as he rose to reply, had great difficulty in expressing his gratitude and appreciation to the gathering. However, in a few earnest words he conveyed his heartfelt thanks to them and said that he would never forget the feelings of the choir, which had influenced the bestowal of the gift. It would be a token of remembrance that he would always carry with him in the land of the heather across the sea.

Mr. Geo. Martin next said a few words on behalf of the male members of the choir and said that they would much miss Mr. Ferguson's splendid voice in sustaining the bass section of the choir.

Mrs. Miller, soprano soloist and choir leader, on behalf of the entire choir paid a fine tribute to the departing member's cheerfulness and willingness to comply with any of her requests, and was always pleasant and agreeable.

Similar words expressive of the regret which all felt by Mr. Ferguson's departure were spoken by Mrs. Broad, Mr. Cunningham, Mrs Hunt and Mr. Green.

Mrs. Miller volunteered a solo, and the gathering all rose to their feet, formed a ring, and joined heartily in the singing of "Auld Lang Syne."

tIl is rumoured that Mr. Ferguson's intention in going to Scotland is to become a happy benedict.

MERRILY RING THE BELLS

Secial to the Review.

Havelock, Sept. 30. — St. John's church, decorated beautifully for the occasion, was the scene of a pretty wedding at 1.30 o'clock on Thursday, when the marriage of Miss Eva Lancaster, of town, to Mr. John Moffat, Toronto, was solemnized by the Rev. C. W. Holdsworth, B.A.

The bride, who was given away by her brother, Mr. T. P. Lancaster, looked sweet and graceful in her wedding gown of ivory duchess satin trimmed with bands of silver cloth and embroidered in seed pearls. Her veil which was of tulle was caught with a wreath of orange blossoms and she carried a white kid prayer book with ribbon markers.

Miss Verna Cole, of Sudbury, attended as bridesmaid in mauve satin cotcil carrying white roses. Mr. Earl Lancaster of Port Hope, brother of the bride, assisted the groom. The groom's gift to the bride was a beautiful mink muff, to the bridesmaid a handsome signet ring and to the groomsman a pair of gold cuff links.

A dainty wedding dinner was afterwards held at the bride's home, which was handsomely decorated with white mums, asters and smilax.

The bride, who has resided in Havelock for a number of years, and who is well and favorably known, was the recipient of numerous and costly gifts. Among them was a handsome quarter-cut oak hall rack and mirror from St. John's church congregation of which she was a member, a Newcombe piano from her brother, Mr. T. P. Lancaster, and a quartered oak dining room set from the groom's parents.

Mr. and Mrs. Moffat left on the 4 o'clock afternoon train for a short honeymoon the bride travelling in a pretty suit of navy blue with brown beaver hat and mink muff. The young couple will reside in Belleville, where the groom is a member of the C.N.R. survey staff.

Among the out-of-town guests were Mr. and Mrs. McDonald and son Master Gordon, Mrs. A. Ormsley and daughter, Miss Margaret, Mrs. John Moffat, Miss Gertrude Moffat, Miss Velma Moffat, and Mrs. E. A. Boyce, of Toronto, and Miss K. Mahoney, of Rochester, N.Y.

SIGN OF THE GOLDEN LION

A PURSE OF GOLD FOR MISS HALLIHAN

Presentation and Address, by St. Peter's Choir and Friends,

The choir of St. Peter's Cathedral and their friends, which made a large and happy gathering, sprang a surprise on Miss Lavina Hallihan last evening, at the rooms of St. Peter's Total Abstinence Society, when, as that gifted young vocalist concluded a beautiful rendition of "Home Sweet Home," as an encore to "Senora," Miss Josephine Delaire, on behalf of the choir and friends, read an address, and Miss Maggie Doherty made the presentation of a purse of gold, the amount of which was one hundred dollars.

Miss Hallihan leaves shortly for New York, where she will take up vocal studies, with a view of attaining that high position which her host of Peterborough friends wish for, and feel that she will meet with success.

With St. Peter's choir she has been identified during a period of twelve years. Her best efforts she always put forth, and in her departure a blank will be made in that organization which will not soon be filled.

The address was as follows—

Dear Lavina,—It is with the deepest regret that we learn of your intended departure for a larger field, to prepare yourself for a calling which seems to hold such bright prospects for you.

Mere words fail to express how much you will be missed in both our choir and in the church, where you have served so well.

We wish you to accept this slight token of our esteem as a remembrance, not that we feel you will soon forget us, but to show some little appreciation of your many kind acts.

We ask you again to please accept this, with our best wishes for a bright and successful future.

The Choir and Friends.

The presentation was made amidst hearty applause, and in a graceful acknowledgement Miss Hallihan said that she would always do her best in her new sphere of work, and that she would be encouraged in this by the remembrances of her friends, and the kindness shown by them.

Short addresses followed by His Lordship Bishop O'Connor, Rev. Father McColl and Messrs. McFarlane, Wilson and F. D. Kerr. Each of the speakers referred in glowing terms to the guest of the evening.

Others taking part in a short programme were the Glee Club, Mr. Geo. Lynch and Harry Quinlan.

Dancing made up the remainder of the evening's entertainment.

Two euchre contests played earlier in the evening were won, by Miss Mamie Theobald and Mr. Jas. McNichol. In the contest for the gentlemen, Mr. Frank Hammerly won the "booby" prize.

Refreshments were served by the ladies in their most approved style.

To-night Miss Hallihan will appear twice in the programme of the 57th Band concert at the armories. This will be her last public appearance.

GOOD CROWD OF MEN AND SUCCESSFUL WORK

RECEPTION AT Y.M.C.A.

One of the most interesting evenings yet held in connection with this year's work in the Y.M.C.A, was held in the building last night. As had been announced there was nothing unusual except an unusual number of spectators looking on. The idea of the "open house" was to give the men who were thinking of joining, an exhibition of what the Association can and will do for them during the season which is now about to open up.

There were the two usual classes in the gymnasium, the Business Boys' class under the direction of Mr. G Galley at 6.15, and the Intermediates under Mr. Thompson's direction at 8.15 The latter is promising to be one of the best classes on the gymnasium floor this season. They might be called "Thompson's Pets," for they do their work with precision and good form.

After the classes there was an exhibition of swimming in the big plunge bath, and also an exhibition of life saving. This was under the direction of the swimming instructor, Mr. W O. Taylor, and created great interest among the spectators.

The bowling alleys were kept on the go all evening, and some very good scores were run up by some of the men.

The billiard table was also the scene of a couple of good games of American billiards.

Without doubt, however, the busiest place in the building was the office of the General Secretary. That officer and his assistant was kept busy taking in new members and explaining what would be on the season's programme in the way of educational work. Forty new members were added to the roll last evening. and a large number of the men were so favorably impressed that they signified their intention of joining next pay day.

After the classes were dismissed a group of the members gathered in the parlor around the piano and made the walls resound with their songs. This brings out the possibility of organizing a Glee Club, an organization which is badly needed in this same old city of Peterborough. There is plenty of vocal talent among the young men, and it only requires such an organization as this to bring it out. This matter will have the careful consideration of the officers immediately, and before the season is out the public will be favored with a concert by the Y.M.C.A. Glee Club.

The whole reception emphasized the adaptability of the Association to meet the needs of young men in any community. This the officers are determined to prove during this season.
